Doubled Gas Levy, Altered Privilege Tax Urged in D.C.

Road Fund Use Asked
Committee Plan Hit
Business vs. Consumer
More U. S. Aid Sought

By James D. Secrest.

Renewal of the business privilege tax and a doubling of the gasoline tax, with the revenue to be diverted from the highway fund, were proposed yesterday to the District Tax Advisory Committee at the climax of a hearing on Capitol Hill.

After half a score of scheduled witnesses for the two-day inquiry had been heard, a member of the committee remarked that the only unity that was apparent was that nobody wanted a tax which would touch his own pocketbook.

Spokesmen for organized business groups were unanimous in their approval of a sales tax, while representatives of consumer organizations were emphatically opposed to a sales levy and insistent upon an income tax or a revenue plan "based on ability to pay."

The committee's own dual tax proposal was assailed by both sides despite the fact that it included a sales tax and an income levy that would apply to returns from business or investments.

Prefers Privilege Tax

Retention of the business privilege tax, due to expire June 30, was suggested as an alternative to any form of income levy by A. Julian Brylawski, president of the District Council on Municipal Affairs, which, he said, represented a membership of 50,000.

The 2-cent increase in the gasoline tax and diversion of $2,500,000 to the general revenue fund were recommended by Rufus Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association.

Brylawski and Lusk both lauded the sales tax, however, and Lusk urged a reduction in the real estate levy of $1.75. They agreed that the intangible personal property tax should be repealed as recommended by the committee.

Brylawski, who is head of the District Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, said the business privilege tax is now inequitable and should be amended if re-enacted.

"It was drafted by men who knew little or nothing about business," he said.

Profit Margin Too Low

He declared adoption of a graduated scale in the 1939 act, under which the full two-fifths of 1 per cent tax applies only to firms who operate on a 3 per cent or larger margin of gross profit leaves nearly all Washington firms paying the full tax. Most firms, he pointed out, cannot operate at a smaller margin of profit in the District.

The proposed income tax on corporations and investors, he charged, is unworkable and incapable of producing enough revenue to offset the loss from repeal of the intangible personal property tax. It would affect less than 2 per cent of the District population, he added.

Lusk told the committee the $4,000,000 deficit in the 1940 District budget could be met by a 2-cent increase in the gasoline tax and a real estate tax of $1.63. The former would raise $2,500,000 and the latter $1,500,000.

Gas Tax "Not Sacred"

He pointed out that since the increase in the gasoline tax from $1.50 to $1.75, apartment vacancies have increased greatly and countless residents have moved from Washington into nearby Maryland or Virginia.

"The whole District tax structure and the financial welfare of the city are bound up in fair real property taxation," he said. "It now produces almost 60 per cent of the total general fund revenues."

Explaining his advocacy of the gas tax hike, Lusk said: "I don't think the gasoline tax is any sacred cow. The gas tax is one of the simplest methods of raising additional rev-

3 in Family Hurt In 3 Ways in Day

Intra, Italy, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—The Perotti family decided tonight November 28 was a thoroughly unlucky day.

Luigi Perotti, 29, drove his car out of a driveway and ran over his aunt, 51-year-old Caterina Arcari. His sister, Andreina, 25, jumped on a bicycle to rush to the hospital, and was struck by an automobile.

Luigi loaded the injured aunt and sister into his car and started for the hospital. A truck smashed into the car, adding Luigi to the injured list.

Duke Accepts Trojans' Bid To Rose Bowl

Southerners Unbeaten
U. S. C. Has Lost Twice
Tied Bears for Title

The crisp, nervous chattering of a telegraph key last night definitely settled the issue of Rose Bowl opponents for January 2, when Duke University accepted the University of Southern California's invitation to represent the East in the annual grid classic.

WADE

Unbeaten, untied and unscored on, the Blue Devils, who closed their campaign last Saturday with a 7-0 victory over a mighty Pitt eleven, accepted the bid with the alacrity of a quick-kick. The Trojans had been designated as the host club earlier in the day by a secret vote of the Pacific Coast Conference, winning out over California, cochampion of the conference.

U. S. C. Lost 2 Games

Southern California dropped two games, the inaugural to Alabama, 19-7, and a gruelling 7-6 struggle to Washington. It whipped California, 13-7, and culminated its season with a crushing 42-7 triumph over U. C. L. A. Its other victims were Oregon State, 7-0; Ohio State, 14-0; Washington State, 19-0; Stanford, 13-2, and Oregon, 31-7.

This will be the Trojans' fifth trip to the Rose Bowl, and their fourth appearance in the colorful classic under Coach Howard Jones' tutelage. Twice they swamped Jock Sutherland's Pittsburgh Panthers, beating teams regarded as virtually unconquerable.

U. S. C. turned back Pitt the first time in 1930 by an almost unbelievable 47-14 margin, and the second time in 1933 by a 35-0 score. Its other victims were Tulane, which bowed in a thrilling see-saw battle by 21-12 in 1932 and Penn State.

First Time for Duke

This will be Duke's initial appearance in a post-season game.

The Bowl will be a familiar sight to the critical eyes of Wallace Wade, however, for the Duke coach took three Alabama teams West while coaching at Tuscaloosa. His 1922 Tidesmen nosed out the University of Washington, 20-19, and in 1927 tied Stanford, 7-7. His last team swamped Washington State by a 24-0 score in 1931.

Duke squeezed through to victories by one touchdown margins in no less than five games this year, winning by 7-0 scores from Colgate, Wake Forest, North Carolina State and Pittsburgh, and by a 6-0 count from Georgia Tech. Its other triumphs were at the expense of Virginia Tech, 18-0; Davidson, 27-0; North Carolina, 14-0, and Syracuse, 21-0.

Warrings Charge U.S. Broke Faith

'Immunity Promised'
Hint War on Racket
Say Books Opened
Sherr Ordered Freed

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Emmitt Warring was promised immunity from prosecution by the Government if he agreed to surrender his "numbers racket" record books and papers for income tax inspection, it was charged in District Court yesterday.

As conspiracy proceedings were resumed against the Warring brothers and their tax expert, Gordon L. R. Sadur, Harry Whelan, defense counsel, said Emmitt was given "absolute assurance" by Internal Revenue officials that books and records of his "business" were wanted for the sole purpose of determining income tax assessments.

"Emmitt was told," declared Whelan, "that the Government would not prosecute him for so-called 'numbers' violations. He was assured that his books were wanted for the purpose of computing income taxes and not for the purpose of instituting prosecution against his business."

Says Officials Angered

Everything was conducted in "good faith" as far as the Warrings were concerned, Whelan said, and Emmitt "co-operated and offered every support" by turning over his records to the Internal Revenue Bureau.

"The present conspiracy proceedings," Whelan thundered to the jury of 11 men and one woman, "were instituted, not because the Government was interested in adjusting the tax matter, but because Emmitt refused to talk and name the policemen to whom alleged 'protection' money was paid."

He intimated that Federal and local authorities were angered by Emmitt's refusal to explain in detail items of "protection" payments appearing on his books and decided to "get him" by charging conspiracy to defraud the Government.

Calls "Protection" Necessary

Whelan's reference to "protection" payoffs was one of several such references which cropped up repeatedly throughout yesterday's session of the trial.

Sadur, certified public accountant and co-defendant with Emmitt, Leo and Charles (Rags) Warring, took the stand in his own behalf and admitted he deducted "protection" payments listed in the Warring books from the taxable income.

"I considered such payments were necessary expenses in the Warring business," Sadur said.

During a conference with Internal Revenue agents, however, Sadur said he was told the "protec-

Dewey Ally Wins Hilles Post, Dissolving G.O.P. Discord

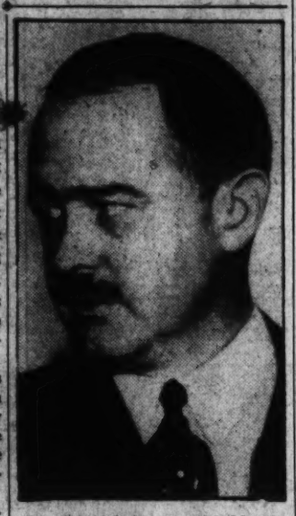
On National Committee
N. Y. Conservatives Fail
Election Is Assured

Jubilant Republican National Committee members, gathering here for their first meeting since the November elections brought their party widespread gains, last night saw one threat of discord at their meeting dissolved, as Kenneth F. Simpson, of New York, was assured election to the committee to succeed Charles D. Hilles, resigned.

Simpson, who managed Thomas Dewey's almost successful campaign for election as Governor of New York, had been nominated by the New York State central committee for Hilles' seat on the national Committee.

Fire was opened on him, however, by elements of the party in New York. While in general the opposition was said to come from conservatives, Simpson's reported willingness to co-operate with the forces of Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia and the American Labor Party was said to be the real cause of the fight to prevent his being seated.

His opponents brought about a meeting at Albany last night of the State executive committee for the purpose of asking the State central committee to rescind its nomination of Simpson, and asking the national committee to postpone action on his selection until the State committee could meet.



KENNETH SIMPSON

At a late hour word came that liberals on the executive committee had defeated the move after a heated discussion. Simpson's election to the national body thereupon became a matter of course.

Bandit Couple Shoots Way Out of Trap

3 Hostages Freed
Wanted in Bank Holdup
3 States in Manhunt

By the Associated Press.

Paw Paw, Mich., Nov. 28.—Federal agents and police of three States searched tonight for a man and woman, suspected bank robbers, who kidnapped three men during a wild flight following a midnight gun fight with Michigan State police.

The couple, both wounded in the skirmish with police in which they disabled the pursuers' car with gunfire, were heavily armed and, their abducted victims said, carried a quantity of dynamite in their automobile.

Releasing their captives unharmed in northwestern Indiana, the unidentified pair resumed their frantic dash, presumably into Illinois.

The couple, believed to be the same man and woman who robbed a Brookings, S. Dak., bank of $17,000, abducted two farmers and an automobile salesman after shooting their way out of the police trap in Michigan. During the flight the gunwoman ordered one of the captives, Henry Matty, 45, into the automobile's luggage compartment because she feared three prisoners were more than she could guard.

When a freight train blocked the highway, Matty unloosened the door of the compartment and dropped out of the car. The two other prisoners were released as soon as Matty's escape was discovered. They said the bandit pair had three rifles, the dynamite and a sawed-off shotgun.

Michigan State police said they believed the gunman to be Benny Dickson, 27, who eluded a police trap Thursday at Topeka, Kans., in which 48 shots were fired at him.

G.O.P. Liberal Can Win in '40, Norris Asserts

But Expects Reaction
Perhaps New Deal Split
Then Third Term

By Robert C. Albright.

Senator George W. Norris, independent Roosevelt Republican, said yesterday the President will have to run for a third term if his program is defeated and might even head a New Deal third party ticket if he refused the nomination.

Norris said Republicans "have it in their hands to elect a President in 1940 if they nominate a real liberal." But in the same breath he declared: "They won't do it—they will nominate a reactionary."

"There might be a revolution in the next Democratic convention, just as there was in the Republican convention of 1912 when Teddy Roosevelt was forced to run as a Bull Moose candidate," the Nebraska independent told reporters.

"If that should happen again, and if it should also happen that Republicans are controlled by the reactionary wing and they nominate a well-known reactionary, Roosevelt would win. The country is still liberal and for Roosevelt."

Norris said 1940 developments would depend in a large measure on developments at the coming session of Congress and "will depend not only on behavior of Democrats, but Republicans as well."

The 77-year-old Nebraskan and pillar of the New Deal's TVA program said he reserved judgment on whether Thomas E. Dewey, New York's young Republican district attorney, would qualify under his definition of the "real liberal" that would win for Republicans two years hence.

Norris said Dewey was right and Justice Ferdinand Pecora was

Report Urges Tariff Stay For Filipinos

Break Would Be Eased
Preference Till 1960
'46 Liberty Approved
Both Presidents Agree

By William V. Nessly.

Urgent changes in existing provisions for Philippine independence to avoid collapse of much of the islands' economic structure were called for in the long-awaited report of the Joint Preparatory Committee on Philippine Affairs, made public last night.

Scheduled political freedom for the islands eight years hence would not be interferred with, but final severance of preferntial trade relations between the two countries would be postponed until 1960, under the committe's plans. After that time full tariff schedules would be imposed on trade between the two republics.

While the committee was not authorized to recommend any change in the independence date, July 4, 1946, it said that any advancement of that event, suggested by President Manuel Quezon, of the Islands, to "1938 or 1939," would "materially increase the difficulties of the Philippine adjustment problem and result in a delay in the attainment of the objectives contemplated * * *."

Would Extend Preferences

President Roosevelt and President Quezon immediately announced their approval of the report, indicating no effort will be made to change the date set in the independence act.

The committee's findings, designed to remove "imperfections or inequalities" in the act granting the Islands their freedom and to soften the economic shock from the severance of ties existing for 40 years, are intended to provide the basis for legislative action.

Chief change asked in the present legal provisions calls for imposition of 25 per cent of normal tariffs on trade between the two countries by 1946, and thereafter a 5 per cent increase annually until the full levies are in effect by 1960.

Trade Picture Pessimistic

"During this period," the report said, "there would be accorded to American and Philippine interests an additional opportunity to make whatever adjustments may be required by the change in trade relations between the United States and the Philippines to attain a position independent of preferences."

Despite this transition period, however, the committee presented a pessimistic picture for some sections of U. S.-Philippine trade. It found that "certain Philippine industries will be forced to curtail drastically or to discontinue shipments to the United States," and

Envoy to Resume Post
Nazi Course Uncertain
2d Talk With President

By the Associated Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 28.—The United States will continue normal diplomatic relations with Italy, but her course with respect to Germany still was uncertain tonight after a second two-hour conference here between President Roosevelt and the envoys to those nations.

Talking with reporters just before starting back to Washington, William Phillips, Ambassador to Italy, said he would sail December 10 or 14 to return to his post in Rome. He has been in this country 10 days conferring at the State Department.

Hugh R. Wilson, Ambassador to Berlin who was summoned home at the peak of rioting against Jews in Germany, would not say how long he would remain in Washington, but balked at the word "indefinitely" in describing his stay.

"What is the proper word?" he was asked.

"I don't know," he replied, smiling. "I'm going to work in Washington for some time. I don't know how long. I've got certain jobs there to do."

He said Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State, had not used the word "indefinitely" at a Washington press conference at which his status was discussed.

Otherwise, the two diplomats were silent on their talks with the

France Girds for Strike

By the United Press.

Paris (Tuesday), Nov. 29.—The embattled government of Premier Edouard Daladier early today began moving police and military reinforcements into Paris to try to crush the 24-hour general strike called for tomorrow by labor leaders.

This action was taken after the powerful General Confederation of Labor last night rejected a compromise proposal that the strike be called off pending an emergency session of parliament to vote life or death for Daladier's government.

Engineers Mobilized

The French Atlantic Fleet was at L'Orient, with leave permission canceled. All crews were ordered to remain near their ships and engineer officers were mobilized and sent to Paris to assist in operating railways, subways and utilities taken over by the government under a military order.

Reinforcements of police and soldiers were ordered into Paris after a conference last night between police and army authorities. It was estimated officially that 40,000 police will be on guard in Paris tomorrow, exclusive of troops already quartered in Paris and the suburbs. Paris forces will comprise 5,000 Republican Guards, 15,000 police and 20,000 Mobile Guards.

It was significant that so few reinforcements were moving into Paris, as the government feels it may be necessary to maintain order throughout France.

Troops Held Ready

Troops were ordered to remain in barracks, ready for instant orders tomorrow.

The compromise plea to avert a nation-wide tie-up because of Daladier's "tampering" with labor's militantly won 40-hour week was made by the so-called Neutral Socialist and Republican Union members of Parliament supported by the National Federation of War Veterans, boasting 5,000,000 followers.

The war veterans, whose numerical strength is about equal to that of the General Confederation of Labor, announced they were adopting a middle-of-the-road position despite the fact Daladier's 58 new recovery decrees have stripped them of $26,000,000 in annual pensions.

Former Soldiers Back Premier

The former service men supported Daladier's warning, issued in a radio appeal to the nation Sunday night, that a nation-wide tie-up would jeopardize France's security at a crucial time in European affairs and might lead to grave disorders.

They asked postponement of the general strike, scheduled to begin at 4 a. m. Wednesday, on condition Daladier would convene Parliament December 6 for a full debate

Miami Power Fails; Traffic, Movies, Even Dentists Stop

Miami, Fla., Nov. 28 (A.P.).—A fire in a transformer box that compelled the power company to shut off current in the downtown district for more than an hour today caused only $100 monetary damage, but—

Elevators were stalled between floors, stranding hundreds of passengers until they were rescued with ladders or manually operated winches.

Movie screens went dark and theaters had to give their patrons "rain checks."

Telegraph companies could not send or receive messages.

Traffic lights went out and a special squad of policemen was detailed on the double-quick to unsnarl traffic jams.

Dentists had to stop drilling on patients, permanent waves were interrupted in beauty shops, adding machines and other devices in the banks ceased operating.

Prisoner Wants Christmas in Jail; Judge Complies

At his own request, Roy Decker, 35, will get Christmas and New Year's dinners at either the District Jail or Occoquan.

Charged with intoxication, Decker was sentenced to 25 days by Police Court Judge Newman yesterday. In the cell block, the prisoner counted the days and discovered he would miss Christmas dinner.

He called J. R. Jenkins, in charge of the cell block, and stated his case. "I don't see why the judge couldn't have given me 10 more days," he told Jenkins.

Jenkins relayed the request to Judge Newman, who ordered Decker returned to court.

"How much more time do you want?" Judge Newman asked the man.

"Ten days, your honor."

"Ten days it is, then," Newman replied.

Weather Man Predicts Break Today in D.C.'s Cold Wave

Slowly rising temperatures today will bring a break in the season's first cold wave which for the past five days has gripped Washington and taken a heavy toll in lives over the Nation, the Weather Bureau reported last night.

The mercury is expected to climb from a low of 24 degrees in the morning to well up in the 30s, it was said. Skies will be clear and temperatures will continue to rise tomorrow, the Weather Bureau said.

Biting winds which pushed the mercury down to 21 degrees yesterday at 7 a. m. will moderate today, and ice which has coated most of the city's streets should begin to thaw, it was said.

Milder weather was in prospect for the Nation generally, the Associated Pres reported, after five days of winter that sent temperatures to record breaking lows as far south as Pensacola, Fla., where the mercury slid to an all-time November 28 low of 26 degrees early yesterday.

John Davey, 13, 228 F street northwest, and Donald Surplice, 9, Arlington, received hospital treatment for injuries suffered in coasting accidents. Mary S. Collins, 68, 1200 T street northwest, and Catherine Poconney, 39, of the 1400 block of A street southeast, were injured in falls on the ice.

Kennedy Finds London No Place To 'Take It Easy'

London, Nov. 28 (A.P.).—United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy wants the United States in general and President Roosevelt in particular to know being an ambassador in London is no vacation.

Kennedy told a thousand American business men today of a conversation he had with the President before taking his post. He said:

"The President said to me, 'Joe, you've been working pretty hard for a long time. Go over there and take it easy for a while. You know, they have week-ends over there from Thursday until Tuesday.'"

The ambassador said the word week-end to him now was synonymous with crisis.

"I can't remember a week-end when somebody hasn't said, 'something's going to happen on Saturday,'" Kennedy declared.

To Spend Christmas at Home

The State Department said yesterday that Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, envoy to London, had been granted permission to take leave in order to spend Christmas in the United States. His sailing date was not known here.

Jobless Man Held Here After Stoning Japanese Embassy

Charges of vagrancy and disorderly conduct were lodged against John T. Clarke, 58, no fixed address, last night after he allegedly tossed a rock through a window at the Japanese Embassy.

Embassy attaches told police they did not wish to press a charge of destroying private property and asked that the matter be dropped as far as they were concerned.

Traffic Policeman A. K. Bowen seized Clarke at the Embassy and quoted his prisoner as saying he was angry because of his inability to find work and thought trouble between the United States and Japan would give him something to do.

Attaches at the Embassy said they had tried to persuade the man to leave after an office window was broken. When he refused they called the police.

Hitler Mobilizing 110,000 Secretly, British Paper Says

London (Tuesday), Nov. 29 (U.P.).—The News Chronicle, in an undated dispatch, stated today it had learned reliably that Germany is in the process of mobilizing three army corps of 110,000 men with the greatest secrecy.

Six divisions already have been mobilized and it was estimated that the three remaining divisions would be mobilized by next week-end, the dispatch said.

The News Chronicle said it was believed the mobilization was in connection with the situation in the Carpathian-Ukraine, or Ruthenia, autonomous Czecho-Slovak province. There have been disorders in this region for many days because of the demands of Poland and Hungary to annex additional territory there, in defiance of the German-Italian ruling fixing new Czecho-Slovak frontiers on this border.

Roosevelt Believed Ready to Make His Doctor Admiral

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 28 (A.P.).—Informed persons at this resort where President Roosevelt is vacationing reported tonight that Dr. Ross T. McIntyre, the President's personal physician since he entered the White House, would be named shortly surgeon general of the Navy, with the rank of rear admiral.

Dr. McIntyre now holds the permanent rank of commander but is on the rolls as a captain while on duty at the Executive Mansion. His promotion to surgeon general, therefore, would be a double one.

A similar promotion occurred nearly 20 years ago when President Wilson named the late Cary T. Grayson, then a lieutenant commander, to be his personal physician with the rank of rear admiral. Dr. McIntyre would succeed Rear Admiral P. S. Rossiter, who is about to retire.

Immigrants' Success Story Poses Novel Problem in Court

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 28.—The success story of the Morris Kirshenblatts posed an unusual problem today in State Supreme Court.

The Kirshenblatts came here last April from Warsaw, Poland, Morris' wife, Myndla, told the court in an affidavit.

Now the family is earning $65 a week, and they would like to have back in a lump sum, so they can invest it, $3,050 of the $5,000 originally deposited to guarantee they would not become public charges.

Morris Kirshenblatt, the affidavit said, is employed as a watchmaker at $38 a week. Abraham, their eldest son, earns $25 a week; Jerome, 22, $20 a week, and Henry, 18, $15 a week. The fourth son, David, is 6.

The arrangement made with the Public National Bank & Trust Co. before they came to take up permanent residence was that the bank would hold their $5,000 in escrow, with $1,000 delivered to Mrs. Kirshenblatt upon her arrival and the balance paid in $150 monthly installments.

The bank opposed her motion. Its counsel argued it would be "contrary to the public policy" to jeopardize any machinery, outlined in a Federal statute, "which expedites the immigration of aliens subject to the disturbances abroad."

Justice Louis Valente took the case under advisement.

U.S. Used Team Work Against Transamerica

SEC Consulted Treasury Bank Agencies Had Part Firm Must Show Cause

By Felix Cotten.

Government bank regulatory agencies aided the Securities and Exchange Commission in undertaking to discipline the Giannini-controlled Transamerica Corporation on a charge of submitting reports containing "false and misleading statements," it was disclosed yesterday.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau revealed at a press conference that the SEC had "consulted with the Treasury" before announcing its order against Transamerica to show cause on January 16 why stock exchanges should not be forbidden to sell its stock.

Federal Reserve Board officials said the board had advance knowledge that the action was to be taken. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, it is understood, likewise had been previously informed.

A Joint Undertaking

These disclosures indicated that the action against the Giannini banking empire is a joint undertaking on the part of all Federal agencies interested in banks, and this, in turn, is further evidence of the Administration effort to achieve a better degree of "team work" on banking, fiscal and monetary problems.

Asked whether the Treasury had instigated the proceeding against Transamerica, Morgenthau said this was "an unfair question." Officials explained later that the SEC, naturally, had launched the action.

The disciplinary move, however, was believed to be a "concealed lateral pass" from the Office of Comptroller of the Currency to the SEC, with the latter assuming the role of ball carrier.

Line of Action a Surprise

In view of the fact that all previous reports had pertained to possible action by the Comptroller's Office, the SEC proceeding naturally came as something of a surprise. Transamerica is the holding company which ties together the Giannini banking interests.

Whether, in view of the SEC move, there is still a possibility of joint action by the Comptroller's Office and reserve board, is uncertain.

Morgenthau declined to comment on the possibility of future action and referred questioners to Preston Delano, recently appointed Comptroller of the Currency.

Delano, when interviewed afterward by newspapermen, declined to say anything except to explain that questions pertaining to individual national banks were not to be discussed by the Comptroller's Office.

Will Enforce Law

He emphasized, however, that the Comptroller's Office under his management intended to enforce the law.

"And we are doing it," he added.

When Delano assumed office a few weeks ago it was reported that a policy of more strict supervision was to be followed with regard to certain specific banking problems.

This likewise was said to be the case when Cyril B. Upham, formerly special adviser to Morgenthau on banking matters, was made Acting Comptroller pending the swearing in of Delano, who remained for a time at his old position of Federal Home Loan Bank System Governor to clean up some pending matters there.

"Purge" Is Recalled

Upham was appointed first deputy comptroller following a "purge" by Morgenthau in which Marshall R. Diggs, first deputy, and G. J. Oppegard, also a deputy comptroller, were ousted. Both were given temporary positions, however, with the FDIC. Diggs and Oppegard are friends of former Comptroller J. F. T. O'Connor, and the informal explanation was that they were removed to clear the office of the "O'Connor influence."

The SEC will hold hearings in the show cause proceeding against Transamerica, beginning January 16, at the commission's offices here.

Expectation is that if the banking agencies take any action with regard to matters outlined in the SEC complaint, it will await developments at the hearing.

Many Cases Cited

The commission cited a large number of cases in which it said it had "reasonable grounds to believe" that "false and misleading statements" were made. The extent to which the Treasury, acting on behalf of the comptroller's office, participated in the preparation of the case is indicated in the large proportion of citations pertaining to transactions involving the Bank of America.

Two examples follow:

The SEC said "it appears that dividends paid in 1936 by Bank of America" were $1,500,000 in excess of actual current earnings and that dividends paid in 1935 were $3,500,000 i nexcess of earnings.

The commission charged that the bank, in 1937, had paid one of the numerous Giannini holding companies $6,500,000 for assets which the bank in 1933 and 1934 had sold to other Giannini holdings for $300,000. The assets consisted of assets charged off by the bank up to July 1, 1933, for which the purchasing holding company paid $250,000, and assets to be charged off from that time to July 1, 1937, for which another purchasing holding company paid $50,000.

Burke Predicts A Showdown On Wagner Act

Confirmation Row Due Amendments Prepared Seek to End 'Coercion'

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, predicted last night that a fight on the confirmation of Donald Wakefield Smith for another term on the labor relations board "will bring to a head" the whole fight for Wagner act modification.

Burke, long at odds with Chairman J. Warren Madden over administration of the act, said he has prepared a series of amendments "to get away from the complaint that the law now is one-sided, punitive and aimed at the employer."

Smith's reappointment to the board was opposed by the American Federation of Labor, which has cited its objections in letters to Senators.

Burke said he believes the fight on Smith's confirmation will lead to changes in the act.

Burke, while opposed to Smith's reappointment, said he considered him the "least objectionable" of the three members of the board.

"I would rather not approach it this way," he told reporters. "I wish it were possible for the other two members to submit their resignations, have them reappointed, and then let the Senate pass on the fitness of all three."

Burke said his amendments will seek to "outlaw coercion and intimidation from any source."

"They would give the employer the same right as the employe to complain to the board against unfair practices and to appeal for an election," he said.

"As it is now, if there is more than one organization of employes, the employer may not know with which group to deal. He cannot call on the board for an election, even though the board has delayed action to provide more time for a favored union."

Burke, meanwhile, attacked the "check-off" system under which the union dues and other deductions may be made from an employe's wage, as "a pernicious practice that ought to be outlined."

He said he understood the American Federation of Labor and trade unions have almost completely abandoned the "check-off" as a method of dues collection, but it is still generally used by C. I. O. unions.

Political Arena

By the Associated Press.

Joseph W. Tolbert, of South Carolina, oldest member of the Republican National Committee, said yesterday he's never worn a necktie because it's just too aggravating.

TOLBERT

"It's not worth the trouble," remarked the "Tieless Joe." He added he had "saved a lot of time" during his 68 years by not wearing a necktie.

Tolbert called at the Republican national headquarters attired in a blue shirt, a comfortable sweater and old-fashioned but brightly shined high shoes.

"I've been a delegate to more conventions than any man in the world," he said, "and I feel like I'm 16 years old."

Representative Wearin (Democrat), Iowa, said yesterday he was not a candidate for political appointment. He said he would return to Hastings, Iowa, within a few days to resume farming. Wearin was defeated in the Iowa senatorial primary in June by Senator Gillette, court plan foe.

Philadelphia, Nov. 28 (AP). Charles W. Carroll, chairman of the Republican Crusaders, of Pennsylvania, telegraphed the Republican national chairman at Washington today suggesting a "coalition committee," composed of Vice President Garner, Senators Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, Vandenburg (Republican), Michigan); Borah (Republican), Idaho, and Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, to guide the Republican Party. Carroll also proposed Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Coorporation, as the party's "financial stabilizer."

Mrs. Ralph A. Harris, Republican national committeewoman from Kansas, told reporters yesterday how Republicans felt between the 1936 and 1938 elections: "We were like the young girl and her starving child in the old melodrama—we were thrown out into the snowbank and the door was locked and barred. Now we're back in the house again, and everything is very cozy and nice."

A special brand of legislator—the interim Senator—is quietly going about his business on Capitol Hill. The Nation has three of these short term officials, chosen this month to serve only until January 3 when the Seventy-sixth Congress meets.

They are Thomas M. Storke of California, Gladys Pyle of South Dakota, and Alex. G. Barry of Oregon.

Senator Storke was appointed after Senator McAdoo resigned. Senators Pyle and Barry were elected to fill vacancies.

Swope Advises A Tax to Spur Profit Sharing

For Incentive Taxation G. E. Has Own Plan $100,000,000 to Labor

By the Associated Press.

Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co., told a Senate committee yesterday he believed Government must adopt some form of incentive taxation if it hopes to induce industry to stabilize employment through an annual wage.

Swope said his company had paid out $100,000,000 in shared profits to 60,000 employes in the last 22 years.

H. L. Nunn, shoe manufacturer, told the committee his company had "stopped the senseless buying and selling of labor" by allotting 20 per cent of gross revenues to its employes as wages.

Three Indorse Incentives

By that action, the witness said, the Nunn Bush Shoe Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., had given its workers the same direct interest as management in the success of the business, had insured itself against labor troubles and increased its productivity.

Three industrial leaders indorsed the principle of tax incentives to encourage profit sharing and business expansion in general. The committee is composed of Senators Herring (Democrat), Iowa, and Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan.

Hanford MacNider, president of the Northwestern States Portland Cement Co., of Mason City, Iowa, said he was as much opposed to incentive as punitive taxation. MacNider argued that incentive taxation would lead many employers to reduce wages and pay the difference under profit sharing plans in order to take advantage of tax deductions.

Tax Reversal Urged

F. Eberstadt, New York investment banker, argued for a reversal of the principle of the undistributed profits tax. He urged the committee to recommend that Congress set up a definite tax allowance for money used for plant expansion and purchase of capital goods.

Nunn said his company decided more than three years ago to change its policy of "treating labor as a commodity." It found on investigation, he said, that approximately 20 per cent of each dollar of revenue went into wages.

By agreement with its employes, the company put into operation a policy by which employes received 20 cents out of every dollar taken in through wholesale sales. Employes were granted each week a check for 92½ per cent of their previous pay for a 40-hour week.

Nunn said weekly checks had ranged from this minimum to 112 per cent since the policy was inaugurated.

Swope warned the committee profit-sharing systems must be geared to profits, explaining that his company had abandoned as unworkable a plan by which employes were given a fixed percentage of their wages as a "bonus" after five years of service.

Textile Men Ask U. S. To Class 4% as Learners

Textile manufacturers recommended yesterday that 4 per cent of the workers in the cotton, rayon and silk industries be classed as learners under the wage-hour law.

In applying to the wage-hour Administration for exemptions from minimum wages, Claudius T. Murchison, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, said the industries had agreed learners' wages should be 70 per cent of the prevailing minimum wage rates and that the learning period should be nine weeks.

Citizens to Discuss Dale Drive Bus Change

Proposed rerouting of buses to serve the families on Dale Drive will be discussed at a meeting of the Sligo Village and South Woodside Citizens Association tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at the Montgomery Blair High School. Armin G. Clement, chairman of the transportation committee, will report.

A nominating committee is to be appointed to select a slate of officers for the annual election of officers and a number of other important matters are to be discussed, according to Hulst Glenn, president.

Believes Incentive Taxation Needed to Stabilize Jobs

TVA Inquiry To Call McCarl In Audit Row

Authority Disputed Documents Withheld Accountant Testifies

The TVA investigating committee agreed yesterday to call former Comptroller General McCarl to the stand for his views on a growing controversy over the right of the Comptroller General to "supervise and control" TVA expenditures.

The decision was made upon the insistence of Representative Wolverton (Republican), New Jersey, after a representative of the Accounting Office had testified that TVA officials had handicapped its audit of TVA's books by withholding documents.

The witness, Stewart V. Tulloss, presented a letter from R. N. Elliott, acting Comptroller General, charging that TVA had refused to submit its accounts "as required by law;" refused to forward paid checks to the General Accounting Office and had assumed the position that TVA was "not amenable" to laws and regulations governing the "audit and settlement" of TVA accounts.

Biddle Asks Questions

Francis Biddle, committee counsel, questioned Tulloss closely, asking his views on the contentions of TVA that the act establishing it requires only that its accounts be audited annually by the General Accounting Office, with the latter given no supervisory power over expenditures.

Since McCarl originated the accounting office's policy of insisting the right to pass upon the validity of individual items of expenditure, Wolverton demanded that he be called to give his reasons for doing so. Biddle assented.

Tulloss upheld the viewpoint that while the TVA act required an annual audit by the General Accounting Office, it did not exempt the agency from the accounting office's general power to "supervise and control expenditures."

tive committee, however, was another matter.

While it is expected Simpson will be opposed also for that position, others are being discussed, among them Mrs. Ruth Baker Pratt, national committeewoman from New York, and former Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware.

Another vacancy on the executive committee will fall to some Western member of the national committee, while two new members of the national committee, in addition to Simpson, will present their credentials. They are William F. Knowland, of California, in place of Earl Warren, resigned, and Mrs. E. L. Moulton, of New Mexico, in place of Mrs. Ralph K. Baker, resigned.

National Chairman John Hamilton, reporting that 90 of the 103 members of the committee will attend or be represented at the meeting today, was optimistic last night, declaring:

"I am looking forward to one of the happiest meetings of the national committee in several years. The elections earlier this month gave Republicans the first chance to cheer loudly that they have had in almost a decade . . .

"There is nothing unusual about tomorrow's meeting. We shall give very serious consideration to our plans for the next two years . . . Our financial situation, of course, will figure in our deliberations. A summary of the financial report of C. B. Goodspeed, national treasurer, will be available after its delivery to the committee."

Roosevelt Expected to Run

Belief that President Roosevelt is planning to run again in 1940 was rather widespread among visiting party chieftains last night.

Some of the committee members declared that Mr. Roosevelt had set up Harry Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, as a possible successor merely for the purpose of having him knocked down. They insisted the President was helping other New Dealers to eliminate themselves so he might run again.

R. B. Creager, of Texas, a veteran on the National Committee, said: "I don't know who we will nominate for President, but it does look as if we knew the person we will have to oppose. Mr. Roosevelt mentions Mr. Hopkins in order to have him knocked down.

Wallace Declared "Out"

"Mr. Wallace (Secretary of Agriculture), beaten in his own farm belt, is out of the picture. Ickes (Secretary of the Interior) was never in it, and neither was Jackson (Solicitor General). So there's just no one else for Mr. Roosevelt to run except himself. He will reluctantly sacrifice himself to running again. But he will find the country won't stand for it."

Former Senator Jesse H. Metcalf, of Rhode Island, said, "I don't know who the Republicans will be for, but I know one person I will be against—Mr. Roosevelt."

Harrison E. Spangler, Iowa committeeman, said: "The Republicans went across the plains to nominate a candidate in 1936. I think this time they will choose a man from east of the Mississippi. As far as the Middle West is concerned, on the Democratic side, Secretary Wallace is done for. The farmers have repudiated him."

W. G. Underwood, editor of the Florida Beacon, said: "There is a good deal of sentiment in our territory for Mr. James of Pennsylvania. James won by a tremendous majority on a straight New Deal issue, more so or as much as any Republican candidate in the country. But, of course, the leaders have not decided. They like Mr. Dewey pretty well and some others are discussed."

wrong in declaring a mistrial of James J. Hines, Tammany district leader, whom Dewey was attempting to link with New York rackets.

"Dewey represented the people's side, and he made a big fight and a good fight. I would have prayed for him in the last elections had I been a praying man. But he was fighting a local situation. I don't know enough about his stand on national issues."

Norris said he "doubts the wisdom" of a third party movement at this time, and held the same doubts about the LaFollette Progressive Party movement before the elections. He said he privately predicted Republicans would outrun the Progressives in Wisconsin.

"The Progressives were fighting each other while conservatives were united," he said. "That same condition exists to some extent in Congress. The conservatives are united. Progressive independents in both parties should unite without regard to party labels. I doubt the wisdom of a third party for practical reasons. They haven't reached the stage where the people will respond. They are thinking too seriously of partisanship and party politics."

Norris said there has been "too much job-hunting politics" under the Democratic administration and declared "putting too many offices on the political pie counter" was a large factor in recent Democratic election reverses.

"A political party that would go into office and then act for the good of the country instead of the good of the party, could stay in office indefinitely," he declared. He said he learned early in his political career that there was no real choice for the voters "between a Republican machine and a Democratic machine."

Norris said he believes the President will "move forward with his liberal policies" at the next session.

"If conservatives got together to obstruct them, I believe the country would turn against the group that did that, and it would result in the President running for a third term. If his program isn't obstructed, he will not run."

The Nebraska Senator said conservative opposition to the New Deal program might take the form of trimming appropriations for such agencies as TVA, the SEC and the REA, and efforts to limit farm relief and to modify New Deal social legislation.

Norris said he personally was not satisfied with the farm program, but thought Congress did "the best it could" after the Supreme Court's AAA ruling. He said he was not against the domestic allotment plan, a proposed substitute, and "Congress might try that experiment."

Meanwhile, a cautionary warning against another New Deal legislative advance forward was sounded by Senator Guy M. Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, who was re-elected in a close race over Senator L. J. Dickinson, Republican.

FCC Modifies Ban on Lawyers To Curb Lobby

Ex-Aides May Appear But Not in Own Cases Follow Court Rules

A blow at the "radio lobby" was taken yesterday by the Federal Communications Commission in adopting a new set of rules of practice and procedure governing attorneys.

The new rules, it was said, will open the way for more lawyers to appear before the commission than have heretofore. One of the new regulations modifies a former rule which barred a former FCC employe from appearing before the commission within two years after his separation. The new rule limits this ban only to cases in which he participated while on the FCC staff.

"The old rules were in many respects unlike those with which attorneys became familiar in general practice," an FCC statement explained.

"The new rules were so framed as to follow, so far as practicable, the recently adopted rules of civil procedure which now govern practice in Federal district courts of the United States."

While the commission statement made no mention of a "radio lobby," it was recalled that Commissioner George Henry Payne has charged frequently that a small group of lawyers specializing in radio have conducted a lobby and exerted influence on the commission and members of the FCC staff in the past.

Chairman Frank R. McNinch said that more than 500 cases are set for hearing annually by the commission and that hundreds of other matters arise in which attorneys represent clients.

"An unduly large proportion of these cases are handled by a relatively small number of lawyers," he said.

Mad Sculptor Gets 139 Years In Slaying of 3

Carries $500 to Prison Placed in Padded Cell Orates Against Rich

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 28.—For the Easter morning, 1937, slayings of a beautiful young photographers' model, her mother and their apartment boarder, 31-year-old Robert Irwin today began serving a 139-year prison sentence—in a closely guarded, padded cell.

Sentence was pronounced by General Sessions Judge James G. Wallace and Irwin—silenced amid a dramatic courtroom oration against "rich man's justice"—was taken immediately to Sing Sing.

Shortest Time 92 Years

Warden Lewis E. Lawes said the "Mad Sculptor"—who had studied art under some of America's masters and for the ministry at St. Lawrence University—would be segregated.

Even with time off for good behavior Irwin would have to serve about 92 years. For the murder of Frank Byrnes, the boarder, Irwin received a sentence of from 99 years to life. To this was added 20 years to life for the killing of Mrs. Mary Gedeon and the same for the slaying of her daughter, Veronica. Irwin had pleaded guilty to second-degree murder.

Carries $500 to Prison

"These sentences are to be consecutive and not to run concurrently to assure your incarceration for the rest of your natural life," said Judge Wallace.

Handcuffed, Irwin was taken back to the Tombs by 15 guards and then to Ossining. Deputy Sheriff Joseph Brandt said Irwin told him:

"I'm going to get out within 10 years. No man or prison will hold me."

He carried $500, the largest sum in the possession of any new arrival at Sing Sing in recent months. This was taken from him. When he was asked the routine question: "To what do you attribute your crime?" Irwin answered:

"I wanted to learn how to visualize. I wanted to put myself under pressure."

Steel Doors, Cards Valentine Listed as Gaming Evidence

Two steel doors, a valentine greeting, playing cards and other paraphernalia were introduced as Government evidence yesterday in the District Court trial of Philip Raymond Davis, 39, of 25 Eighth street southeast, and Anthony Sesso, 48, of 717 Eighth street southeast, charged with "setting up a gaming table" behind an Eighth street barber shop.

Davis was one of many alleged gamblers arrested March 10, 1937, in a series of raids by about 100 police officers working under sealed orders.

He and Sesso allegedly conducted a gambling business in a back room protected by steel plates and doors and a system of signal lights.

Assistant United States Attorney William S. Tarver said the valentine, found in the gaming room, would be used to establish Sesso's connection with the place. Charles E. Ford is representing the defendants.

Patrolman Edwin F. Talbot testified yesterday he had made two bets with Davis in the barber shop. The trial will be continued today.

Woman Injured By Skater's Spray Asks Damages

Sometimes it's more dangerous to watch ice skating than to participate in the sport, according to a suit filed yesterday in District Court.

Mrs. Grace V. Tirrell, of 2314 Wyoming avenue, asked $25,000 from the Shoreham Hotel Corporation on the grounds that her left eye was permanently injured when she was struck by "a piece of spray or chemical substance" while watching ice skating in the Shoreham ballroom last May. According to Mrs. Tirrell, the "chemical substance" was used in making ice for the rink.

Walsh Urges End Of Politics in Relief

By the Associated Press.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said yesterday that Congress must take steps next year to remove "political evils and coercive influences from the administration of relief."

Walsh, a member of the Senate committee investigating campaign expenditures, said that "evidence of such conditions in certain States makes this necessary."

Legislation could be drafted, he said, to provide for immeditae dismissal of Federal employes involved in political use of relief funds, and for withdrawal of such funds.

Rep. Eicher Reported Named SEC Member

Representative Edward C. Eicher, Democrat, of Iowa, will be appointed to the Securities and Exchange Commission sometime this week, according to reports in commission circles. The appointment will be announced by President Roosevelt from Warm Springs, Ga., and Eicher will assume office immediately.

The new appointee will succeed John W. Hanes, now Undersecretary of the Treasury, who left the SEC last June.

When Eicher is appointed the commission will be at full strength for the first time since last June. The SEC is headed by William O. Douglas. The other members are Jerome Frank, George C. Mathews, and Robert E. Healy.

GHA Head May Demand to Join District Medical Society

Dr. Raymond E. Selders, medical director of Group Health Association, will seek membership in the District Medical Society "if things clear up here," he said yesterday after receiving official notive of his reinstatement in the Harris County Medical Society at Houston, Tex.

He said he would take this action despite the fact he had information that the District society preferred charges against him which resulted in his expulsion last spring from the Harris County Society in Texas.

Notification that charges against him had been dismissed was received in a letter from Dr. Walter A. Coole, secretary of the Harris County Society, informing him "charges preferred against you through the District of Columbia Medical Society have been dismissed without prejudice."

D. C. Complaint Revealed

This was the first indication as to source of charges which caused his dismissal by his home society, he said.

Dr. Selders expressed confidence he would be voted a letter of transfer by the Harris County Society.

"I will join the District society if things clear up here," he said. "But I don't want to join and then get thrown right out again. That bunch down in Texas is going to see that no rough stuff is pulled."

Dr. Selders, one of the storm centers in the special grand jury investigation of the group health movement's complaint it has been a victim of unlawful conspiracy in restraint of trade at hands of the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society, has testified twice before the jury, which began its seventh week of sessions yesterday.

Ruling on Records Waits

Justice James M. Proctor, expected to rule on a motion of A. M. A. counsel to quash latest attempts of the Government to subpena records of the A. M. A. in connection with its activities concerning co-operative medicine, failed to do so yesterday.

Dr. M. Shadid, medical director and organizer of the Farmers' Union Co-operative Hospital Association, of Elk City, Okla., testified at length before the jury yesterday but refused to comment on the secret proceedings. Dr. Mahlon D. Ogden, of Trinity Hospital, Little Rock, Ark., was the only other witness summoned before the jury yesterday. Both are foremost exponents of co-operative medicine movements in the Nation.

Passenger Sues Driver in Crash

Alleging that her four front teeth were "knocked completely out" in an auto accident on the Kensington-Washington road, Mildred Orton, of 1629 Columbia road northwest, yesterday filed suit in District Court against Henry Krautwurst, of 702 Quincy street northwest.

The plaintiff, claiming to be a passenger in Krautwurst's car, said that "negligent operation" caused the vehicle to leave the road and roll down an embankment. Through her attorneys, Godfrey L. Munter and Confer G. Bailey, she demanded $25,000 damages.

Howard U. Aide's Suit Dismissed

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue in District Court yesterday granted a motion to dismiss a suit brought by Dr. Emmett J. Scott to force Howard University to restore him to the post of secretary.

Dr. Scott, who is 65, was retired on June 30 from the position he has held since 1919. He contended that he could not be removed until he reached the age of 68.

In yesterday's proceedings, Wilbur La Roe, jr., and James Cuningham Rogers, counsel for Scott, made a motion for leave to dismiss the suit, stating that further study of the case had convinced them their client could not obtain the injunction he sought.

Spencer Gordon and William duB. Sheldon represented the university.

Kappel, Arraigned In $1,650 Holdup, Pleads Not Guilty

William A. (Dutch) Kappel, 37, yesterday pleaded not guilty when arraigned in Police Court charged with the $1,650 holdup of two men November 21. He was ordered held for the grand jury.

Through his attorney, Charles E. Ford, Kappel waived preliminary hearing. Bond was fixed at $10,000 by Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran.

Kappel is accused of the robbery of Wallace Beach, 30, 1322 Tenth street northwest, and Wallace Hulse, 50, 318 Eleventh street southwest.

Kappel was arrested in the 1400 block Girard street northwest, Saturday by Detective Lieut. John H. Fowler and Detective Sergts. Elmer Lewis and Paul Ambrose.

Palestine Held Best Place to Send Refugees

Jewish Congress Meets Hears Delegates' Report Will Fight Fascism

Emigration to Palestine is the solution to the German anti-Semitic drive, leaders told the American Jewish Congress at the Community Center last night.

The statement was made by Hymen Goldman, delegate to the National Jewish Congress in New York last month, whose resolutions he reported to the local Congress. Other speakers were Bernard Danzansky, also a delegate to the New Yok Congress, and Bernard Zuckerman, of the World Jewish Congress.

Outlining the three-fold purpose of World Jewry, Goldman said the National Congress had resolved to reach a better understanding between Jews and Gentiles, to support democracy and fight fascism and communism.

Referring to the recent British proposal to establish Jewish refuges in South America and Africa, Goldman said Jews should not be sent to "God-forsaken spots" where they would be unable to acclimate themselves.

"Palestine is capable of absorbing at least 100,000 Jews if only England will open the doors," Goldman said. "In fact, Zionist officials have already said they are willing to take in 10,000 Jewish children from Germany."

Goldman was emphatic in declaring that the shunting off of Jews to havens suggested by British proposals was "not the answer," and said such mass emigration would never be successful.

"As many Jews as possible should be emigrated gradually to Palestine," he said, "and for the remainder—well anything can happen. Perhaps those that stay can teach the Germans some sense. For that rotten government we have nothing but contempt."

Stray Cow's Meal On City's Shrubs Costs Owner $2

He was forced to post that amount of collateral when he appeared at the Seventh Precinct to claim the animal as his property. Policemen informed him it was a violation to "let animals run at large."

State Presses Rescue
Woods Storm Abates
Planes Drop Food

By the Associated Press.

Aurora, Me., Nov. 28.—A report that at least one woman had been found in a "serious condition" came tonight as the vanguard of more than 100 men and women hunters, held by a blizzard in the remote northern Maine woods, straggled toward civilization.

Dana Hodgkins, veteran guide, sent word by wireless that an unidentified woman had been taken by Handsled to a rescue base at Nicatous Lake.

The guide's report of the woman's condition spurred rescuers to redouble their efforts, begun last night on orders from Gov. Lewis O. Barrows.

While the rescuers plunged deeper into the wilderness, several groups of hunters walked unaided from the woods, two of the parties trekking with difficulty through heavy snow for more than 10 miles to reach the tiny village of Great Pond. They apparently had suffered no ill effects.

Men broke open roads and trails into the snow-covered woods, and airplanes dropped food to hunters seen waving their arms near camps and tents. The planes returned with reports there were "many signs of life."

In contrast to the howling winds that whipped over the area yesterday, clear weather and moderate temperatures aided the rescue operations today.

Most of the marooned hunters entered the woods just before Thanksgiving, prepared to remain there until the last week-end, but the holiday blizzard, closely followed by another heavy snowfall, blocked their reutrn by piling drifts 10 and 15 feet high.

When temperatures dropped to near-zero Saturday and comparatively few hunters returned as scheduled yesterday, the Governor set the rescue wheels in motion.

This little town of 35 inhabitants, nearest point of civilization to the 50-square-mile wooded-lake region in which the hunters were trapped, became the center of bustling activity.

A caravan of snowplows and trucks and automobiles loaded with food, stretchers and medical supplies moved into the base. It was the gathering point for forest wardens, National Guardsmen from Bangor and volunteers, who fanned out today through the region nearby on their mercy mission.

Trade Head Talks In Prince Georges

Lawrence E. Williams, vice president of the Washington Board of Trade, last night praised the industrial resources of Prince Georges County in a meeting of the County Chamber of Commerce at College Park.

Williams told the chamber its county had the best resources for future industrial development of any section in the Washington metropolitan area, and said this development would be aided by the county's large tracts of clear land, and its long frontage on the Potomac.

He said an ocean-going steamer was scheduled to dock at Washington and pick up passengers for the West Indies in the near future.

T. Howard Duckett, of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, said his organization would co-operate in plans to bring more desirable industries into Prince Georges County.

Civic Leaders as They Testified at District Tax Hearing

Among those heard by the District Tax Advisory Committee yesterday were (from left) Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association; A. J. Brylawski, president of the District Council on Municipal Affairs; Sparrel A. Wood, of the Citizen Forum of Columbia Heights; Washington L. Cleveland, District manager of the American Automobile Association; Edward Hollander, of the United Federal Workers of America, and Samuel Lipkowitz, of the National Labor Relations Board Union.

Betty Rhoad, of Mount Airy, Pa., the District's first sledding victim and the eighty-first District traffic fatality of the year.

Witnesses stated the girl's sled crashed into the rear wheels of an automobile, driven by Cedric A. Malone, colored, 31, of 1527 Twenty-seventh street northwest, and the jury deliberated only briefly before its verdict.

It was brought out that Marion Peoples, 15, of 5008 Forty-second street northwest, at whose home the Rhoad girl was a visitor, also was on the sled, but escaped injury. Malone, held pending outcome of the investigation, was released.

In New York City a crew of 29,000 men continued clearing the city's estimated 4,000 miles of streets at an approximate cost of $1,000,000 for work so far.

The Boston, Mass., Weather Bureau station reported the snowfall was the deepest recorded for this time of year since 1898.

Brisk winds early yesterday prevented unseasonable cold from taking heavy tolls in crop damage in the South, the Associated Press reported. However, Jacksonville, Fla., residents felt the bite of 30-degree-weather, coldest there this year. Huntsville, Ala., recorded lowest temperature with 13 degrees, while in Atlanta

In Washington, hopeful winter sports enthusiasts were putting away ice skates as rising temperatures threatened to thaw the thin coating of ice over the Reflecting Pool. The mercury hit a high of 36 36 degrees yesterday at 3:30 p. m. and dropped to 33 degrees at 5:30 p. m.

With the death of a 77-year-old colored man, Cip Harvey, found asphyxiated Sunday by fumes from a small coal heater in his home, 1004 Caseys court southeast, Washington counted two dead as result of winter's first onslaught.

In a second inquest yesterday, a coroner's jury held accidental the death of Oden A. Carrick, 77, of 148 Twelfth street southeast, who died Thanksgiving Day in Providence Hospital. He walked into the side of an auto operated by Louis Brooks, 18, of Toledo, Ohio.

Doubled Gas Tax, Altered Business Levy Urged; Sales-Income Revenue Proposal Is Assailed

enue, and we have the lowest gasoline tax in the country.

Lusk said his organization had about 400 members, largely business interests.

Fairfax Oyster, president of the Federation of Business Men's Association, suggested that the 60-40 plan of Federal contributions to District expenses be re-enacted and that the Federal Government pay, in addition to 40 per cent of the total cost, an amount equal to a District tax on land acquired since the law became operative in 1922.

He recommended a sales tax that would include all sales in Government buildings. His organization, he said, had never considered an income levy.

Would Pass Tax On

Asked by Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, chairman of the committee, why he favored the sales tax and repeal of the business privilege levy, Oyster said:

"You can't pass the business privilege tax on the consumer half as well as the sales tax."

J. Nelson Anderson, counsel for the federation, amplified Oyster's statement with figures showing that 32.7 per cent of District property is now owned by the Federal Government and thus taxless. Only 58.9 per cent, he said, is taxable, the remainder being divided between District property and tax-exempt private property.

Oyster said that while his organization had not considered the dual tax plan of the committee he believed it would be fair.

Sales Tax "Hits Poor"

William P. Robinson, speaking for the Nonpartisan Lobby for Economic and Democratic Rights, a national colored organization, attacked the sales tax plan on the ground that it would fall heaviest on the low-wage and unemployed classes.

"It would lower still further their standard of living," he said. "Would you press them down further just to make them tax conscious?"

Under cross-examination by Jo V. Morgan, a member of the committee, he insisted that the sales tax is both "hidden and indirect."

During the morning session Washington I. Cleveland, District manager of the American Automobile Association, argued against any increase in the gasoline tax or diversion of the highway funds.

He also made a plea for a larger Federal contribution to the District.

University Women Opposed

The American Association of University Women, through Mrs. Richard Hogue and Mrs. Edward A. Chapin, registered its opposition to a sales tax or any levy not based on ability to pay.

"Recent tax studies have demonstrated," their statement said, "that dollar for dollar the family living on $2,000 pays more in sales taxes than the $4,000 family and the $4,000 family more than the $8,000 family.

"We believe that a tax which distributes its burden in this peculiar manner is not only cruel but also imprudent—imprudent in that it operates to aggravate the very distress which much of our municipal revenue must go to relieve."

Income Tax Asked

Owen R. Lovejoy, of the American Youth Commission, speaking as a private citizen, advocated a graduated income tax on all income, whether individual or corporative.

A six-point tax program was proposed by Sparrel A. Wood, of the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights. It comprised: Repeal of the business privilege tax; corporation net income tax; repeal of intangible personal property tax; a nonwage, nonsalary, personal net income tax; $1.75 realty tax, and an "equitable" Federal payment.

Samuel Lipkowitz, of the National Labor Relations Board Union, and Edward Hollander, of the United Federal Workers of America, both urged a broad income tax in lieu of a sales tax. When reminded by Morgan that Congress twice had refused to enact an income tax for the District, they asserted that it was the duty of city officials to recommend the fairest tax plan regardless of the attitude of Congress.

They pointed out that it took several years to get the national income tax through Congress.

"Well you don't think the new Congress is any more socialistic than the last one, do you?" asked Morgan.

The sales tax was opposed by Mrs. Virginia Weston, speaking for the League of Women Voters.

At the outset of the hearing Maj. Donovan read a long statement reviewing the history of District efforts to broaden the local tax base and explained the recommendations of the present advisory committee.

Luck, Good Hull Saved Cadet Ship, Skipper Admits

Newport News, Va., Nov. 28 (AP). To luck and to a strong hull, the captain of the barkentine Marsala gave credit for the escape of 34 men in the black northeaster which ripped out all five masts of the training ship off the Virginia coast Thursday night and Friday.

Towed to safe anchorage in Hampton Roads by the Coast Guard cutter Mendota, Capt. Oliver Bohld and Sailing Commander George Torrey told last night how the blow overtook the boat carrying a 12-man crew and 22 American Nautical Academy cadets from New Londen, Conn., to southern waters.

"We were lucky, I'll admit, but we owe it all to a good hull," said Capt. Bohld. "It's a steel frame between two layers of thick planking."

Two Virginia Projects Win WPA Approval

Richmond, Va., Nov. 28 (AP).—The Works Progress Administration offices here announced today approval had been received for two Virginia projects.

Work will begin December 15 on a sewer system in Farmville, WPA putting up $1,495 and the town $1,187 to finance the project.

Approval was received but the date for the start of construction was not announced on a sewer system for the town of Kilmarnock, Lancaster County. WPA will put up $2,282 and the town $682.

Federal Agents Broke Faith, Warrings Say

Warring

tion" payments were not allowable deductions. He had figured the net income of Emmitt for 1938 to be $6,400, said Sadur, but the Government figure was $12,000.

Emmitt, according to testimony, had admitted to Internal Revenue investigators that he paid $250 a week for so-called "protection." Sadur said that when he included this figure the taxable income he totaled $19,000 or $3,000 short of the Government estimate.

Before Sadur took the stand, Leo A. Rover, his attorney, told the jury his client was accused by Internal Revenue agents of attempting to conceal the alleged "protection" payments and was threatened with disbarment.

"But as a matter of fact," said Rover, "Sadur made a careful listing of these 'protection' payments and discussed the matter with Government officials."

Denies Interference

This was testified to by Sadur, who identified his office "work sheet" on which the payments were noted and said the sheet was turned over to the Internal Revenue Bureau.

"Sadur in no way attempted to interfere with the Government in the Warring case," Rover argued, "and he assumed the books from which he took estimates were correct."

Sadur's testimony—he was still on the stand when the court adjourned yesterday—gave a detailed recital of how he figured the Warrings' taxable income from material furnished him by the Warrings themselves.

In one of his conferences with internal revenue agents, Sadur said, the Government claimed the Warrings made $1,300,000 in 1935. Of this, they contended, $130,000 was clear profit.

Sadur asked how revenue officials had arrived at the figure and was told that the $130,000 represented 10 per cent of the gross income and was taxable as profit.

"They (the Internal Revenue agents) admitted this was their own estimate and had nothing to support it," Sadur testified.

Knew Warrings' Business

The tax expert revealed he knew the Warrings were in the "numbers" business when he agreed to represent them before the Internal Revenue Bureau. He said Emmitt came to him and asked for help and at that time told what business he was in.

Amish Farmers Win Fight To Keep One-Room School

Held They Couldn't Afford New Building
Legislature Passed Special Act for Them
They Hire Own Teacher, Pay Expenses

By the Associated Press.

Lancaster, Pa., Nov. 28 (AP).—Pennsylvania's picturesque black-bearded Amish, their fight won against modern schools, sent their children back today to the first classes in their own building.

Thirty of their youngsters, with bowl-shaped haircuts just like the oldsters, rode in horse-drawn sleds and typical Amish wagons through a deep snow to the opening of the one-room country school that a special act of the State Legislature gave the "plain people" the right to operate.

Beginning of classes in the old Horseshoe Pike School marked the end of the sect's two-year fight against sending their children to a modern consolidated school which their faith prevented them from accepting on a time-payment basis.

The school was one of ten abandoned—and later sold—by the East Lampeter Township school board on completion of the big new building at a crossroads community known as Smoketown.

Legislation passed at the special session of the Legislature enabled the Amish to set up an independent school district. They hired their own teacher, leased the old school, and installed desks and other equipment.

K. F. Rea Dies; Senate Clerk For 46 Years

Committee Aide On Appropriations
Native of Indiana

Kennedy F. Rea, clerk of the Senate Appropriations Committee, died yesterday at Garfield Hospital at 70 after 46 years of continuous service on Capitol Hill. He had been ill for some months.

K. F. REA

Born in North Vernon, Ind., Mr. Rea first came to Washington in 1892 as a messenger for the House Appropriations Committee under Representative Holman. Later he was made assistant clerk of the committee. In 1907 he was transferred to the Senate Appropriations Committee in the same capacity.

In 1913 Mr. Rea was made clerk of the Senate committee and served until his death.

On the Senate committee he served under seven chairmen: Senators William B. Allison, Eugene Hale, Francis E. Warren, Thomas S. Martin, Frederick Hale, Wesley L. Jones and the present chairman, Carter Glass. He was said to have been one of the best informed men in the Government on the functions of the Federal agencies.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. May Belle Rea; a daughter, Mrs. Virginia Buckley; two sons, Capt. Everett F. and Courts D. Rea, and two grandchildren, Everett Rea, jr., and Virginia Buckley.

Mr. Rea lived at University Park, Md. Funeral services, to be announced later, will be conducted at the S. H. Hines Co. undertaking parlor.

Dr. McGourty, Catholic U. Professor, Dies

Heart Attack Fells Him
Began Teaching in 1902
Gave Latin and Greek

The Rev. Thomas J. McGourty, 68, professor of Latin and Greek, at Catholic University, fell dead yesterday at the university, apparently of a heart attack.

FATHER McGOURTY

Dr. McGourty was a native of Wilkes-Barre, Pa. He was educated at Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md., graduating in 1899. He took his master's degree at that institution in 1901 and his Ph. D. at Catholic University in 1917.

Father McGourty began teaching at St. Thomas College, Scranton, Pa., in 1902. He came to Catholic University in 1912. He was instructor of Latin and Greek at Sisters' College of the Brookland institution until 1917, when he became instructor of classical languages in the undergraduate college.

Besides serving as secretary of the Sisters' College, Dr. McGourty edited the Sisters' College publication, The Messenger. He was a member of the American Philological Association and a contributor of book reviews to several learned journals.

Thomas B. Gresham, jr., of Charlottesville, will serve as ballistics expert for the bureau and Dr. C. L. Albright, associate professor of physics at the University of Richmond, is in charge of the laboratory work.

Witness Links Marcantonio To Red Front

Heads Labor Defense League 'Communistic'
Dr. Dewey Assails Dies

By the Associated Press.

Members of a House committee heard testimony yesterday that one of their colleagues-to-be in the new Congress was the head of a Communist organzation.

Sam Baron, of New York, told the Dies committee on un-American activities that Vito Marcantonio, elected from New York's Twentieth Congressional District, headed the International Labor Defense. He said there was not the slightest doubt that the I. L. D. was a "Communist Front organization."

Resigned as Socialist

Baron, who said he resigned from the Socialist Party so he might appear before the committee as an individual, asserted the International Labor Defense had invited Representative O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana, and Bernard (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, to make speeches in New Jersey several months ago, protesting against alleged violations of civil rights in Jersey City. After bringing the Congressmen from New York, he said, the organization "stuck its foot in the water, found it too hot, and ran." The speeches were not made.

Marcantonio is a former Representative. Running on the Republican and American Labor Party tickets, he defeated Representative Lanzetta (Democrat), of New York, in the November election.

Branching into another line of testimony, Baron asserted that the "American Civil Liberties Union is not Communist and that Roger N. Baldwin, its head, is not a Communist nor does he follow the Communist line in any particular."

Chairman Dies (Democrat), Texas, said the committee had evidence to the contrary. He added that a Harvard University classbook for 1935 quoted Baldwin thus:

"My chief aversion is the system of greed, private profit, privilege, and violence which makes up the control of the world today, and which has brought it to the tragic crisis of unprecedented hunger and unemployment. I see social ownership of property, the abolition of the propertied class, and sole control of those who produce wealth. Communism is the goal."

Dies reading into the record extracts from what he described as galley proofs for WPA State guide books for New Jersey and Montana. He has said previously that Government officials had testified secretly that the guide books gave evidence of Communistic influence.

Bidders Vie For Brightwood Bank Building

Offers Ordered Sealed
Gain for Depositors
To Increase Dividend

Prospective dividends to depositors in the defunct Brightwood Bank loomed larger yesterday as spirited bidding for the bank building took place before Justice Oscar R. Luhring in Motions Court.

In an unusual courtroom scene, representatives of Harry A. Oliker, real estate man, and the Bank of Commerce & Savings keenly bid against each other for the Brightwood property, raising the opening price of 35,600 to $40,200. Justice Luhring thereupon told the competitors that he would receive sealed bids this morning.

According to Martin F. O'Donoghue, attorney for Frederick Young, the receiver, sale of the building and fixtures at Georgia and Concord avenues northwest will mean another dividend for the bank's creditors. O'Donoghue said the property is the last major asset of the defunct institution.

Yesterday's auction took place as a result of a bid of $35,600 made last week by Oliker on behalf of a client, F. Weber. Previously, the Bank of Commerce & Savings had offered $35,000. When W. Cameron Burton, attorney for Oliker, and M. D. Rosenberg, representing the Bank of Commerce & Savings, appeared in court yesterday, the day set for confirming the sale, Justice Luhring ruled the two rivals should have an opportunity to compete for the property.

After the bids, going up for the most part by $500 jumps, had reached $40,200, Rosenberg pleaded for more time to consult his board of directors.

With the comment, "The way you men are going, I'll be here all day," Justice Luhring agreed to close the "auction." He said he would receive sealed bids for the property today.

Army, Marines, Navy to Plan War Industry

180 Top Officers to Meet
100,000 Fliers Sought
Nazi Navy Base Probed

The Nation's unprecedented peace-time defense program moved into still higher gear yesterday as authorities acted on several fronts to accelerate preparations against any threat to American security. Developments included:

Disclosure of a summons to a secret conference here Thursday and Friday of more than 180 top-ranking Army, Navy and Marine Corps officers for the broadest survey of industrial mobilization plans yet undertaken.

Preparation of a program for training 100,000 civilian pilots and 125,000 mechanics at Government expense during the next five years, to be presented to President Roosevelt this week.

Revelation of an American request to Britain and France for any information on a reported German naval base on the Canary Islands, stepping stone between Africa and South America held by the Spanish Insurgents.

Announcement of the concentration of key War Department activities in the Munitions Building early next year, leaving diplomats in undisputed possession of the State Department Building.

Charges that "war hysteria" is being employed as "a cover for another pump-priming program designed to aid heavy industry," voiced by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri.

Unusual significance is attached to the coming conference on industrial mobilization, the first to which have been summoned ranking field officers of all seven Army supply branches as well as technical experts of the Navy and Marine Corps.

The officers ordered to the Capital from all over the country will report to War and Navy Department chiefs on the preparedness of approximately 10,000 designated industrial plants for the possible necessity of shifting to war-time production schedules.

Reluctant to discuss any specific weaknesses the conference may consider, officials stressed the broad basis of the inquiry, terming it a "general inventory to see what plants across the country can do to carry a war load."

Developed by the Army Air Corps and Civil Aeronautics Authority, the pilot training plan would give the United States an air force reserve approximating that commonly credited to Germany at the present time. The program calls for training of 20,000 pilots and 25,000 mechanics a year at approved commercial schools, with the most promising graduates offered an opportunity to continue flying as a special class of reservists on active duty.

If approved by President Roosevelt, the project will be submitted to the new Congress soon after it convenes in January.

Inquiry into German naval operations off the Canary Islands, reported from London by the Associated Press, is understood to have been made shortly after conclusion of the Munich Pact, when an attempt at appeasement of German colonial claims appeared likely. British officials declined to comment on the query.

With the doctrine of "continental defense" prompting investigation into American security in the South Atlantic, new reports are that Japan is preparing to launch in the Pacific two battleships of more than 40,000 tons, armed with 16-inch guns.

The information comes from within the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo axis, appearing in the 1939 edition of Nauticus, Germany's standard annual on naval affairs, which further states that the Nipponese empire is reinforcing her Far Eastern naval bases and pushing new stations "as far as possible into mandated regions in the south and southeast."

War Chiefs to Move

Secretary Woodring described movement of the offices of the Secretary of War, Chief of Staff and Adjutant General to the Munitions Building as an arrangement to increase administrative efficiency during the period before completion of the authorized War Department Building.

Present dispersion of War Department activities in 19 different structures, delaying decision and hindering co-ordinated execution of policy, might have grave consequences "in even minor emergencies," Gen. Malin Craig, Chief of Staff, warned in his annual report to Woodring two weeks ago.

The transfer brings together in one building key civilian officials and General Staff officers for the first time in nearly 20 years.

To State Department officials, who have long complained of overcrowding, the move means an additional 91,500 square feet of floor space, enlarging their present quarters by nearly 50 per cent.

Doubling of the number of American military and naval attaches now assigned to Latin-American nations was announced yesterday by Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles as a move to give the American republics complete knowledge of this country's defense program.

First of the new missions will be dispatched to Colombia.

Pirow Sees Duce On Reich Colonies; Second Parley Off

Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, Nov. 28.—Oswald Pirow, defense minister of South Africa, saw Count Galeazzo Ciano, the foreign minister; Felice Guarneri, minister of foreign exchange and currency, and Gen. Alberto Pariani, undersecretary for war, this morning before calling on Premier Benito Mussolini.

It was expected he would have a further interview with Il Duce this evening, and when this did not materialize it was inferred the first interview had not revealed sufficient common ground to warrant a second.

It is believed here Pirow told Mussolini substantially what he is reported to have told Chancellor Adolf Hitler—that South Africa stood firm against the return of either former German Southwest Africa or former German East Africa, now known as Tanganyika; but the union government favored restoration to Germany of one or two colonial blocks north of the Gulf of Guinea.

7 Hours to Land 10-Ton Killer Shark Off California

This 30-foot killer shark, caught near Pidgeon Point 40 miles south of San Francisco by the purse seiner Montara, weighs an estimated 10 tons and was called by old salts "the largest ever caught in these waters." It took seven hours to land and two men were knocked overboard in the process

Report Urges Tariff Reprieve To Ease Filipino Independence

Philippine

"certain United States industries likewise will be forced to discontinue shipments to the Philippines."

For such industries, it called for "a different kind of restriction, namely, declining quotas which would be graduated so as to provide for their complete elimination by January 1, 1961." Shipments within the quota limits would be exempt from duties. Commodities which would be made subject to the declining quotas are cigars, scrap and filler tobacco, cigarettes, coconut oil and pearl buttons.

Market Loss Certain

Provisions of the independence act, the committee said, "make it practically certain that the Philippines will decrease in importance as a market for United States exports and that it will become less attractive as a field for investments by United States citizens."

Exports from the Philippines will probably decline, it pointed out, as soon as export taxes come into operation, in 1941, and with a curtailment in exports, the Philippines must perforce restrict imports.

"With a shrinkage in United States-Philippines trade," the report went on, "there will likewise be a lessened demand for services such as those now being rendered by American shipping agencies, banks and insurance companies."

Urgency of the proposed provisions was stressed by President Roosevelt, who said in a statement:

"Changes must be made in existing law before November, 1940, if the disruption of several Philippine industries is to be avoided.

"In addition, it is desirable that at an early date some definite indication should be given by the legislative and executive branches of the United States Government as to the future commercial policy of the United States toward an independent Philippines so that the official and commercial representatives of the two countries can make such adjustments as may be required because of the relinquishment of United States sovereignty over the Philippines in 1946."

President Quezon stated:

"The stability of the future Philippine Republic and of its national economy will not be possible unless the recommendations are given effect. The Filipino people confidently hope that the Congress of the United States will not deny us this relief."

Paul V. McNutt, high commissioner to the Philippines, apparently fearing encroachment by some other power, has suggested postponement of political independence. The joint report, however, makes no mention of McNutt's plan or of international considerations involved by independence.

Philippine Plaint Cited

The new proposals, President Roosevelt said, were to amend provisions "against which the Filipino people have complained."

For five years preceding political independence the tax on Philippine imports to this country, as under present provisions of the law, would be in the form of an export tax levied at Manila and returned to the Philippine treasury for the purpose of retiring its bonded indebtedness.

After 1946 the assessment would be in the form of a graduated import duty, provided for in a proposed post-independence treaty. A similar duty would be levied on American goods entering the Philippines after 1946.

The committee plan provides a tax on embroideries would be levied on the basis of value in the Philippines, instead of full value, providing the embroidered textiles were of American origin.

Cigarettes Under Quota

It also provides that American cigarettes, for which the Philippines are one of this country's principal markets, enter the islands after 1946 under a decreasing duty-free quota.

Such Philippine commodities as coconut oil, sugar and cordage, for which a quota now is provided, would be given an equivalent quota until expiration of the preferential trade treaty in 1961.

The experts recommended that American evaporated milk, canned fish and cotton textiles be given greater protection in the Philippine market.

The committee said trade in these commodities would be "disrupted" if placed under the general terms of the export and import duties otherwise recommended.

Refund to the Philippine treasury of money collected in export taxes, which may amount to $100,000,000 by 1946, would be earmarked for use in retiring Philippine bonded indebtedness which has been guaranteed, principal and interest, by the United States.

Philippine Vice President Sergio Osmena recently arrived here to be President Quezon's personal spokesman in an attempt to secure favorable Congressional consideration of the recommendations.

Osmena, together with Resident Commissioner Joaquin M. Elizalde, will present the Philippine viewpoint and seek Congressional sanction for the "economic alleviation."

Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre headed the interdepartmental committee which supervised drafting of the report.

Anthony Eden Due in New York To Speak Dec. 9

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—The National Association of Manufacturers announced today that Anthony Eden, former British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, had agreed to come here to address its annual convention December 9.

Eden's talk, which will be broadcast, will be on "Democracy and the Modern World."

The speech will highlight the concluding day of the association's three-day convention.

Charles R. Hook, president of N. A. M., said he understood Eden would sail for America this weekend, and would be away from England only about two weeks.

Hook said there was no especial political significance in Eden's acceptance of the invitation to speak, adding the Briton would be "listened to with a great deal of interest and respect for whatever he has to say."

Other speakers on the convention program, Hook said, would include H. W. Prentis, jr., president of the Armstrong Cork Co.; Dean William F. Russell, of Columbia University Teachers College; Senators Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, and O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming; Elmer F. Andrews, Federal wage-hour administrator; W. W. Waymack, editor of the Des Moines Register; Gerard Swope, of General Electric; C. M. Chester, of General Foods; Raymond Moley, former member of the Roosevelt "brain trust," and Robert L. Lund, of the Lambert Pharmaceutical Co.

Roosevelt Congratulates Zog on Independence

President Roosevelt cabled his felicitations yesterday to Zog I, King of the Albanians, on the anniversary of Albanian independence.

"On this day when the independence of Albania is being celebrated, I am happy to extend my felicitations and the best wishes of the American people," the President said.

Chamberlain To Visit Duce, Discuss Spain

For Sake of French Will Confer on Nazis Hopes for Mediation

By Frank R. Kelley.

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Nov. 28.—As the next major step in pursuit of European "appeasement," Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, accompanied by his foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax, will visit Rome early in January to confer with Premier Mussolini, it was announced today by the Foreign Office.

Chamberlain hopes to restore normal relations between France and Italy, at odds over Spain, and to get Il Duce to ask Chancellor Adolf Hitler, the other partner in the Rome-Berlin axis, to do something to improve Anglo-German friendship, jolted by the Nazis' persecution of Jews.

To Discuss Africa

At the same time, Chamberlain and Mussolini will try to settle questions affecting British and Italian interests in the Mediterranean and Africa, which were not solved by the Anglo-Italian agreement.

[Chamberlain told the House of Commons today "no new decision on the question of granting belligerent rights" to the insurgents was reached during his visit in Paris last week, the Associated Press said.

[The prime minister told the House of Commons the Anglo-French talks last week in Paris had not led to a British commitment to send an expeditionary force to the continent in case of war.

[France was understood to have approved the statesmen's visit to Italy which will mark the first by a British prime minister since the late Ramsay MacDonald went to Stresa in April, 1935.

Sees King on Windsors

[The prime minister today went to Buckingham Palace to tell King George about his meeting with the Duke of Windsor in Paris November 24. It was understood that the King and prime minister discussed the question of the duke's return to England, but officials would not confirm this.—Editor's note.]

The exact date and length of the Rome talks will be the subject of further discussions in diplomatic channels. It is assumed here Chamberlain's visit to Rome will last at least four days. According to one report, he will leave London with Lord Halifax about January 9.

Dominica's U. S. Envoy Receives Cuban Honor

By the Associated Press.

The Cuban Embassy announced yesterday Dominican Minister Andres Pastoriza had received decoration for outstanding diplomatic services in Cuba's behalf.

Cuban Ambassador Pedro Martinez Fraga, at a dinner last night, bestowed on Dr. Pastoriza the decoration of Gran Oficial of the order of Carlos Manuel de Cespedes.

Guests included the envoys of Spain, Chile, Ecuador, Uruguay, El Salvador and Panama, Acting Director Pedro de Alba of the Pan-American Union, and members of the Cuban colony.

Japan to Speed Arms for War With Russia

Orders Output Increased
Sees Soviets Preparing Holds Strife 'Inevitable'

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Nov. 28.—Japan's vice minister of war warned arms manufacturers today a "Soviet-Japanese conflict apparently is inevitable."

"It is absolutely necessary," Lieut. Gen. Eiki Tojo said, "that Japan expand her munitions output. Therefore, the army is demanding that the government enforce, article by article, the national mobilization law. The real war is still to come . . ."

U. S. Attitude Cited

(The national mobilization law, passed last March 28, gave the government unlimited power to draft Japan's manpower and economic resources in a war emergency.

(The government on May 5 invoked 11 of the 30 articles of the law and subsequently emergency economic measures controlling all branches of industry, trade and banking were enforced.)

Both Gen. Tojo and Lieut. Gen. Seishiro Itagaki, war minister, addressed arms manufacturers summoned to Tokyo for a meeting in the officers' club.

Gen. Tojo declared the United States' attitude toward the Chinese-Japanese conflict was neutral, but said "I must call attention to the fact that the United States Government is sticking to old treaties and is unwilling to recognize the changed situation in the Far East."

(Japan has announced a policy of "Asia for the Asiatics." The United States on October 6 protested against interference with American rights in China and demanded maintenance of the "open door." Japan, in a reply November 18, denied American charges of discrimination and asserted "ideas and principles of the past" no longer applied in China's "new situation.")

He alleged the British were concealing enmity toward Japan with "occasional gestures of friendship" but said "they mean nothing."

He underlined Soviet Russia as the real danger, in his call for increased arms production, declaring "there is every possibility that Russia and China may band together as soon as the Soviet completes preparations.

Holds Soviet Preparing

"There is no doubt that the Soviet is hastily replenishing heavy industries and bolstering armaments in preparation for a Soviet-Japanese conflict that apparently is inevitable."

(Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, Chinese leader, was reported November 25 to have warned Sir Archibald Kerr, British Ambassador to China, that China would be forced to turn elsewhere for aid unless British policies were changed and the British provided assurances of positive assistance against the Japanese.)

Pope, Growing Stronger, Attends Long Rites, Insists on Seeing Group of Newlyweds

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, Nov. 28.—Pope Pius XI resumed normal activities today by attending spiritual services in the chapel of his official apartment.

As further evidence of his vitality following his collapse Friday with a heart attack, the Pontiff deviated from his custom of suspending audiences during the week of these spiritual exercises by deciding to receive a large group of newlyweds on Wednesday.

The Holy Father, after a fairly quiet night, sat in the small sacristy beside the altar during two programs of meditation and instruction, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. He was not visible to the prelates who attended.

Each program covered two half-hour periods, with a half hour's intermission between, the last one ending with recital of the rosary and eucharistic benediction.

Vatican authorities said the Pope intended to be present every day at the services which will last until Saturday. These annual spiritual exercises were instituted by him in an encyclical in the early years of his reign as an example to the clergy to be assiduous in prayer.

The Pope again wanted to ride through the Vatican gardens in his automobile but Dr. Aminta Milani, his chief physician, persuaded him to forego the diversion although the weather was mild.

Vatican sources indicated preparation of an encyclical, which Italian circles for sometime have reported the Pope to be working on, might have been delayed by his illness.

Italians last week expressed the belief the Pope was preparing an encyclical, an allocution or the calling of a consistory to fill five vacancies in the College of Cardinals when he was stricken last Friday.

'Phantom' Slashes 13th Woman in Week in England

Halifax, England, Nov. 28 (AP).—"The Slasher," a phantom assailant described by his victims as having a "horrible" face with big mouth "full of black teeth," tonight claimed his fifth victim within 24 hours.

It was his thirteenth attack in a week on 12 women of this northern industrial town. He returned today to a second attack upon May Sutcliffe, 21, his first victim.

Women were warned to remain indoors after dark and posses were formed.

"The Slasher" creeps up to his victims, usually at night, slashes with a sharp-edged weapon, and quickly disappears. Typical was the attack upon his thirteenth victim tonight, a married woman who suffered a cut on her right arm. None of the victims has been hurt seriously.

Refugees Look For Aid From Lima Meeting

Expect Lead by U. S.
New Arrests Reported
Sympathizers Warned

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 28.—Fervent hopes were expressed by leaders of German Jewry that President Roosevelt would be able to persuade the forthcoming Pan-American Conference at Lima, Peru, to take immediate generous action in behalf of German Jews.

These leaders say immediate action is a compelling necessity. They insist that unless aid comes quickly the tragedy of the Jews will be unspeakable. They envisage not only misery, but the possibility of disease, mass suicides, and even criminality born of desperation.

Arrests Resumed

At the central emigration office erected by the Jewish community threats of suicide are made daily, the Jewish leaders declare.

Jewish quarters heard from various parts of Germany today that arrests of Jews continues. Many who stayed hidden away from their homes during the arrest wave of November 10 now are being rounded up quietly, reports said.

That Jewish sympathizers in academic ranks will be treated like Jews is foreshadowed in the issue of "Die Bewegung," Nazi university organ.

"Any professor who thinks he cannot get along without Jewish coworkers—this includes private secretaries, private assistants and collaborators on periodicals—will be the target of our relentless attacks," said the paper. "We will place him on the same plane with the Jew and treat him like a Jew."

Jewish leaders made it plain they felt President Roosevelt must make the first move in their behalf.

"Europe is looking to President Roosevelt to make a beginning," one said. "Premier Daladier of France, for instance, is willing to take 10,000 Jews into France provided other countries make their contribution.

Others Hang Back

"Various British dominions and colonies seem ready for generous action, but again with the stipulation that someone else makes a beginning.

"Thus everywhere there is a willingness to do something provided someone else does his bit first. Energetic action by President Roosevelt at this time would set the machinery in motion."

From Danzig came reports of large-scale raids upon Jews during the past few days. In the municipality of Zoppot, all Jewish homes, including boarding houses and hotels, were searched, and Jews who could not prove they had regular jobs and Jews without passports were sent across the Polish border.

500 Daily Seek U. S. Visas

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Nov. 28.—With the total registration of prospective German refugees for American visas under the German quota of the immigration law already swollen to approximately 160,000, applications for places on the waiting list are reaching the American consulate general at Berlin at the rate of nearly 500 a day. This number does not include applications received at other American consulates; it was revealed at the consulate today.

The registration for visas at the Berlin consulate general alone is 90,000. The annual American quota for persons born within the Reich, including Austria and Nazi Sudetenland, is 27,370. Even after discarding those weeded out from the 160,000 figure, which will occur through their failure to qualify under the strict provisions of the American immigration law, the persons who register now for a visa will have a waiting period of three years as the absolute minimum.

Refugee Corporation Proposed

Berlin, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Arthur Kuffler, prominent Austrian industrialist and a baptised Jew, was en route to London tonight to place before the intergovernmental committee on refugees a $1,000,000 plan for resettlement abroad of many of Germany's 700,000 Jews.

Aiding Kuffler is Hans Gildemeester, son of a Dutch "Aryan" minister who is popular with the Nazis because he helped Nazi political prisoners during the Austrian regime of the late Chancellor Dollfuss.

According to the Kuffler-Gildemeester proposal, a company would be set up in London with a capitalization of 20,000 shares at $50 each.

The company would negotiate with overseas nations to "buy or rent areas suitable for Jewish settlement," would erect homesteads and rent in small plots to the settlers or sell on installments.

Kuffler hopes to be able to arrange with Germany for migrating Jews to turn their property over to a trustee appointed by the Reich. The company, in turn, gradually would pay off these amounts to the emigrants, using the trustee founds for the purchase of German goods to be exported to the countries of the emigrants' destination to be used in starting their new life.

Japanese Shells Kill 3 in British Crown Colony

Hongkong (Tuesday), Nov. 29 (AP).—Three Chinese residents were killed yesterday by shells falling 3 miles inside this British crown colony, where hundreds of Chinese soldiers sought refuge from Japanese mopping up the surrounding territory.

Several British soldiers were endangered by stray shells and machine-gun bullets but none was hit. It was estimated 1,000 Chinese guerrillas clung to possession of Stataukok. Fires were raging in other nearby towns.

Shanghai, Nov. 29 (AP).—Generalissimo Chiang was reported today to have divided the Chinese army into northern and southern headquarters with himself taking over the command in the south. Kuomin (Chinese) News Agency said the Yangtze River was designated as the dividing line between the two headquarters.

Daladier Calls 40,000 Troops As Labor Spurns Compromise

French

on his reform decrees and probably a vote of confidence.

The labor confederation tonight replied to Daladier's accusation that "foreign influences," obviously meaning the Communist Internationale, incited the strike call by announcing the general strike was ordered solely for the protection of French workers.

Labor Blames Premier

Full responsibility for the tie-up rests with the premier, the confederation said, because "it pleased you (Daladier) to modify established social legislation without consulting us and have forced the workers to take the only effective gesture of protest left to them—to strike."

The labor body assailed Daladier's alleged "illegal mobilization" of the workers under military requisition and accused him of attempting to create public hysteria with warnings of disorders.

"There will be no disorders on our side," the confederation promised, "and work will be resumed everywhere Thursday morning."

Leon Jouhaux, chief of the labor confederation, summoned his executive committee into session at 5 p. m. to study the offer and 1½ hours later the trade union leaders issued a statement "reaffirming" the original strike order.

"There will be no compromise with labor's just demands; the strike will occur on schedule," a C. G. T. official said.

The war veterans supported the compromise proposal on condition the $26,000,000 cut from their pensions would be earmarked for national defense and they would be given a voice in its disbursement.

Labor's anger was intensified when the large Renault automotive plant on the outskirts of Paris, damaged in rioting between sit-down strikers and mobile guards last week, started a lockout of 30,000 strikers who sought to return to their jobs at 7:30 a. m. today.

Following consultation with Daladier and other government leaders, officials of the Renault plant announced the workers had broken their collective contract by staging an "illegal" strike and they were being replaced by new men.

Plane Plants Reopened

The company's action hinted at punitive measures against the workers who are liable to heavy fines and jail terms under the new government decrees because the Renault plant holds government arms contracts.

Work was resumed in the Bloch, Nieuport, Bleriot and Breguet aviation plants—all months behind on government air force orders—under Daladier's stern police and military measures to break a series of unauthorized strikes which started last Thursday.

At the same time the premier, having decreed military requisition of the nation's principal railroads and ready to conscript 525,000 rail workers to maintain service under army pay, issued new decrees requisitioning Paris subways and auto buses in a bold plan to defeat the purposes of the impending general strike.

Prison Warning Defied

Under French labor laws the 525,000 rail workers have been warned they face prison terms ranging up to five years if they refuse to obey the conscription order, but this warning met open defiance today.

Pierre Semard, secretary general of the Railroad Workers' Federation, denounced the requisition as illegal and warned the government was using "an arm of force which might boomerang against those using it."

Semard called upon the railroad workers to "remain deaf and dumb at their machines or posts and not desert them" Wednesday, even though army and navy engineers attempt to operate the six nationalized railroad systems.

The series of unauthorized strikes that have called out a total of more than 100,000 workers in various parts of the country in the last week appeared to be abating although 5,000 shipbuilders walked out at the Dunkerque shipyards, halting work on five light warships being rushed to completion for the navy, and seven other vessels.

Utility Operation Assured

The shipbuilders' strike was in sympathy with a strike of Dunkerque steel workers.

The Farman aviation plant, like the Renault plant, ordered a lockout while it rehired new men to replace 6,000 workers who struck last week.

It appeared Wednesday's strike would be crippling in its effects on industry and commerce but would fail to paralyze completely the railroads, shipping or any of the major public utilities because of Daladier's arrangements with military technical experts to maintain operation of key railroads, the Paris subways and surface communications lines as well as gas, electricity and water supplies.

At least skeleton staffs will insure telephone, telegraph, mail and radio service.

Mediation Tried

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Nov. 28.—At a meeting of the parliamentary representatives of the Independent Socialists—led by L. O. Frossard, formerly minister of public works in the Daladier cabinet who resigned last August in protest against the prime minister's modification of the 40-hour week, a delegation led by Frossard himself was appointed to mediate between the government and the General Confederation of Labor.

The basis of the compromise which they are trying to work out is that Daladier should summon Parliament to meet December 6, and the French labor delegation should postpone the strike demonstration until after that date. Frossard and his friends were not able to see Daladier personally, but in a telephone conversation the premier declared he could not give any engagements until the C. G. T. had formally withdrawn its strike order. Frossard said tonight he was continuing his efforts as mediator.

President in the "little White House." Any public announcement would have to come from him, they said as they left by automobile for Atlanta to take a night train North.

Asked whether the exchange of views had touched on mistreatment of Catholic and Protestant as well as Jewish minorities, as had been indicated in official quarters, Ambassador Phillips said:

"You will have to ask the President."

Neither diplomat would predict whether the President would have any statement on the discussions at his press conference tomorrow.

Some observers saw in Wilson's hesitation to say he would remain in the National Capital indefinitely as counselor on German relations the prospect that normal diplomatic intercourse with the Nazi government would not be broken off.

The President also conferred during the day with Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, who stopped off here enroute from New Orleans to Washington, and Gov. Carl E. Bailey, of Arkansas.

Jones said he was just cleaning up "some loose ends" for the RFC.

5,000 Mexicans Vote Strike at U.S.-Owned Mine

Mexico City, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—The Miners Union tonight called a strike of 5,000 workers at the American-owned Real Del Monte mine in Hidalgo State, the world's largest silver mine.

The strike was ordered, effective December 7, after fruitless efforts by the treasury department to effect a compromise between the union and the United States Smelting & Mining Co., of Boston, Mass. The union insisted on its wage demands, which the treasury department itself believed were exorbitant, and broke off negotiations when the company refused to grant them.

Unless the strike is averted a shutdown of the mine's activities will seriously affect the treasuries of the federal government and Hidalgo, which jointly receive about $10,000 daily in taxes.

Hull Assigns Landon to Key Post at Lima

On Peace Committee
To Develop Consultation
7 Other Groups Named

By the Associated Press.

Aboard S. S. Santa Clara en route to Lima, Nov. 28.—Secretary of State Hull today appointed Alfred M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee of 1936, to a committee charged with studying the problem of strengthening peace machinery at the coming Pan-American Conference in Lima.

As chairman, Hull convoked the first full meeting of the United States delegation en route to the conference. The committee to which he appointed Landon was one of eight he set up to study topics likely to come before the parley.

Others named to the peace committee were:

Adolf A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State; R. Henry Norweb, United States minister to the Dominican Republic; Green H. Hackworth, legal adviser of the State Department, and Prof. Charles G. Fenwick, of Bryn Mawr College, with Laurence Duggan, of the State Department, as adviser.

Other Committees

Appointments to other committees included:

International law—Hackworth, Emilio del Toro Cuevas, chief justice of the Supreme Court of Puerto Rico, and Fenwick.

Economic problems—Berle, Laurence A. Steinhardt, Ambassador to Peru; Dan W. Tracy, president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (A. F. L.), and Miss Kathryn Lewis, daughter of John L. Lewis, industrial union leader.

Political and civil rights of women—Mrs. Elise F. Musser, Steinhardt and Father John F. O'Hara, president of Notre Dame University.

Intellectual co-operation and moral disarmament—Father O'Hara, Hackworth, Fenwick and Mrs. Musser.

Drafting—Norweb.

Military Alliance Dropped

Strengthening of present machinery for the maintenance of peace in the Western Hemisphere is one of the major United States goals for the Lima conference. There has been some speculation that the meeting might tighten up the convention signed at the special inter American peace conference in 1936 at Buenos Aires, whereby the signatories agreed that, in case of aggression by a non-American power against any American nation, they should consult as to the course to be pursued.

The American republics already have, in the Gondra Treaty signed at the Pan-American conference in Santiago, Chile, in 1923, an agreement regarding arbitration and conciliation of disputes threatening the peace of the hemisphere.

Although President Roosevelt has disclosed he would ask the new Congress to increase the United States' air force sufficiently to cope with any foreign aggression against either of the American continents, high officials have made it clear that the Administration had no intention of proposing a Pan-American military alliance at Lima.

If the Washington Government ever actually considered making such a proposal, any prospects of such action were dimmed by the attitude of Argentina. Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantilo commented recently that Argentina would be unwilling to consider a formal defensive bloc of American nations if it meant breaking traditional ties with unnamed European nations.

Say, it—with a Clear Skin

OUR SKIN frequently reflects how we feel. In business and social contacts we like our friends to tell us how well we look.

The laity now recognizes—as physicians and scientists have for years—the vital importance of rich, red blood, as the foundation of strength, energy, and a clear healthy skin.

for that tired-let-down feeling

It is well known how worry, overwork and undue strain take their toll of the precious red cells of the blood.

S.S.S. Tonic brings you new strength and vitality by restoring your blood to a healthy state, and its benefits are cumulative and enduring in the absence of an organic trouble.

improves the appetite

Further, S.S.S. Tonic whets the appetite . . . foods taste better . . . natural digestive juices are stimulated, and finally, the food you eat is of more value . . . a very important step back to health.

Buy and use with complete confidence, and we believe you, like thousands of others, will be enthusiastic in your praise of S.S.S. Tonic for its part in making "you feel like yourself again."

Spain Gives Goyas To Mrs. Roosevelt

Barcelona, Nov. 28 (AP).—Spanish government authorities today exhibited an especially bound set of Goya etchings which will be presented to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The etchings by the famed nineteenth century Spanish artist are one of the final series impressed from the original plates in Madrid during the war.

Each of the four volumes bears the inscription "Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Souvenir of the Spanish People, Autumn, 1938."

Luis Quintanilla, Spanish architect who will paint the frescoes for the Spanish building at the New York World Fair, will take the set to the United States.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Relations With Colombia

The recent exchange of felicitations between Colombia and the United States is of more than routine significance. It provides effective evidence of the growth of practical inter-American solidarity and thus constitutes a hopeful augury of what the Lima conference may hold in store.

There was a time when relations between this Nation and Colombia were far from cordial. Colombia resented the loss of Panama, attributing this development to American intrigue. Sentiment hostile to the United States was thus easily stirred up in that South American republic whose strategic position, since the construction of the Panama Canal, has been of the first importance to our defense system.

Happily, the ill-feeling that obtained in Colombia a generaton ago has now almost wholly vanished. Not long since, as a mark of mutual esteem, the two nations raised their legations to the status of embassies. More recently the Colombian Senate passed a resolution expressing its "gratitude and admiration" to President Roosevelt for his good-neighbor policy, and for having so warmly espoused the concept of American solidarity. And now the United States has agreed to Colombia's request for American aviation and naval missions to act in an advisory capacity for that republic.

Colombia is by no means the first Latin-American republic which, in seeking to modernize its defenses, has sought the aid of our Army and Navy. There are three American Naval officers in the Argentine War College. There is an American Army aviation mission at Buenos Aires. Brazil and Peru have American Naval missions while the former country has an American Coast Artillery expert as a technical adviser. There is also an American military mission in Haiti and an American Army officer is the head of the miltary college in Guatemala.

The fact that Colombia is following the example set by these sister republics is, at this moment, of particular importance. At a time when the Western Hemisphere is increasingly under attack from totalitarian propaganda, the development of close relations between the Nation which is suzerain in the Panama Canal Zone and the nation on the other side of Panama is particularly timely. For, as Secretary of War Woodring has pointed out in his annual report, the military importance of the Panama Canal is greater now than ever before. And that fact alone would emphasize the desirability of the current exchange of felicitations between Colombia and the United States.

Student Failures

Dean Everett W. Lord of Boston University concludes on the basis of a study of student records that nearly half those who registered as freshmen in the Nation's colleges this fall will fail to receive their diplomas within the allotted space of four years. He particularly deplores the fact that thousands of students are dropped from college because of inability to measure up to the scholastic standards of their respective institutions. These unfortunates are, he says, "in effect, blacklisted by all other colleges, and to a certain extent, by business."

Dean Lord suggests, therefore, the establishment of "reclamation departments" to help such students. No doubt a certain number of the academically unfit could be reclaimed by such means. But many of those dropped are simply not what is commonly called "college material."

The presence in our colleges of thousands of students who, sooner or later, have to be dropped from the rolls indicates a laxity of admission requirements and an absence of preliminary tests which would exclude potential failures. The work of reclamation should begin before the student is accepted, not after he has demonstrated his incapacity. That may seem a harsh edict because it would eliminate some ill-prepared applicants who are capable of making good. But it would keep out many more whose inadequate training or limited mental capacity make failure inevitable.

The growing belief that a college education should be available to the multitude instead of being reserved for those who are ready and able to meet reasonable tests is responsible for many of the failures which Dean Lord rightly deplores. If the misfits are kept out of college, they will not only avoid the stigma attaching to failure but, in many cases, they will find work better suited to their talents in an environment much more conducive to developing their latent abilities.

Time To Face Facts

Farmers all over the country are rediscovering that their freedom of action is a precious right. So long as farmers hoped that control of agriculture from Washington would enhance their incomes a majority were willing to forgo independent management of their own land. The sharp decline in prices during the last year is no doubt largely responsible for their change of heart. But that does not minimize the significance of the present reaction against governmental controls.

The elections this month left no question as to the unpopularity of the agricultural adjustment act of 1938 among farmers. It remained, however, for the National Grange to put this protest against "regimentation of the farmer" into words. The grange has never approved of the second AAA. Now its appeal for "self-determination" for farmers is coupled with an outright demand for revision of the farm act.

In taking this position the grange appears to have concluded that the sacrifices which the AAA program entails outweigh the advantages of Federal crop control. That is a realistic view, as any glance at present commodity prices and the sharp restrictions of the farm act will show. The desire of farmers to be free from restraints which have thus far failed of their purpose can be readily appreciated.

It is when the grange turns from this critical note and calls for a "lifting of farm prices" that the weakness of its case becomes apparent. Secretary Wallace and his aides have put forth strenuous efforts to maintain agricultural prices at a reasonable level. Drastic controls have been invoked only because officials believed these devices would improve the economic position of the farmer. In most cases it is obvious that farm prices have fallen in spite of these efforts, not because of them.

Considering these facts, it would be fantastic to suppose that commodity prices could be lifted by allowing farmers to increase present surpluses without restraint. After the experience of the Federal Farm Board, control of agricultural output was properly recognized as a necessary first step to any artificial boosting of prices. Certainly the failure of the AAA to maintain satisfactory prices with acreage restriction does not mean that controls can be dropped and the parity price goal retained.

It is time for farmers to face the fact that if they are to manage their own affairs they will have to accept prices fixed by the factors of supply and demand. The experience of recent years should be sufficient to teach them that no government at Washington can perform miracles. Attempts to maintain prices without restrictions on output are a direct path to governmental bankruptcy. Attempts to fix prices by reducing output mean a loss of some foreign markets and disturbing encroachments upon the farmer's right to manage his own business.

Failure of both these approaches to the farm problem has led to considerable support for the idea of a two-price system. But aside from its impracticability, that scheme would be, as Senator Clark has pointed out, a dangerous stimulus to class hatred. It can scarcely be considered as a long-range solution of the farmer's troubles.

There are many ways in which the Government can aid the farmer, such as research into new uses of various commodities and aid in genuine conservation of the soil. But no administration can guarantee prosperity on the farm. In the long run more actual progress toward stability in agriculture could probably be made by abandoning the idea of boosting prices through legislation and emphasizing the desirability of balanced production on "family-sized" farms that will yield an adequate livelihood.

New Profession

When a strike is called it usually signifies the absence of any reasonable procedure for settling the dispute. Strikes are always a nightmare for employers. And they are certainly equally unpleasant for the great majority of employes. A walkout may result in loss of jobs. In any event it will mean temporary loss of pay. Consequently no responsible union sponsors the strike except as a last resort, when a vital issue is at stake.

Because of the disadvantages of the strike for employes as well as employers, and the general public disapproval of industrial warfare, it is increasingly asked why so many labor disputes are allowed to drift into that stage. One obvious answer is the weakness of industrial conciliation and arbitration machinery in this country. Granted the means of settling a dispute, on the basis of attested facts and impartial judgment, the number of walkouts would be greatly reduced.

Ample proof of this conclusion may be found in the experience of Dr. G. W. Taylor, of the University of Pennsylvania's industrial research department. Dr. Taylor has become a professional conciliator. Under contracts covering more than 300 mills and factories he serves as the adjuster of disputes that might otherwise lead to friction and strikes. In the hosiery industry he has settled more than 1,200 disagreements to the satisfaction of both sides and without a major strike. And there are many other private individuals doing equally useful public service in this field.

As the story of these accomplishments spreads it will undoubtedly stimulate other industries and labor unions to seek the services of impartial and competent conciliators. For employers and employed alike realize that a strike seldom settles any issue. It is only a singularly inefficient way of bringing a dispute to a climax, thus making the negotiation of a settlement imperative. If a reasonable settlement on the basis of facts can be anticipated without resort to force, only an unreasonable minority on either side will ever favor the latter course.

Development of more adequate facilities for arbitration and conciliation of labor disputes is likely to be the next important step in the improvement of industrial relations. Unionism has made great strides in recent years. It has been the task of the National Labor Relations Board to remove the obstacles to organization of workers in agencies of their own choice. The more successful the board is in this effort the greater will become the need for techniques of conciliation between the chosen representatives of both sides.

Much valuable conciliation work has been done by the Department of Labor. This function within the department should be strengthened. In many cases, however, it is questionable whether the Government department representing labor can serve as effectively as private conciliators. Dr. Taylor believes that labor arbitration is "almost a new profession in the making." Further light may be thrown on both the growth and need for such a profession by the survey of labor relations to be undertaken under the auspices of the Twentieth Century Fund. If so, it will render a timely and vital public service.

Browder's Brainstorm

At the same meeting in which he urged the development of a Russian-American alliance, Earl Browder denied that the American Communist Party, of which he is general secretary, is directed from Moscow. The denial is welcome. At least one may hope that Soviet diplomacy is not seriously playing with the idea of developing the "Washington-Moscow axis" which Mr. Browder favors.

Even if the United States were far less able to protect itself than is the case, any proposal for an alliance with Russia could be considered only to be repudiated. In the first place, the Communist system, whatever Mr. Browder may say on the subject, is an utter repudiation of the whole American concept of freedom. From the viewpoint of preserving American ideals it would be as rational to make an alliance with Berlin as with Moscow. As a matter of fact, the philosophy of those two capitals is identical in their glorification of the authority of a dictatorial party at the expense of all individual liberty.

In the second place, close relations with Russia, as the record abundantly proves, are always disastrous for those who accept them. Czecho-Slovakia had an alliance with Russia, and in the test it proved valuable only in aiding the dismemberment of that country. Republican Spain has leaned heavily on Russian support, and no other single factor has been more helpful in stimulating and assisting Franco's rebellion. France has an alliance with Russia, and perhaps partly for that reason its government now faces a Communist-indorsed general strike.

Russian military assistance has undoubtedly helped the Chinese in resisting Japanese aggression. But this very assistance, plus Soviet penetration in the past, has given the Japanese imperialists the excuse of proclaiming a "holy war" against communism with which to whitewash their aggression. Wherever Russia intervenes, in other words, her actions weaken the unity of the country to whom she offers aid, furthering disintegration from within as well as destructive pressures from without.

Indeed, when the history of the present disturbed period takes final form it will undoubtedly be demonstrated that the whole doctrine of fascism in large part arose as a natural and spontaneous revolt against the revolutionary implications of communism. Bolshevik endeavors to destroy national governments have, wherever the threat was serious, led to hyper-nationalistic reactions using the Communist menace as an excuse—and a not unreasonable excuse—for their excesses. This evolution can easily be traced wherever there is a Fascist government today.

Since communism is a disease which breeds the fever of fascism, all suggestions of an alliance with communism in opposition to fascism are, in restrained language, pernicious nonsense. Nobody is surprised when Mr. Browder makes suggestions of that character. But it is welcome to have his assertion that he is not talking under direction from Moscow. Otherwise it would be necessary to say flatly that in the list of silly ideas that of a Russian-American military alliance is close to being supreme.

Problem Of Old Age

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Today the world is watching the Townsend plan. This pension movement has become one of the greatest forces for justice and a square deal that has ever been sponsored by so many people. The political parties are watching this great force and today begin to recognize the handwriting as it appears on the wall.

The Republican Party says of the Democrats: "They give you $12 a month and pauperism. Vote for us and we will give you a reasonable annuity." The Democrats say: "We gave you the Social Security Law." Of this law they can add nothing further. And it has left millions of our older people today in want.

Old age should be the most gracious time of life, a time when man can reap rewards for whatever good he has done. Old folks as a rule make no unwarranted demands on the world. They want peace, modest comfort, a sense of dignity. They want not honor nor reverence so much as simple respect. They are content usually to let their last years be quiet echoes of earlier years.

But today when a man gets old and finds that the world has turned too fast for him, he begins to feel afraid. The fears of the old are not pleasant. They fear cold and hunger, they are afraid of sickness. And of loneliness, oblivion, afraid that they will be forgotten. Ignored and thrust from the affairs of life. Today two-thirds of our fathers and mothers are supported by children and relatives.

The poorhouse is an inhuman system, and does not appeal to the American people nor fill our needs in this modern world. Of all ways for caring for the old none is more degrading than poorhouses. Often untrained grafters maltreat their wards for their own main profit. But even the best run poorhouse squeezes from its inmates all feeling of dignity. If it gives them grudging comfort, it gives them also the mark of the pauper. Above all it takes the inmates away from the world and consigns them to oblivion.

The present social security legislation will never give satisfaction. But the Townsend welfare bill will. In other words, we want a standardized annuity program that fits in with a modern world. One that does not destroy the independence or the liberty of our fathers and mothers, leaving them to travel or reside in any State they choose.

Christmas Has A Meaning

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Bits of shiny ribbons! The happy anticipation and sound of tissue-paper crinkling about packages of all sizes and shapes! This means preparation for Christmas! How we all love it!

"Peace on earth, good will toward men!" Peace! Where is it? And, ironically enough, we Americans will purchase beautiful, glistening, painted Christmas balls with which to don our trees—labeled: "Made in Germany." These trinkets, then, to be used in decoration and to celebrate a season commemorating the birth of Christ, a Jew, who advocated peace on earth!

We'll purchase, also, "such cunning gifts" to present our friends—marked with the symbol of the Rising Sun. This, at Christmastide!

Why must we patronize foreign, non-Christian, militaristic nations, and of all times—at Christmas? Actually, we don't have to. Our own American stores carry American-made goods at exceptionally reasonable prices.

Let's buy our gifts from a Nation to whom Christmas has a meaning. A Nation that is leading the world in practicing Peace; a Nation in which persecuted religious and political minorities have always found a haven. And—what better country to patronize than our own America!

An International Question

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Nationals of every country have participated in wars, the matter of religion having no place in their determination. In this connection it is noteworthy that Jews have not evaded patriotic duty to their country, but have made human and material sacrifices, as did others, in its behalf. This, of course, applies to Germany as to the rest of the world.

In other respects Jews are notoriously peaceful; do not provide or encourage aggression. However, torn from families and surreptitiously thrown into concentration camps (torture jails), it is beyond belief that they offer no resistance in defense of self or family. They realize struggle is futile. Human nature compels the will to live despite impending doom. Yet words cannot adequately explain the meek individual submission of these persecuted people.

To term the present state of affairs in Germany as purely an internal matter is ridiculous.

Is humanitarianism to be confined to certain groups? Or does the brotherhood of man really mean just that? Practically all religious leaders incline to the latter view.

The writer, born in America of naturalized German parents, has very few kin still living in Germany; one cousin, a lawyer, has long since been deprived of all means of sustenance. Many other Americans are directly or indirectly related to German Jews. Officially the treatment of these relatives is no concern of ours (as a Nation). Maybe so, but in a democracy the official government is the people as a whole.

I am impelled to quote from a letter received by me today from a relative in Germany which is translated literally. (The author signs her initials only and refers to her husband as "the stout one," fearful of reprisal should her identity become known.)

"The stout one is no longer with us. He was interned (in concentration camp) November 10 . . . I am frantic with uncertainty and no information as to where he was sent. He is not well, having suffered recently a nervous breakdown. Will you please see if you can do anything to have him returned to us."

If all people even distantly related to the oppressed in Germany were to receive a similar communication perhaps the situation would be considered internationally instead of internally German.

Mothers' Guild

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

How about an American Mothers and Housewives Guild, with the President's mother, as first mother of the land at the head of it. Only qualifications to membership: To be a good apple pie maker and to know how to get husbands and sons up every morning in time for work. No politics; just harmony. Open all meetings with prayer and close 'em with prosperity. First resolutions to be against war, oppression, poor cooking and too-long skirts.

Honorary members: The President and Cabinet, Senators and Representatives, all foreign ambassadors and their bosses. Washington was the father of our country, an' it's about time we had a mother, or a whole flock of American mothers, to look after us.

On Wasting Money

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The vast amount of space taken up by the press these days on the subject of wasting money gives rise to the question as to just "what is wasting money?"

Nationally speaking, no money spent in this country and remaining in this country is wasted, regardless of what it is spent for, whether it be on construction, a rearmament program, work relief, or bonuses for farmers. Somebody gets the money. It is still here. It has simply passed from one pocket to another. The trouble is that each of us thinks it should be in our own pockets. As individuals, it is difficult for us to think nationally.

Nationally speaking, the only way to lose or waste money is to destroy it, or to destroy what is represents, burn it up, tear it up, or hide it for keeps where nobody can get at it, or have the use of it. If we build a battleship in this country and the ship is blown up, we still have the money in this country that it cost to build the ship, but if we buy the battleship from England say, we have the ship and England has the money, and if the ship is blown up we have neither the ship nor the money and the whole thing is a total loss. The money or what the money represents, has been lost.

Nationally speaking, what does it matter whether the money for a construction project has been paid by a municipality, jointly between a municipality and the Federal Government or by either? If the Federal Government put in no money, the municipality would be obliged to put it all in. Participation by the Federal Government has increased the national debt and reduced the debt of the municipality. Nationally speaking, it all amounts to the same thing. As said before, it is difficult for individuals in a democracy to think in terms nationally.

"As Bad As Hitler"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I read a long article in one of our local papers about a meeting held in a prominent Washington hotel in which the speakers condemned the dictatorship in Germany in no uncertain terms.

But they seem to condone the type of dictatorship in Russia, also the attempt to establish a similar dictatorship in Spain. Worse than that, they suggested we help to set up a dictator in Spain by lifting the embargo on ammunition and supplies to the reds of Spain.

As grave atrocities as those going on in Germany have been going on in Russia, Spain and other countries.

In June, 1936, Gil Robles again appealed to the Cortes for fair play, for the right to life, liberty and property. He presented to the deputies a list of atrocities, in part, as follows: Churches destroyed, 60; churches partly damaged by fire and assault, 231; newspapers and newspaper offices totally destroyed, 10; newspaper offices attacked, 33; towns where churches were closed by mayors, 69; persons killed and wounded, 1,566.

The appeal of the leaders of the right and center failed, the time for revolt came when on July 13, 1936, Carlo Sotelo, the leader of the right, was brutally murdered by the state police. It was then that Gen. Franco declared with dignity: "Anarchy prevails in Spain. Our country is menaced by foreign forces. Our people are tricked by Soviet agents. The constitution is in eclipse. We cannot endure the shameful spectacle Spain has become."

There are those who would warn America against one form of dictatorship while they are encouraging another form. And they profess to be Americans, representing the true American ideals.

There is no middle course to pursue in this question. You are faithful and loyal to American idealism or disloyal. Those who favor communism are as bad as Hitler!

True Americanism is against all forms of dictatorship!

The Post Impressionist

Tonsorial

COL. BASIL MERRIWETHER JONES was sententiously reminiscent yesterday and, as I am a good listener, he picked on me. I think it is because Nature is providing me with a tonsure that so many people treat me as their father confessor; but, however that may be, the Colonel started in without preface:

"Man that is born of a woman is subject to her, and her sisters, all his days and knoweth no peace. I know not why this should be so, but so it is. True, I've known certain conceited asses, certain old codgers who pretended they were masters in their own house; that they and they alone wore the trousers; and that no woman ever bossed them.

"Bah! Those fellows had just escaped padded cells, and didn't know it. They were victims of auto-compensatory hallucinations and were actually the worst specimens in the gross lot of the henpecked. Don't tell me to the contrary! The man who isn't henpecked lives in a monastery—but even there the fear of his mother, or his sister, will follow him. You, yourself, Wade, are one of the aristocracy of hen-peckdom and wear your honors and decorations with becoming modesty. As for me, I early learned the inexcusable law of male subjection and have patiently submitted to it all my life.

"Yes, sir! When I get orders from General Headquarters I know that, ultimately, those orders must be obeyed. I may higgle about it; I may stall and delay; but, sooner or later, I obey. Of course, being a so-called reasonable animal, I ought to say 'Eventually, why not now?' but I don't. And that goes back to the inherent cussedness of the genus homo, non-sapiens.

"Look at me, Wade! Does my hair need cutting? On the contrary doesn't it need cultivation and a good dose of top-dressing? Yet, here I am wasting thirty minutes, out of the slender thread of life yet remaining, waiting for the barber to cut my hair. And, all because my daughter ordered that sacrifice.

"Two weeks ago she gently hinted that a hair cut would improve my appearance. I knew then what the upshot would be; but I ignored the suggestion politely and with a bit of banter put it by. Then, from time to time, she insinuated the approaching doom; and I dodged and made excuse as best I could. But, this morning, the ukase was issued in final form:

"'Father, you will have your hair cut today. Tomorrow we go to Mrs. Thingleton's reception.'

"And, boy! here am I!

"As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever has been, world most contrary! During the reign of the beloved Arabella, she saw to hair-cutting, clothes ordering, and toted my cards around to people I never knew. Did I say a word? Not above a whisper.

"I was a model husband, I'd have you to know. And her last words were addressed to our daughter: 'Maybelle, look after your father like a good daughter. The poor dear never knows how to groom himself.'

"And Maybelle looks after me, believe me! She not only looks after me, she looks before me, and directly at me!

"Why, Wade, this miserable wreck you see before you is the end-product of the continuous petticoat government under which I have lived. When I was a little boy, up to the age of seven, my mother kept me in curls, yes, sir! in curls! Just like a girl. I was uncomfortable; but, being husky the other kids didn't say all they thought about me. Not twice. But, the curls were not the worst of my humiliation; my mother, blessed in all other respects, insisted on doing my top hair in a roach! Think of that!

"Well, at last my father said that the 'mother's darling' stuff had gone far enough and the curls and the roach came off. He took me to the barber's shop himself. My first impression was of the long row after row of glittering shaving mugs each with the owner's name in gilt letters. They looked so bright and pretty, that I wanted one.

"'Not yet, my son, not yet! You'll have one soon enough; for these are the outward signs of Mr. Watson's domination of the male neighborhood. Unless your name is on one of these mugs, you simply do not belong, that's all.'

"Well, sir, sitting there I saw a picture paper and picked it up. As soon as my father saw what I had he snatched it away from me. I learned later that that was the pink Police Gazette; that it was seldom seen outside of a barber shop; and that it specialized in rather intimate details of the female form. But, at that it had nothing on our present bathing-beauties."

"You see, I'm a reasonably modest man. When the pretty girl on the opposite side of the car crosses her legs and shows the knees, my eyes automatically take it all in. Then I am embarrassed and try to look elsewhere—without success. But the totalitarian bathing beauties get my goat. And you can hardly open a paper without encountering a bevy of them.

"I'm afraid I am too mid-Victorian to keep abreast of the times. When I was a young man it was considered very daring in a merchant to put in the papers an outline cut of a corset; now they show what, I believe, are called 'foundations' with the lady still in them. And stockings are advertised by showing the entire leg, full-fashioned.

"Well, I'll admit that in the hoop-skirt age the hoop sometimes flared up, and——"

"Colonel, I'm waiting for you, sir," the barber said.

The Colonel arose and, as he moved to his doom, he turned his head and addressed me:

"Wade, bear witness that this old bellwether is going unwillingly to the shearing pen. If I should succumb kindly tell my daughter that my last thoughts were of her."

Fair Enough

Defends New York

A FEW WEEKS AGO these dispatches raised a faint, impatient yip against the homeward yearning of many Americans who come to New York, prosper here, enjoy the life of the metropolis and raise families in New York but never permit themselves to become New Yorkers and nevertheless complain of the nonassimilation of foreigners. The chief offender was the late O. O. McIntyre with his dozens of bathrobes and his racks of expensive suits in a Park avenue apartment, who was always picking out on his typewriter the notes of "How Dear to My Heart Are the Scenes of My Childhood" but didn't go back to Gallipolis until he died and would have pined away for the sights and sounds and luxuries of New York had he ever made the break. With Mr. McIntyre, of course, it was an act. Like some of the old-time vaudeville men, he hit upon something which pleased his audience and never saw any reason to experiment with new material. However, he spoke for thousands of others who have settled here and done much better than they could have done back home but will never tie loose from Jones Corners or Hickory Center in the spiritual sense and speak of their old home grounds only to disparage New York.

PEGLER

HAD I KNOWN THAT A. J. Liebling was writing a book on this subject from the standpoint of a New Yorker I might have left the protest entirely to him, for he has done it much better in a work called "Back Where I Came From," which I recommend to all members of the Indiana Society, the Minnesota Society and of all the other American Sudeten groups, including the Siwash alumni. I am not a native New Yorker, but I long ago realized that the tradition of heartlessness was false, and, perhaps a little against my will, became thoroughly naturalized, so to speak, forswearing my previous devotion to other parts.

Mr. Liebling, however, is a native who says in his opening chapter, "apology for breathing, I have no place to go back to. Friends tell me of their excitement when the train passes from Indiana into Illinois or back again. I am ashamed to admit that when the Jerome Avenue express rolls into the Eighty-sixth Street Station I have absolutely no reaction."

MR. LIEBLING sees New York as one of the oldest American places which does not live in retrospect "like the professionally American provinces," but keeps renewing itself so that the past is perennially forgotten.

"Native New Yorkers," he writes, "are the best mannered people in America; they never speak out of turn in saloons because they have experience in group etiquette. Whenever you hear a drinker let a blat out of him you can be sure he is a recent immigrant from the South or Middle West." He observes that New Yorkers are modest, whereas prairie geniuses "raced in cheap company when young," feel themselves to be boy wonders and resent it "when they bounce off New York's skin as adults."

WHEN I WAS A CUB around here I was impressed by the generous helpfulness of the older reporters on the mass assignment. On ship news, the regulars on the run, men who knew the tricks and mysteries of combing a big ship arriving or sailing, would go over a boat themselves, gather everything worth knowing and then sit down at a table to trade material. I was not only bashful but ashamed to come to these conferences empty handed, but any newcomer always was welcome whether or not he had anything of his own to contribute, and Ross Whytock, one of the stars of those exacting days when the harbor was a very important point of international news, several times singled me out for no reason except that he was kind and I was plainly dazed, to make certain that I had missed nothing.

On several sport assignments Tom Thorp, a native New Yorker, did the same, and this active charity by self-assured stars who knew their way around was the more impressive because back where I came from, that land of the stronger handclasp and the clearer eye, reporters would not only scoop one another for the delight of scoring a petty advantage at the desk but would even give false information to a greenhorn for no other reason, apparently, than the pleasure it gave them to get him canned.

Stockyards Strike 'Progress' Made

Chicago, Nov. 28 (AP).—Conciliators striving to end a C. I. O. strike that has paralyzed trade at the Chicago stock yards for eight days reported today they had made "some progress." Another peace parley between strikers and stock yard officials has been arranged for tomorrow.

A back-to-work movement sponsored by an American Federation of Labor handlers organization collapsed during the day. Thomas Devero, business agent of the A. F. of L. local, had planned to put between 150 and 200 men to work at 6 a. m., but O. T. Henkle, general manager of the yards, disclosed none had reported for duty.

Backward to Forward

To the goggle-eyed readers of popular books, nazism stems back to fascism, and was the strange fruit of the threat of bolshevism. But behind bolshevism, and back even of Marx, there were Herder and Fichte. And before Hitler, or Lenin or Mussolini, there was Robespierre. Before five-year plans, there was mercantilism.

The man who would like to know what may happen in the future should learn what has happened in the past. For the future is but an extension of the present, which in turn is but a continuation of the past. The writings of the economists of the past will give you a clue to the economics of the future. The social problems which will be given official cognizance in the future have all been outlined by sociologists whose work is now finished. Housing? Who has heard of Booth? Economic planning? Who has heard of Colbert? Vitamins? Who has heard of Sherman? Family needs? Who has heard of Le Play?

It seems to us that the intelligent person reads his popular books before they are written. The scholar pokes around in the mold and cobwebs of the past—but what he finds there is the seed from which the future will flower.

Canada And The Pact

By Our Ottawa Correspondent

Dominion's Reaction Is Favorable

Ottawa.

THE CANADIAN PEOPLE have now had more than a week to study and appraise the pair of complementary trade agreements which were signed at Washington on November 1 and on the whole their verdict is favorable.

A number of manufacturers are bewailing the reduction of their protection, which, however, is in no case very serious. The fruit-growers of the Annapolis and Okanagan Valleys and other regions feel that the sacrifice which has been exacted from them in the shape of the curtailment of their preferential privileges in the British market might well have fallen on other shoulders. The citizens of the ports of Halifax and St. John think that the abolition of the wheat preference will cause grain traffic to be diverted to American ports and diminish their prosperity.

But the dominant feeling throughout Canada is that, while sectional interests may suffer, the nation as a whole will gain in two ways: First, by freer access to the American market for a variety of products of the basic natural industries, which are the strongest buttresses of Canada's national economy. Second, and more important, by the timely demonstration in critical days of the fundamental solidarity of the three leading Anglo-Saxon democracies and of their ability to co-operate for their mutual benefit.

THE POLITICIANS have naturally been trying to gauge the possible effect of the Canadian-American pact upon party fortunes. The Liberals think that they now have available a winning card for the next federal election. Some of them would like to appeal to the country before the glamour of the agreement has worn off, but it would be impossible to hold a general election before King George and Queen Elizabeth have finished their Canadian visit, which will be about the middle of June, and thereafter any party which tries to hold an election before the harvest is finished is liable to court unpopularity with the farmers.

The present Parliament has nearly two more years of its statutory life, and a general election need not take place before the fall of 1940. But Canadian ministries rarely let a Parliament run its full term and it is quite in the cards that the Liberals might appeal for a new mandate in the fall of 1939 and try to make the trade agreement the dominant issue. They would expect to lose seats in Halifax and St. John and some industrial divisions in Ontario and Quebec, and they would also feel anxious about the fruit-growing sections.

But Mr. Ilsley, the Minister of national revenue whose indorsement of the pact was considered dubious because he sits for the Annapolis Valley in Nova Scotia, a famous apple-growing center, has accepted it. Indeed he has boldly defended it, with apparent success, to his constituents on the ground that, if there has been some sacrifice of the preference on apples, ample compensation has been secured for Nova Scotia through the American concessions to its fishing industry and to other parts of Canada and that the domestic sale of apples is certain to be increased.

Against these probable losses the Liberals think that they will have gained the good-will of various classes of agriculturists, the dairymen of the border counties, the ranchers of Western Canada, the potato growers of the maritime provinces and the producers of maple sirup and that they will hold many rural seats which they otherwise might have lost through normal swing of the pendulum.

Also, the ministers feel they have found a method of pacifying an insurgent group of their own Western supporters, who for the last two sessions have been complaining bitterly about the government's failure to redeem its pre-election pledges about tariff reform and have been threatening to stage a real rebellion next session. The cuts in the industrial duties are expected to placate these malcontents and although the Conservatives will try to make political capital in the prairie provinces about the abolition of the preference on Canadian wheat, there seems to be a division of opinion in the grain trade about whether it had ever any real value for the Canadian grain grower.

THE CONSERVATIVE PARTY had been hoping that it would find in the Canadian-American agreement a good issue for the revival of its somewhat dilapidated fortunes but among its leaders there is evidently some doubt about the wisdom of outright opposition to it.

Dr. Manion, the new Conservative leader, who has just regained his place in the House of Commons by winning a federal by-election at London, Ontario, has contented himself with offering some very temperate criticisms of the pact and posing some questions about its possible adverse consequences for certain Canadian interests. He and other critics are making a good deal of the fact that countries like Japan and Germany, which have trade treaties with Canada containing a most-favored-nation clause, will be able to claim under this clause the benefit of all reductions in the Canadian tariff which have been conceded to the United States, and that the door has been opened for an additional inflow of cheap German and Japanese goods.

But the defenders of the new pact point out that against such developments two safeguards were deliberately created: First, the careful reservation of tariff concessions to articles which do not enter Canada in any large quantity from any country except the United States; second, a provision which empowers the Canadian government, if it finds that some other country than the United States is getting the chief benefit of a cut in a tariff schedule, to raise the scale of duty.

WHEN THE PACT comes before Parliament the Conservatives will criticize many features of it and champion the cause of the aggrieved manufacturing interests who are contending that increased American competition will soon force them to reduce their level of operations and dismiss workers with a resulting aggravation of unemployment. But it is unlikely that they will try to repeat the tactics of parliamentary obstruction to which they successfully resorted against the Taft-Fielding pact in 1911 as a preliminary to compassing its defeat at a general election.

They are numerically weaker in the House of Commons than they have ever been in their history, as they have only 39 seats out of 245, while the Liberals as the result of a gain in a by-election have now 180 and can also probably count upon the support of a majority of the C. C. F. and Social Credit groups for the agreement.

ONE RESULT of the Canadian-American agreement will be to increase the difficulties of the King government about its next budget. Mr. Dunning, the minister of finance, had in his last budget speech predicted a deficit of about $25,000,000 for the fiscal year 1937-1938. But his calculations had been upset by the decision of the government to guarantee a minimum price of 80 cents per bushel for western wheat, a commitment which will probably require between 40 and 50 millions.

Now the special import excise tax of 3 per cent, which has been wiped out upon American goods, has yielded as much as $18,000,000 in a single year, and, although the yield of other customs and excise duties may rise from an increase in imports, there is bound to be an inconvenient loss of revenue for the last quarter of the current fiscal year, when the special import tax disappears. So it is being forecast that the government when it produces its balance sheet for 1938-39 will have to admit a budget deficit of at least $70,000,000, which will be an unpleasant dose for the country.

A. C. Elgin to Carry On Partner's Law Firm

In reporting the death Sunday of Robert E. L. The fact is that Arthur C. Elgin became Smith's partner at that time and now will carry on the firm.

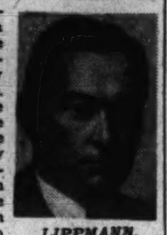
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The President's Opportunity And His Choice

IN THIS INTERVAL between the elections in November and the convening of the new Congress in January the President will make a decision which will affect the course of history for many years to come. He will decide whether he will lead the country through conciliation to an internal peace or through conflict to disunion.



LIPPMANN.

He can choose. Among the statesmen of the world he is in this respect unique, that by his own free choice he can still elect whether he will proceed by uniting or by dividing his countrymen. Elsewhere, it is perhaps too late to make this choice. In the revolutionary despotisms the grim logic of events is such that the irreparable acts of the past determine inexorably the actions of the future; in other lands, France, for example, the discord within the nation is so deep and the dangers from without are so menacing that ordinary solutions seem possible only if at the eleventh hour there is an altogether extraordinary expression of national feeling.

But here in the United States it is the fact, and in the modern world it is an astounding fact, that there is no internal crisis, that there are no irreconcilable conflicts, that the prevailing opinion is overwhelmingly moderate, good-tempered and well-disposed, and that only by deliberately provoking a struggle can the people be seriously divided.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S choice is either to recognize this and to build his policies and his programs upon this general desire for national union or to disrupt it and precipitate a struggle of classes and sections. The outcome depends not so much on what he wants to do, on his "objectives," as it does on the spirit in which he acts and on the method which he adopts. He can preserve, he can strengthen, he can extend all his essential reforms if he chooses the road to internal peace. But if he proclaims another crusade, treats his opponents as enemies of the people and his critics as conspirators, he will not only jeopardize all that he has accomplished but he will set in motion forces that for years to come will confuse the Nation.

All the indications since the elections are that he would prefer to choose the road to peace. If this is the road he means to take, the way to proceed is to remove from the field of controversy the issues which tend most seriously to divide the Nation.

IT IS EASY ENOUGH to see where those issues lie. They exist in the administration of relief, in the administration of the Labor Relations Board, and in the administration of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

In regard to relief, the issue is not whether the Federal Government shall accept the final responsibility for seeing that no one starves and that no willing worker is demoralized by involuntary idleness; the only issue is whether the Federal funds shall be administered by the President's personal agent or whether both political parties, the States, and the localities shall share the responsibility and the power. In regard to the Labor Relations Board, the issue is not whether the Government shall protect the right of collective bargaining but whether the procedure under the law shall be partisan or impartial.

And in regard to the TVA, the issue is not whether the Federal Government shall conduct this great experiment but whether or not the experiment shall be conducted in an arbitrary way.

WERE THE PRESIDENT willing to recognize the real issue in these three matters, and then to redress the grievances of his most responsible critics, he would strengthen rather than weaken his position. Does it do him any good, for example, to be charged incessantly with trying to buy elections with the relief money? Certainly not. He would be far stronger with the voters as a whole if the responsibility for administering relief were shared by the two parties. But what is more important, he would disarm the opposition at the point where the attack is most dangerous, and he would remove the fear which is widespread among sober men that relief might become a device for perpetuating the supremacy of a faction within one of the parties.

AS FOR THE LABOR Relations Board would it really weaken the protection offered to collective bargaining to amend the law and the procedure so that they would no longer be and would no longer seem arbitrary and unfair? I think not. The fact that the act is arbitrary and unfair discourages the employers and many of the employes who would be disposed to co-operate; the feeling that the act is arbitrary and unfair is of the greatest assistance to those who are not disposed to co-operate. The act would be stronger if it were amended because then its real enemies would be isolated.

THE SAME REASONING holds for the TVA. As long as the private companies who have to come to terms with it have no impartial tribunal to which they can take their grievances, and have them objectively examined and decided, the experiment will poison all the relations between Government and private business. It will appear that the Administration is creating public agencies which cannot effectively be called to account anywhere by those who feel that they are being injured.

As long as that is the way the experiment seems to be conducted, it will incite unceasing opposition. Yet nothing would be lost, and much would be gained, by accepting the principle that a Government monopoly, no less than a private monopoly, is under the law and may be called to account before an impartial tribunal.

THERE IS NO DOUBT, I think, that if Mr. Roosevelt would reform his reforms on these three matters, he would liquidate the issues around which the really deep opposition is gathered. He would strengthen beyond calculation his moral authority in the world. For he would be demonstrating the very thing which most needs to be demonstrated, that it is possible in a democracy to realize great social reforms within the framework of thoroughly constitutional government, without the establishment of arbitrary power, and with scrupulous respect not only for the forms but for the spirit of law.

His reward would be the preservation of his reforms, the release of constructive energies throughout the economy, the cooling of party passions, and an outpouring of good will in which great things, healing and productive things, could be done. All this he can have for the choosing if only he will seize the opportunity which destiny offers him.

Press Wire Rate Cited to Uphold Government Tolls

By the Associated Press.

Examiner J. Fred Johnson of the Communications Commission overruled a contention yesterday that telegraphic charges for press messages had no part in a hearing on charges made for Government telegrams.

Robert M. Cooper, special Assistant to the Attorney General, asked a Western Union Telegraph Co. witness whether the press did not enjoy a lower rate than the Government. The company's attorneys objected but Johnson ruled that the subject of press rates was germane.

Although several witnesses said the press rates were low, no detailed figures on them had been submitted when the hearing recessed.

The hearing is on a petition of four telegraph companies which seek to charge the Government regular commercial rates. The companies are Postal Telegraph-Cable Co., Mackay Radio & Telegraph Co., Inc. (Delaware), Mackay Radio & Telegraph Co. (California) and Western Union.

Auto Man Named Cornell Provost

Heber Wallace Peters, Detroit, former vice president of the Packard Motor Co., has been appointed provost of Cornell University, it was announced yesterday by Edmund E. Day, university president.

Peters will serve as executive officer of the standing committee on funds to co-ordinate the university's fund-raising program in co-operation with alumni organizations.

A graduate of Cornell, Peters served as secretary to the president for two years. He served with the Packard firm until 1934, then with the General Motors Co. for two years. Since 1936 he has been an investment counselor.

Monopoly Inquiry

By Mark Sullivan

Faults Admitted

ON THURSDAY begins the so-called "monopoly investigation." That term, like many phrases that become current, is a condensation for the convenience of newspaper headlines. The broad purpose, as set out in the act of Congress that created the investigating committee, is as wide-spreading as the whole of business. It includes—to put it in six words which I quote from the statute—"competition, price levels, unemployment, profits and consumption."

SULLIVAN

But the name does not matter. The announced purpose does not matter. Neither name nor announced purpose ever determines the course an investigation takes. What happens usually is that the investigation as it goes on, takes one or another direction, makes one or another impression on the public, has one or another effect. What direction this investigation takes will depend in part, in large part perhaps, on the relative momentum of personalities among the 12 men who compose the committee and perhaps also the 100 men who compose the staff.

ALL THE POSSIBLE directions this investigation can take may be classified under two headings. It can begin on the assumption and end with the conclusion that in America business is to remain a function of private citizens, owned and managed by private citizens who hope for profit, but who in any case take the profit or the loss as the case may be—in short, what is called the capitalist system.

Or, this investigation can go on the assumption that in America business is to be what it is in the "totalitarian" countries of Europe—to be, in one degree or another, a function of the government. Either to be, as in Russia, owned by the government; or to be, as in Germany and Italy, so controlled by government as to result in regimenting everybody engaged in business. And "everybody engaged in business" includes labor. In totalitarian Germany it is labor that is most regimented of all; labor unions are forbidden, labor is under direct control of the government.

BETWEEN THOSE two poles—private ownership and, on the other hand, government ownership or government regimentation—lie all the possible purposes and results of the coming investigation. I do not wish to state the case more simply than the facts are. Between the two poles lies a whole gamut of differing conditions. For example, the manufacture of electricity or gas is on a basis different from the manufacture of automobiles or shoes. Yet the central fact remains: The investigation that begins this week can point toward the continuance of private ownership, of the capitalist system. Or, it can point toward the adoption of government ownership or government regimentation, totalitarian government, collectivism—call it what you will.

Preserving private ownership is not identical with letting business alone—not by any means. It may be that this investigation will take and hold to the purpose of preserving private ownership—and still it may be that certain changes must be made. Certain things need to be done about business precisely for the sake of preserving private ownership, for the sake of keeping America a nation in which the maximum number of citizens share in private ownership—in which the maximum number of citizens are "haves," with a stake in property and therefore an interest in preserving the right to own property. If, in order to further this purpose, it is found desirable to take steps about the present status of business, the steps must be taken.

IT MAY BE THAT steps for the preservation of private ownership will encounter opposition from within business, especially big business and the financial affiliations of big business. Every informed and thoughtful person knows there have been serious faults in the capitalist system as conducted in America. It is these faults, in part, that brought on the depression of 1929. It is these faults, in part, that gave rise to the movement toward collectivism. Much of the movement which believers in the capitalist system are now called on to resist had its origin in mistakes made, indeed crimes committed, by persons who had the rank of high priests of the capitalist system but were false to their trust.

From some quarters we shall hear cries of "Let business alone." We shall hear talk of the virtues of mass production. Mass production does create material abundance. But mass production as conducted in the past has had faults. Mass production promised, and almost achieved, two cars in every garage. But mass production said nothing about two installment collectors on every doorstep. And unwholesome expansion of credit, including installment selling, was in part the cause of the collapse of 1929.

STEPS FOR PRESERVING and extending private ownership, are readily distinguished from steps that tend toward collectivism. I do not know if attempt to move in the direction of collectivism will arise in the investigation. If it does, it will not, of course, be called collectivism. Those who wish to take America toward totalitarian government are ingenious in the use of words. A trend of the investigation toward collectivism might not be called by any name at all. It might take the form of steps which would make private ownership unworkable. Much of the movement toward totalitarian government that has already taken place in America has consisted merely of actions which make it difficult for private business to function. That there are persons who have this purpose is by now well known.

The French Crisis

By Barnet Nover

Will Daladier Win Out?

TODAY FRANCE finds herself face to face with the most critical domestic situation since the bloody riots of February, 1934. By a strange coincidence, the man who headed the French government at that time—Edouard Daladier—is premier now.

Time plays strange pranks with men's reputations. After the February riots of nearly five years ago, M. Daladier became one of the most bitterly hated men in the republic, particularly among elements of the Right. Today, however, the conservatives of France look upon him with esteem and even affection; it is the Left to whom he is now anathema. For the Left looks upon him as one now seeking to undo what is left of that great program of social reforms put through by the Popular Front in 1936.

THAT IS THEIR interpretation of the latest series of decree laws promulgated by the Daladier government as a means of stimulating France's productive energies, bringing order out of chaos in the realm of governmental finance and restoring prosperity to the nation. And that is why during the last days France has been plagued by an epidemic of strikes that may have its climax but not its culmination in the one-day general strike called for Wednesday.

Against this upsurge of industrial strife the government has taken strong measures. But whether M. Daladier and his colleagues will succeed in their efforts to right the French economic system and governmental finance is by no means certain.

The present French crisis is not new. It existed in rather acute form before the Popular Front victory of 1936. That victory intensified the crisis. But even the scrapping of much of the Blum reforms may not prove sufficient.

IN THEIR general report to the President of France, Premier Daladier and Finance Minister Reynaud called attention to the basic evils which for some time have afflicted their nation and which must be eliminated if France is to prosper.

First of all there is the budgetary unbalance with which government after government has tried to cope and with only partial and temporary success at best. After six or seven years of drastic attempts to bring income and expenditure within striking distance of each other, the anticipated deficit for 1938 will total 51,500,000,000 francs. (The franc today is worth around 2.6 cents.)

BUT THIS chronic unbalance between receipts and expenditures, with the latter always tending to run away from the former, is but the symptom of a basic maladjustment in the economic system itself.

The gap between receipts and expenditures can be bridged in one or both of two ways. Expenditures can be cut down. Or receipts can be increased either through added taxation or greater returns from existing taxes. Every French government during the past six years has actually sought to do both but has never quite succeeded in doing either.

THE REASONS for this unfortunate development are not difficult to discover. Of prime importance has been the disturbed international situation which has compelled France to devote an increasing portion of the national income to her army, her navy and her air force.

In addition, the French government has to set aside a considerable portion of its income for payments on the public debt.

Actually the only categories of expenditures that can be cut are those relating to the civil personnel of the government, war pensions, public works programs, unemployment relief and so on. And every government that has sought to cut expenditures for such purposes has run into insurmountable political obstacles.

THE ALTERNATIVE course is to increase governmental revenues. This obviously means an increase in taxation. The latest French decree laws attempt that. The tax on wages and salaries has been boosted from 7.56 to 8 per cent. Telephone and telegraph and postal rates are also increased as are bus and subway fares.

It will be noted that these levies will affect the poor more drastically than the rich and they are so intended. In M. Reynaud's belief the basic difficulty facing France arises out of the decline in French industries. And in the period since 1929 while French productivity has declined German production has increased to the point where it is twice that of France.

To increase production and decrease production costs, the Daladier government recently suspended the 40-hour law, to which, more than any other factor, is attributed France's present-day difficulties. But its present shelving has bitterly aroused the trade unions. As the Left sees it, the workers are being squeezed for the benefit of those elements who by hoarding their capital or sending it abroad have crippled the economic machine.

IN CALLING upon the nation to make sacrifices, to produce more so that the economic system can throw off its present dangerous lethargy, Messrs. Daladier and Reynaud hope that by their efforts capital will return to France from its hiding places abroad, seek a new outlet in French industry and thus give to productive enterprise a fillip which it so desperately needs. They insist that the problem is "not to choose between preserving or repealing the recent social reforms. . . . The problem is to prevent them from automatically dwindling to nothing, to prevent their benefits from evaporating in the high cost of living, to prevent employers and employes, in a country which is still poor, from having nothing to share but poverty."

The argument is a sound one. If the present reforms can do what is expected of them, if they can bring about an increase of national production and through this an increase in tax revenue, France's financial and economic difficulties will be nearer solution. But the unanswered question is whether these reforms will really attract capital back to France, will really restore that "confidence" in the economic system which the Right insists is lacking.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

New RKO-Radio Production Proves a Surprise
Capitol to Present a 'Guest' Conductor
News Items and Gossip of the Theater

IF THERE were a flock of "names" in the cast, the public would flock to see it. If the title were a little more provocative, public interest might be similarly stimulated. If the production could be heralded as a "billion-dollar, super-colossal, hyper-special," there would, of course, be a multiplied box-office tug.

BELL

But "A Man to Remember" has none of these things. It is merely a superlatively fine picture with none of the usual "sales points" to impress that fact upon public consciousness. For that reason a great many ordinarily astute theater-goers probably will delude themselves into the belief that "A Man to Remember" is a film play that may be indifferently ignored with no loss to themselves. To be blunt about it, these people will be crazy.

"A Man to Remember," the "sleeper" celebrated briefly in this space yesterday, deserves to be seen by every picture-lover who places any value on the simple fundamentals of life, depicted without ostentation, heroics or the artificial flubdub with which Hollywood so frequently bogs down stories that might otherwise be comparable monuments to the dignity and sublimity of the commonplace.

This is the picture that was produced by Robert Sisk, former Washington newspaperman and publicist, for RKO-Radio as a frank and unblushing contribution to the West Coast's symposium of "B" pictures. It is "B" in physical proportions and acting personnel, if by "B" in the latter connection can be meant distinctly able players whose talents have never been sufficiently appreciated to place them in the top flight of Hollywood's "glamour" people.

In the simple power of its recapitulation of a life dedicated to the service of mankind and the abnegation of self, "A Man to Remember" is great—great in its humility, in its profound gentleness, in its deeply moving penetration of the finest impulses that stir the human heart.

Lest it be mistakenly assumed that "A Man to Remember" must be a lachrymose and dreary sort of screen preachment, aimed at some kind of celluloid sermonizing, it should have been emphasized before this that it is an intensely interesting and entertaining human document that falls within the personal experience of every man, woman and child.

The story is that of an obscure doctor, living in a thriving little Middle West city of 4,000 inhabitants. It falls into the same groove with "The Citadel" in certain of its aspects. Whereas "The Citadel" presents a sweeping survey of the entire professional and ethical background of the medical profession, "A Man to Remember" is content to confine itself to the personal history of a great humanitarian, whose funeral is being held as the picture opens. Dr. Abbott had never given much thought to material wealth, and the town "moneybags," as the funeral cortege passes their doors are fearful lest the good doctor had gone to his grave owing them important sums of money. His assets are being appraised by the lawyer charged with executing the will. It is a meager estate, but one ample to retrace the doctor's long life of service in Westport. It is that life that reflects the drama, the humor, the great compassion and the pathos that punctuate the lives of all humanity.

Previewed yesterday afternoon, "A Man to Remember" left a deep impression on those who saw it. It will richly reward those who enjoy genuinely worthy screen entertainment when it is presented at RKO-Keith's, beginning Thursday.

And who should be sitting in the boss' chair in Manager Sam Wheeler's office, when the guys and gals of the press arrived at the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange for Mr. Meakin's preview of "A Man to Remember" yesterday, but Arleen Whelan, the radiant young Twentieth Century starlet, who had been, and still is, having the time of her life on her first visit to the National Capital. Miss Whelan has been flitting about Washington for a week or so now and will be here for at least another week in an attempt to catch a glimpse of something more of our city than a continuous round of parties at the Mayflower and the Shoreham. Yesterday afternoon, for example, under Mr. Wheeler's guidance, she was headed for Arlington, the Lincoln Memorial, the Capitol and way-stations. Whether she ever reached them or not, I wouldn't know. But she has seen the White House. That, at least, is something. And since this seems to be a real busman's holiday she is on, she also has been to the "movies" —of all things!

There will be a guest conductor occupying the podium at Loew's Capitol Theater next week. While Phil Lampkin, that other "guest conductor" who seems to stand a fair chance of becoming a regular fixture at the Capitol, is enjoying a brief vacation from his southpaw baton swishing, a colorful gentleman by the name of D'Artega will whip from the other side of the plate.

D'Artega, a fiery maestro, noted for his streamlined, ultramodern musical arrangements, has just completed two months of "guesting" at Loew's Century Theater in Baltimore. Among musicians, he is celebrated as a leader who is years ahead of the current musical trends. He has demonstrated this in conducting large orchestras in many of the country's foremost theaters.

Beyond that, he has scored music for the Jack Benny radio programs and his distinctive arrangements have been used on many other network programs.

D'Artega is Spanish, handsome, fiery and suave, if those last two words can be made to go together. He is now busily engaged arranging a score for the week beginning Friday on F street that will make clear why his music is called "streamlined"—or so I hear.

A reminder. Today is the last day Washington will have an opportunity to view "Janosik," first of the Little Theater's bookings in its six-weeks International Cinema Festival. The picture, made in Czecho-Slovakia, is worth any judicious picture-goer's time, money and attention, but cannot be held longer than three days by reason of the large number of other distinctive productions that are to be packed into the festival's brief period. Beginning tomorrow, the Little s'major attraction will be Rene Clair's "A Nous la Liberte" relating the story of two friends who pursued divergent paths. One becomes a successful businessman; the other a wandering laborer. The picture is cut largely to the pattern of Charlie Chaplin's famous "Modern Times." It will be shown tomorrow and Thursday only. with "Man of Aran" as companion feature.

Washington should find particular interest in the cast appearing in Alexander Korda's Technicolor production of "Drums," coming to the screen at Loew's Capitol on Friday for its first public presentation in this city. The three principal roles are played by Sabu, Raymond Massey and Roger Livesey.

Sabu will be remembered, first, as the East Indian youngster who sprang into overnight prominence by his remarkable performance in the title role of "Elephant Boy." He has not been seen on the screen since that memorable appearance, although a few months ago he was a personal visitor in the Capital for a day, accompanied by his two stalwart Sikh bodyguards. Those bewhiskered "shadows" were a bit on the odd side, even to Sabu. "I don't know who those fellows are," Sabu confided to your reporter in a sotto voce moment. "I never saw them until the studio assigned them to me for this American tour."

Raymond Massey, of course, needs no introduction to local audiences since his many screen appearances here and more recent triumph in the title role of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," given its premiere in the National prior to going on to take its place as the outstanding dramatic hit of the current Broadway season. Roger Livesey will be recalled, by those who saw it at the National a season or two ago, as the young reporter in "Storm Over Patsy," since picturized as "Storm in a Teacup," with Rex Harrison—in the cast of "The Citadel"—in the same role.

There are a few thousand others in "Drums" you'll like, too. And the natural color photography is gorgeous.

The bewilderment of trammeled youth, groping for freedom of spirit and life, provided Clifford Odets with the theme of "Golden Boy," most successful of his plays. The slow drudgery of a career in music, as against the speedy road to fame and fortune afforded by the prize ring, formed the elements of the tremendous mental turmoil that motivated its central character and influenced the lives of all about him. Upon this framework of moving drama, Odets built three acts and 12 scenes of tense, bitter and tragic struggle.

Presented in the National Theater last night as the second subscription play of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society season of six, "Golden Boy" took its immediate place among the most forceful and best acted plays that Washington has been privileged to enjoy in recent seasons.

"Golden Boy," in essence, is a defeatist's drama, but the drama of a defeatist who first achieved the celebrity, the fortune and the luxury he craved only to find them hollow glories and not the life-fulfillment to which he had blindly aspired. Release came only at the end of a wild, night motor ride and death in a crash with the pitiful wreck of a girl he loved and who loved him.

The dramatic story unfolded on the stage is neither so skeletonized nor so relentlessly grim as any such brief summary. It is, on the contrary, one that has been filled out and rounded into a smoothly flowing recital of all the woes, all the minor triumphs, all the disappointments, all the heartaches and much of the humor that can be packed into two young and hopeless lives caught in the tawdry toils that bind the "submerged tenth."

Penetrating Character Study

The interest and the power of the full movement of the play centers in the character of Joe Bonaparte, the young son of an Italian fruit peddler, who abandons a brilliant career as a violinist to become a prize fighter. There is in the spirit of the youth the sensitiveness of the fine musician and the rugged determination of an ambitious young man, whose longing for release from parental domination and the deprivations of poverty will brook no hindrance or denial. His ambition is to be free; to be himself; to express his inner urgings and realize the promptings of his own rebellious spirit.

We meet him first in the fight promoter's office, where by sheer bull-doggedness he is given the opportunity to substitute at the last minute for an incapacitated fighter. In his first fight, the experts perceive in him the makings of a champion. But their expectations are not met when Joe habitually "pulls" his punches, fearful of breaking the hands drilled to the delicacy of the violin strings. The plaguing presence of the promoter's "girl" throws additional impediments in his way until, in a fit of fury, he lets go and batters down all of the contenders between him and the championship. In his last battle he kills his opponent. Horrified that he should have chosen the role of "killer" as the one to lead him to the heights, he and the girl dash from the dressing room on that last fatal drive.

Leads Impressively Played

There is deft character analysis in the author's building of the role and in Elia Kazan's playing of it. Joe Bonaparte's wish-fulfillment found expression in the possession of expensive clothes and a Duesenburg car. They placed him among the world's successes, not is failures. Lorna Moon's escape lay merely in physical well being and protection against the buffetings of a girl of the streets, thankful for any man's kindness and material largesse. But the two found common ground, finally, and were willing to share the same fate, whatever it might be. Odets has etched these characters in true and vivid lines. Frances Farmer portrays the role of the girl with no less compelling effect than Kazan achieves as the boy. Their playing is tense, emotional and acutely intelligent. They are physically, as well as temperamentally, perfectly equipped for the heavy tasks alotted them.

So remarkably well cast is every role in the play in fact that individual performances can be appraised only on a basis of the degree of opportunity accorded each player. Interpretations of the highest order are given their parts by Lee J. Cobb, as Mr. Bonaparte, father of the young individualist, his stolid, labor-leader brother and his sister, who like to laugh; Curt Conway, as Eddie Fusseli, the racketeer "promoter," who understood Joe better than any of the others; Roman Bohmen, the manager, torn between his fighter and his girl, and Grover Burgess, as Tokio, the sympathetic trainer. Phoebe Brand and Will Lee, in the lesser roles of sister and brother-in-law, are highly efficient "comedy relief" and Louis Polan contrives to make Roxy Gottlieb, bungling co-manager, an amusing and a valuable character in the action. Harry Bratsburg, already known to Washington audiences, and John O'Malley, as Frank Bonaparte, add to the strength of an admirable ensemble.

Mordecai Gorelik's settings are impressionistic and effective and Harold Clurman's direction one of the play's conspicuous assets. Insistent curtain calls, cut short by the bowing players at seven, tells the story of the audience's enthusiasm last night.

Spouts Lessons Before Camera

Lois Horne is perhaps the world's only school teacher with a motion picture record of her skill.

Miss Horne is the California State board of education representative at Warner Bros. studios. Her major duty is to teach high school courses to Bobby Jordan and Bernard Punsly, youngest of the "Dead End" sextette. And she performs the task thoroughly—following the boys from set to set and picture to picture and giving them no rest until they've done their lessons.

Miss Horne's talents had an odd result. Grabbing Bobby Jordan for French lessons between scenes of "They Made Me a Criminal," she drilled him so thoroughly that, when he went into his next scene, he unconsciously started to decline French verbs instead of reading his lines.

Director Busby Berkeley laughingly remade the scene and promised Miss Horne a print of the one Bobby had spoiled.

Whip Target

J. Carroll Naish has been cast in the role of a gambler in Cecil B. DeMille's "Union Pacific," and will be a target for Akim Tamiroff's bull whip—a part which Charles Bickford refused to play for $20,000 fearing injury. Joel McCrea will play the leading role opposite Barbara Stanwyck.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 28.—Each year Rudy Vallee proves all over again he's the Barnum of show business. At the Grove opening the other night, his father, a sweet old Maine politician, polished Rudy off in a swell speech.

HEDDA HOPPER

Liz Whitney hustled down from the wilds of Modesto to rhumba with Sam Goldwyn. Sam was there to hear his 15-year-old protege, Jane Warren, warble—she'll have 13 weeks seasoning on Rudy's program—meaning her success is in the bag. Come on, Rudy, go out of your way and discover me!

Rudy lingered at Alice Faye's table only long enough to be photographed with Alice and hubby Tony Martin. Seemed to me Alice gave him a lingering look of affection as he walked away.

Dorothy Lamour was surrounded by a battery of young men who might have been detectives. Dorothy's making her personal appearance in court these days.

Joan Bennett and Gail Patrick led the fashion parade. Joan in white satin—which never fails, Gail in fuchsia. Gail told me about the valet in New York who liked Hollywood clothes so much that he took them all over the hotel showing them to his pals before she caught him at it.

If Irving Berlin wants to try out his new song, there's a piano for him. Bill Fields has a permanent table. You can hear your favorite program—a radio being served on the table with your dinner. Backgammon and checkers are enjoyed the same way! And his food is served on our important airliners. At Dave's you're not entertained, except by the friends who drop in or come with you. Dave's also an actor—and a darned good one.

Catherine Sabichi and Hoot Gibson, Sally Eiler's erstwhile hubby, cock-and-bulling with Nelson Eddy and Ann Franklin.

Speaking of Cock-and-Bulling, just had a letter from writer Jack Morgan, the man who owns it. Jack's world cruising on King Macomber's yacht.

From Tahiti he writes: "We were rather depressed at Hiva-Oa over a little woman, mother of 23 children —14 of whom were lepers. Made us realize what a health resort Hollywood really is! Saw a benefit performance on Billy Leed's boat in Papeete Harbor of 'Snow White' and 'Test Pilot,' which he gave for the leper colony.

"When you go up to Pebble Beach stop in at the Douglas School and see if I still have two children there. Beauty

Big Waist A Handicap In Dancing

Is Easily Reduced Try Touching Toes Ought to Be Able To Exercises Helpful

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF YOU have a barrel waist, you can't do the minuet-in-swing, squeeze into the new spool-waisted frocks, or even bend down and touch your toes.

Bending down to touch the hands to the toes was never any good as an exercise, but it is a fine test of suppleness. If you can't do it, you are not supple, and that means you look older than you should, and maybe a little dowdy.

What I am trying to do is make you mad—mad enough so that you will do your waistline exercises! Your waist should only be four and one-half times the measure of your wrist, according to Hollywood's streamline limit. But if your waist is eight inches less than the bust measurement, with weight at normal, that is as slim as anyone could wish. If it is more than eight inches less, you must exercise.

Exercise for Waist

Here are three exercises designed for the express purpose of trimming a barrel waist down to a spool waist. Ease into your waistline shearing with this one:

Stand erect in good posture, with the hips tucked in and the tummy pulled up, and with hands clasped behind the back and between the shoulder blades. Push up with the clasped hands as high as possible, stretching the waist slim and bending the head back to increase the stretch. Feel the pull on those waistline muscles? That's slimming!

The second exercise puts a twist on the waistline. Stand with the knees on the floor, feet back but separated, and constantly pull up and in with the tummy muscles. Have the arms out at the sides, shoulder level. Twist at the waist to the right, bend back and touch the right hand to the left heel. Pivot at the waist in the opposite direction and touch the left hand to the right heel. This is no kindergarten exercise and three times for each side will be enough to start you off.

Inch Off in a Week

Another upward stretch for slimming the midsection is this one: Stand in erect posture, arms down at the sides. Fling the arms high overhead as you raise alternate knees high in air.

If you mean business, you can take more than an inch off the waist in a week, and every inch you take off your waistline makes you look two years younger. Soon you can be mistaken for your daughter's slightly older sister.

Modern Child Has Washable Toys

As soon as children have passed the infant stage, they prefer the "do with" or "make something" toy, to the "look on" type. Sturdy blocks that can be converted into skyscrapers, bridges, and docks will keep Junior happily occupied from babyhood until he is well along at school. Nor need mothers worry that dust and grime from the floor will leave them unfit for contact with chubby fingers. Modern blocks, like rattles, rubber dolls, and, in fact, all toys intended for children who still have a tendency to put things into their mouths are finished to withstand soap and water washing, and they should have it in order to protect the health of the children

King of Furs—Still Supreme

Mink, dark, mysterious, durable as iron, and becoming to every type, is still master of the fur scene this year. Despite the influx of strange new freak furs, the dark silky mink still leads. The luxurious model shown above retains its traditional classic beauty of simplicity. It also incorporates the popular boxy squared shoulder line, loose kimono type sleeves and demure child-like collar. Its skins have been treated for extra softness to give supple, rich lines. This handsome coat was displayed, among others, at the opening of a series of fur fashion showings held by a local furrier last night at two hotels

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 28.

NEW YORK'S most famous unorganized organization, the Free Lookers Association, has suddenly been given important recognition by several influential people. As I suppose you know, any hole-digging, building-ripping or sidewalk-tampering here instantly attracts an audience of from 1,000 to 2,000, who are quite willing to spend an entire day seeing other people blast rock from the bowels of this island.

ALICE HUGHES

Wherever men are at work, nonworking men gather in droves to lend their moral support. These huge crowds of sidewalk gapers have become the leading municipal joke of New York in the past few years, and it was high time someone rescued them from cheap humor and gave them the dignity of professional men, for nobody ever worked harder than the New York loafer who stares all day into a subway excavation. The eye strain must be simply appalling. Yet until the past month he has received no recognition but the Bronx cheers of the passersby.

First to recognize the Gotham excavation watcher was the Rockefeller Center organization, which has just arranged a comfortable watching gallery for them labeled "The Sidewalk Superintendent's Association." Quick to fall in line was the famous Sam Rosoff, now digging the Sixth Avenue Subway. He has arranged a similar gallery of the hole for the Thirty-fourth street station.

And finishing strong is Frank Case, landlord of our beloved Algonquin Hotel. Noticing wide public interest in the re-asphalting of Forty-fourth street before his inn, Frank had waiters carry a dozen chairs to the front stoop so that his branch of the Sidewalk Superintendents could do their work in comfort. All of which shows that New York is improving the condition of its laboring men every day.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Little Cobina Wright was no ball of fire during her singing engagement in the Sert Room of the Waldorf. She looks so pretty, and so little comes out. Now, having finished a month among the swells, Cobby will be replaced on Thursday night by the beautiful blonde Alice Marble, California's current gift to the tennis championship. Most of these belles go in for writing or clothes designing, but Marble seems to have trained her tonsils. Well, she is a lovely sight, and if she can trill as she can smack, the Sert Room will have a nifty prima donna for a few weeks.

Frank and Bertha Case just gave a pleasant tea party for one of the most remarkable of living women—Gertrude Atherton, the warhorse of the popular novel, still going strong at 81, just starting another book as though all life lay before her. A crowd of attractive people surrounded the old girl, including Helen Wills, the long-time tennis queen. Atherton is still vitally interested in the subject of rejuvenation and at her party was the Dr. Benjamin who was her consultant on the subject when she wrote "Black Oxen," considered so shocking 16 years ago. We should all be as full of zip as old Gertie at 81 . . .

Old Mr. Hall was quite overcome a few nights ago by the sight of his beloved Zorina at supper, wearing a frothy black net dress with a wide belt of shocking pink suede and with fresh pink roses in her hair. I insist it was the roses that got Hall, but he insists it was just Zorina.

All the girls in town were delighted when Pearl Buck received the Nobel prize for literature a few days ago. Since she married a local boy she has become very much one of us, and the body of her literary work is of a quality high enough to give her the award with honor. Incidentally, Pearl won't really tell me what she muttered in Chinese when she got the good news. I feel sure it was not what the newspapers said.

Now that the King and Queen of England are really coming next year, a lady named Frances Fairsex (no kidding) is getting up a book on royal etiquette. What do we care? We shan't get close enough to George and Lizzie even to smirk.

Colorful Knitted Angora Set Makes Warmth of Odds, Ends

By Alice Brooks.

ANGORA is the last word in woolens today. This colorful sport set—a jiffy knit at that—will meet with loud approval. Warm as well as smart, it uses up scraps of yarn for the variegated dots that give it snap. Pattern 6230 contains instructions for making the set; illustrations of it and of stitches; materials needed; color schemes.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in coin to The Washington Post Household Arts Dept., 250 W. 14th Street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Her Conversation Too Serious, Unpopular Because of It, Girl Asks How to Acquire Sense of Humor

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 20 years of age, of average good looks, neatness and intelligence, although you may doubt the latter when you have heard my problem, which is this: I am unpopular with both boys and girls because I am dull. I am dull because I haven't a sense of humor—not the slightest. I read a lot—newspapers, magazines, etc., and am able to discuss current events, but my conversations are always too serious. I don't regard a sense of humor as a congenital endowment. I think it is something which can be developed. But how? That is my question.

SERIOUS.

DEAR SERIOUS: I am not so sure that a sense of humor can be acquired by the academic approach. I am inclined to believe it is as much of a congenital endowment on the psychic or intellectual side as blue eyes or curly hair are on the physical side. The person who possesses what we call a sense of humor is a person with the happy, inborn faculty of instantaneously discerning finely shaded nuances of meaning in those events, situations and circumstances that come under his observation. Or perhaps he only reads these nuances into the picture; perhaps they are but a reflection of his own sensitive and richly colorful imagination; perhaps the actuality upon which he turns the spotlight of his mind is really a gray and grim and inert solidity—yet he plays the multi-colored beam of his attention upon it in such a way as to make it seem a vivid mosaic composition, possessed of provocative and subtle meanings.

The person who clearly recognizes the fact that he has no sense of humor is in much the same position as the person who is forced to admit that he is color blind. He may not be able to remedy that particular defect, but he should find it possible to make a saving adjustment to it. In your case, you may have to compensate on the physical side for what you lack on the psychic side. Since you are not gifted with that penetrative and joyous vitality of mind which would make you a fascinating conversationalist, why not compensate by developing a magnetic abundance of sheer animal spirits—by which I mean that radiant physical enjoyment of living which characterizes the person in perfect health, who shines to advantage at competitive games, outdoor sports, dancing, and so on.

Since no one is interested in your conversational bait or contributions, become somebody to reckon with at ping-pong, badminton, tennis, golf, bridge, poker, backgammon, on horseback, on the diving board or in the swimming pool. Take up ice skating, ballroom dancing, skiing, piano playing—anything at all for which you may have some talent or aptitude, that will give you some claims to personal distinction in the field of social competition.

You are wasting time, getting nowhere, in trying to "win friends and influence people" by conversational means when you have no talent for the art. It would be just as foolish to pin all your hopes of social success on being a first-class violinist, supposing you had no ear for instrumental music. A girl has to be so mentally brilliant that she can afford to be intellectually and physically lazy, before she can rely on her conversational powers alone as a means of social advancement. The average girl of 20 nowadays who hopes to be popular with her contemporaries of both sexes has, first, to know how to create the illusion of beauty in appearance; second, to excel at two or more outdoor sports; third, to be a really good dancer, and, fourth, to observe a health regime which will yield her a continuous dividend of effortlessly joyous spirits.

Gift for Employer?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been employed now for almost a year in the capacity of private secretary, and would like to know if it would be proper for me to give my employer a Christmas gift? Or should I just send him a card? Employed in the same office is a staff which includes a doctor and two nurses. Should I send each of these a gift or a card?

UNCERTAIN.

Card Should Suffice

DEAR UNCERTAIN: Since you are a newcomer to this particular office, and not yet acquainted with whatever holiday tradition prevails, I think you will be erring on the safe side in remembering each of your co-workers, and your employer, with a Christmas card rather than a gift. Generally speaking, it is not customary in the business world for fellow employes to exchange gifts at Christmas, nor to visit individual gifts upon the employer.

As a matter of fact, in larger organizations, greetings of the season are exchanged by word of mouth for the most part; although every business or professional unit boasts its own percentage of sentimental souls who faithfully remember each inter-office acquaintance with a suitable card. In small offices and organizations the happy custom of all-around gift-giving is sometimes followed, for the simple reason that everyone has become a warm friend of everyone else. In such cases, of course, the gifts bespeak friendship, not merely professional courtesy. For the latter, a card or a cordially spoken sentiment nicely suffices.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Wine Stain Remover

To take wine stains from linens stretch the stained article across the top of a bowl. Pour boiling water from a kettle, held 2 feet above the cloth, through the stain until it disappears.

Mental Patients Predominate In Hospitals

Nerve Ills Varied Due to Complex System Brain Patterns Differ

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

The nervous system functions on different levels. The lowest and simplest level is the spinal cord, where a single nerve sends out a fiber to a single nerve. Higher are the sensory and motor ganglia—the thalami and cerebellum—and highest of all is the brain.

All of these are made up of cells which, with some little variation in structure, are essentially similar. They consist of a cell body from which a number of fibers go out. The fibers from one cell contact the fibers of other cells, setting up nerve impulses. This is what constitutes nervous activity, no matter whether it is the higher activity of thinking or the lower activity of instinctively pulling away the fingers from a burning match.

With a set of functions of such complexity, it is no wonder that switches are often thrown the wrong way and that things go wrong. Disorders of the nervous system are the most frequently known. Foremost are the disorders of the mind. Mental patients occupy more beds in American hospitals than those of all other kinds of patients put together.

Indeed, so complex is the activity of the higher centers that no one can define exactly where insanity begins. No one person's brain pattern is the same as anyone's else. Certainly no one uses his brain cells as anyone else does. "Everyone's queer but thee and me," said the old Quakeress, "and thee's a little queer." And before we come to the actual level of recognizable insanity, there are all the variations of emotional disturbances, including hysteria and nervous prostration, alcoholism, liars, misers, kleptomaniacs and plan eccentricity.

The Gentler Sex

'Howdy Stranger'

"Is this your first visit to Washington, Mrs. Pipp? . . . Oh, you were! Three years ago? Well, of course things have changed a great deal. How do you like the East! . . . Well, I think most people do. Is this the first time you've ever been East? . . . Oh that's right, of course, I forgot. Well I suppose you've been doing a lot of sightseeing . . . Oh you haven't! Well I suppose anyway, you've seen the White House? . . . Was this the first time you'd ever . . . Three years ago? Oh that's right, of course.

"Well I KNOW it's the first time you've ever seen the Supreme Court . . . Me? Oh yes, of course I've seen it—that is, from the outside . . . No, it seems as if the only people who ever really see Washington are the ones from out in the States. But of course when you've lived here so long, and know so many people . . . What? Well, no, I'm not exactly a native Washingtonian, but of course my people on both sides have always lived in this part of the country.

"I think Mrs. —— Mrs. —— oh yes, Pipp . . . I think you'll find some very interesting country around here, especially down in Virginia . . . Oh you have! Well was that the first time you'd ever been in Virginia? . . . Oh I see. Well, I suppose though it was the first time you'd ever seen the Skyline . . . Well, anyway, I know you must have found it a lot different.

"Yes, I've got people all over Virginia. You see, my mother was a Van Looney . . . Gen. Van. Looney? . . . Oh yes, I'm a descendant of his—that is, a collateral descendant. I've got the most marvelous old warming pan at home . . . and a bedtick . . . and a lot of things that came down through the Van Looney side . . .

"Oh you did? Arlington! Was this the first time you'd . . . Oh I see! Well it was nice that you could see it again, wasn't it? Yes I've got a lot of old things at home. Most of them came through the Wimples—that's my father's people. They're from Maryland . . . Oh you did! Well how did you like Baltimore? . . . Was this the first time you'd . . . Oh I see. Well of course it's changed, a lot.

"Yes, it seems as if I'm related to practically everybody in Maryland—that is of the old stock. . . . Oh you did! Well the people that have that estate are the same Wimple family as my father's—only a different branch. Well I suppose this was the first time you'd ever seen a real old house . . . Oh you had! . . . Well a lot more have been restored in the last three years.

"Yes, you see one of my great-great-great—well I just don't remember how many greats it was—grandfathers came over in the Ark, and another came over in the Dove—I've got it all in a book at home—and then another settled at Jamestown—part of the old house is still standing—Oh say you simply MUST see Williamsburg . . . Oh-o-h! You did! Well was that the first time? . . .

"Yes, all those old families married and intermarried, the Van Looneys and the Nitters and the Does and the Doodles. I'm related to all of them. I've got a perfectly wonderful old cuspidor at home that belonged to Col. Tobias Nitter—he was in the Revolution. Say, I had 16 ancestors in the Revolutionary Army, that is on the American side, and I had three that joined the British . . . and then I had a lot more in the War of 1812—Oh say, you simply MUST see Annapolis . . . Oh you did! Well was that the first time?

Well Mrs. —— Mrs. —— Oh yes, Pipp, well Mrs. Pipp I'm certainly glad to have met you and I do hope you enjoy your sight-seeing . . . Oh you are! Not tomorrow! . . . Well it's certainly too bad you have to go home so soon. Just where was it you said you were from?"

Thomas Byrd Weds Mrs. Mitchell Today

Virginia Clan Gathers in N. Y. for Nuptials
Bride Is Widow of Air Corps General
Couple to Live on Clarke County Estate

By Hope Ridings Miller

The Post Society Editor.

The famous Byrd clan of Virginia, having recently gathered in Richmond for Miss Margaret Lewis Byrd's bow to society at the swanky Commonwealth Club ball, will be in New York today to attend the marriage of her father, Thomas Bolling Byrd, of Winchester, and Mrs. William Mitchell, widow of Brig. Gen. Mitchell, one-time chief of the Army Air Corps.

Witnessed only by relatives and a few close friends, the ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the home of the bride-elect's uncle and aunt, Dr. and Mrs. Adrian Lambert, at 168 Seventy-first street. Bishop Henry St. George Tucker will officiate.

Shortly after the marriage, the couple will be off for a brief wedding trip, after which they will make their home in Clarke County, Va. They have taken a year's lease on Kentmere, an estate belonging to Kenneth Gilpin.

Spent Last Winter With Her Father

Since death of her husband, Mrs. Mitchell has spent much time in the Virginia hunting country, where she has an estate, Boxwood, at Middleburg. Last winter, however, she was with her father in Detroit.

Before her first marriage she was Miss Elizabeth Trumbull Miller. A native of Grosse Point, Mich., she is the daughter of Sidney Miller, a widely known Detroit attorney, and the late Mrs. Miller. She was married to Gen. Mitchell in 1923 and was at his bedside when he died at Doctors' Hospital, New York, in February, 1936. She has a son, William Mitchell, jr., and a daughter, Lucy, who will attend the wedding today.

Mr. Byrd, the "Tom" of the noted "Tom, Dick and Harry" trio in the Byrd family, is the son of Mrs. Richard E. Byrd and the late Mr. Byrd, who was a noted Virginia lawyer. His wife was Mrs. Margaret Lewis Byrd, of Audley, Clarke County.

Noted Kinsmen To Attend Wedding

A number of noted kinsmen and a few friends are in New York from Virginia especially for the wedding. The prospective bridegroom's mother is there; also, his debutante daughter; his brother and sister-in-law, Admiral and Mrs. Richard E. Byrd, who returned to Winchester with Mrs. Richard E. Byrd after attending the Commonwealth Club Ball in Richmond Friday evening; Senator Harry Flood Byrd, another brother; Mrs. Oliver Iselin and Col. and Mrs. William Clifford, of Middleburg. Joining them in New York were Mrs. Henry D. Flood, of Washington, and her daughter and son, Bolling Byrd Flood and Miss Eleanor Flood.

Following the wedding, Miss Flood will go to Philadelphia to spend several days as the guest of Miss Margaret Janney and to attend the wedding Thursday of Miss Polly Foraker and Frederick Warren Marshall.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Mrs. Paul Mellon and Mrs. David S. Barry are the newest members of the Committee of the Museum of Modern Art Gallery . . . Miss Barbara Bolling will entertain at luncheon December 9 in compliment to Miss Mary Dora Thompson. The party will take place at the Chevy Chase Club . . . Invitations soon will be issued for a luncheon to be given by Miss Peggy Essary December 30 at the Chevy Chase Club. Miss Barbara Henning will be guest of honor, and others in the company will include a number of debs and post-debs.

Woodrings Hosts At 1st of 3 Dinners

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring entertained at dinner last evening at their home on S street. The event was the second in a series of parties Secretary and Mrs. Woodring have planned for this season.

They will give another dinner next Tuesday, and another the following Thursday.

Nancy Hoskinson Sets Dance Date for Dec. 21

Miss Nancy Hoskinson, a debutante of the season, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hilleary Hoskinson, has selected December 21 as the date of her dance at the Carlton Hotel.

The party will follow the Princeton Triangle Club program. Miss Hoskinson has a cousin who is a student at Princeton.

Mrs. Edwin Meredith To Give Tea on Sunday

Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, widow of the former Secretary of Agriculture, has issued cards for a tea Sunday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock.

Mrs. Meredith, who recently returned to the Capital for the winter, has reopened her home at 2221 R street.

"At Home" Set

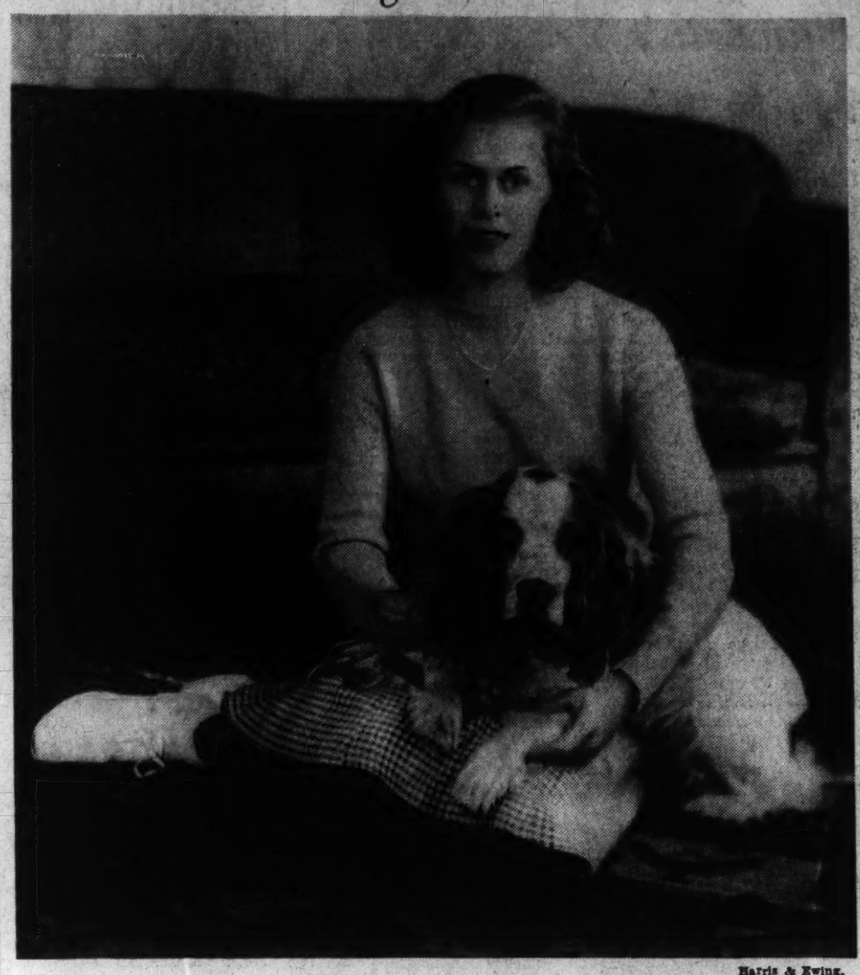
Back to College Until Christmas



Harris & Ewing.

Miss Nancy Lee Masten, a sophomore at Vassar and a debutante, left late Sunday afternoon for the halls of higher learning, but she'll be back again in time for her debut tea on December 30. Miss Masten is the daughter of Mrs. William S. Masten. In this picture with Nancy is her cocker spaniel, named, of all things, Freckles.

Miss Thompson Guest of Honor

Miss Mary Dora Thompson, debutante daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Smith Hempstone and granddaughter of Theodore W. Noyes, was entertained last evening at a supper-bridge party by Mrs. Cabot Stevens.

A yellow color scheme was carried out in flowers, candles, favors and prizes.

Other guests at the fete were Mrs. Smith Hempstone, who assisted Mrs. Stevens: Miss Sylvia Alexander, Miss Marjorie Sherley, Miss Barbara Bolling, Miss Martha McKenna, Miss Bambie McKenna, Miss Mona Dugas, Miss Gerry Strong, Miss Ann Holloway, Miss Betty Thompson, Miss Betty Bernard and Miss Eleanor Peirce.

Also Bill Sheldon, George W. Conkling, Howland H. Sargent, Joe Blanton, Russell True, jr., Curtis Hillyer, Kenneth Bartlett, Nathan Lincoln, Kenneth Taylor, Benjamin Hill, jr. and Blair Bolles.

Mr. Coker's Death Calls Ropers, Halts Daughter's Debut

The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper left yesterday morning for Hartsville, S. C., where they were called by the death of their son-in-law, David R. Coker.

Mrs. Roper will recall the invitations issued for the debut tea here of her granddaughter, Miss Martha Coker, daughter of the late Mr. Coker.

Dinner to Honor Envoy of China

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, will be guest of honor at a dinner to be given by Mrs. William Fitch Kelley on Thursday at the Washington Club.

Miss Martha McClure, who is a member of the Republican National Committee, will remain here for the dinner. A sister of Mrs. Kelly, Miss McClure recently was called here to a conference arranged by John Hamilton, chairman of the committee.

Mrs. Loose Entertains

Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose entertained a company of 24 at dinner in the Shoreham blue room last evening.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

Life, for energetic Margot Garrett Zuberbuhler, is just one lesson after another these days. She is giving herself two weeks to learn how to ice skate before going to Canada for winter sports, and is also studying Spanish every day.

The Zuberbuhlers will probably go to St. Sauveur, which is having quite a vogue among Washingtonians. Anyway, it is doubtful whether they will be here for Christmas.

Margot has made the right start sartorially towards skating, at least. She wears a kneelength black velvet skirt, lined with green, and a green sweater with her monogram stitched in yellow.

LAST WEEK-END the Zuberbuhlers had as their guest Peggy Stevenson, of New York. Brainy as well as good-looking, she has a job with a national magazine for which she modeled at one time. Her most exciting job was posing for a cover recently with the baby panda. Since he is in Chicago, Peggy went there to be photographed. The only way she could make him hold still for the cameraman was to cover her hands with honey. Everything was fine until he finished licking the sticky stuff and began to knaw at her fingers!

MR. GARRETT, father of Senora de Zuberbuhler, will accompany Mrs. Garrett when she sails for Europe December 14 to be gone five weeks. Her children, Elaine and Harry, will also go along.

THE VISIT of Countess Natalie Vitetti of Rome is currently enlivening the social scene. Mr. and Mrs. George Howe have asked a few friends in for cocktails in her honor this afternoon at their new home in Georgetown. The Countess is the guest of her brother, Robert Coe, and will be here for a week.

WE HAVE the word of one of Washington's most attractive younger hostesses that manners are once again considered chic by debutantes, who at one point thought it terribly smart to be rude. When this young lady gave a luncheon recently for several of the current crop, five of the replies were delivered by hand, and the other two girls phoned long distance to convey their regrets. And furthermore, everybody arrived on time!

INVITATIONS are out for the White House dance December 27 in honor of the First Lady's niece, Eleanor Roosevelt, and are causing quite a bit of excitement among young ladies in Boston who have received them. Fortunately most of these girls are not yet of an age where they feel as do their Republican parents about "that man in the White House," and practically everyone of them is already making plans to come down for the party.

A sizable number of Bostonians stayed away from the Roosevelt-Clark wedding in Nahant last summer out of feeling against the Chief Executive, but now those same anti-New Dealers are doing quite a bit of eyebrow lifting at the consistency with which Sally Clark makes the front page.

ODDS AND ENDS: Prince Colonna, newly appointed Italian Ambassador, is expected here in January . . . E. W. Pavenstedt's parents, who are living in Germany, will arrive next week for their annual visit to this country. . . . Nancy Brereton is a working girl now, having gotten a job with a smart dress shop.

Cuban Envoy to Take Plane For Conference in Lima

The Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, will leave either late this afternoon or tomorrow for Havana, going by plane, and will leave there December 3, also by plane, for Lima, Peru, where he will represent his country at the Pan-American Conference.

Sunday evening, the Ambassador entertained at dinner honoring the Minister of the Dominican Republic, Don Adres Pastoriza, and Senora de Pastoriza, who will leave soon for London, where Senor Pastoriza will serve as Minister.

Other guests included the Ambassador of Chile, Don Manuel Trucco, and his daughter, Senorita Marta Trucco; the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de los Rios; the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos, and their daughter, Senorita Laura Margarita Recinos; the Minister of Uruguay, J. Richling; the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro, and Senorita Angela Cromeyer; the Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd; the Minister of Haiti, Elie Lescot; the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle.

Also the assistant director of the Pan American Union and Senorita de Alba, Dr. Oscar Diaz Albertini and Senora de Albertini and their niece, Miss Margarita Montero; Dr. Ramiro Guerra, Senora Martinez Fraga de Carabia, Senorita Martinez Carabia, Dr. Jose T. Baron, Minister-Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron; Dr. Vicente Valdes Rodrigues, Counselor of the Embassy, and Senora de Valdes Rodriguez; Dr. Roberto G. de Mendoza, First Secretary of the Embasy; Senorita Maria Matilde Arostegui, Dr. Raoul Herrera-Arango, Second Secretary of the Embassy, and Senora Herrera-Arango; and Andres Pastoriza, jr., and Tomas Pastoriza.

Immediately preceding the dinner Dr. Fraga presented Senor Pastoriza with the decoration of the Order Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, with which the Cuban government has honored him in recognition of "outstanding diplomatic services rendered Cuba in Washington."

A number of parties have been planned in honor of Senor Pastoriza. Among those already scheduled is a dinner to be given for the Minister and Senora de Pastoriza on Wednesday, December 14. The party will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Walter Grosner at the Shoreham.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, will be guest of honor at a dinner to be given tomorrow evening by the Assistant Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Charles V. McLaughlin at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. J. E. Fries, of South Brewster, Mass., is stopping at the Dodge Hotel. With her is Baroness Nordenfelt, of Sweden.

Miss Mabel Boardman entertained at dinner last evening in her home at 1801 P street.

Mrs. Hans Nolde, of Reading, Pa., accompanied her daughter, Barbara, to Washington after the latter's holiday visit at home from the Marjorie Webster School. Mrs. Nolde is at the Shoreham and will remain there for a few days.

Mrs. W. Grayson Orme and Mrs. E. B. Gibson, of Washington, accompanied by their sister, Mrs. D. N. Shewbrooks, of Philadelphia, returned last night from Warsaw, N. C., where they visited their mother, Mrs. T. B. Pierce, over the Thanksgiving week-end.

Mrs. Brady Bellinger and her daughters, the Misses Lucia and Bessie Bellinger, who formerly resided at 2400 Sixteenth street, are at the Shoreham for a brief stay. Mrs. Bellinger and Miss Bessie Bellinger will leave soon for their home in Atlanta, and Miss Lucia Bellinger will return to her studies at Sullins College.

Col. Carlos Sanchez, newly arrived Military Attache of the Venezuelan Legation, and Senora de Sanchez have taken a suite at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Stuyvesant Martin, of New York, was the guest of honor at a dinner on Saturday evening given by Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Gallagher, who make their home at Wardman Park Hotel. There were ten guests.

Mrs. Edmund I. Kaufmann has joined Mr. Kaufmann at the Hollywood Beach Hotel, Hollywood, Fla., for a visit of several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Freudenthal, of Baltimore, were the week-end guests of Dr. and Mrs. Milton Harris, in Edgemoor.

Angela Adams Hostess Party at Chevy Chase
Many Debs Attend

And still members of the younger set continue to corner the social scene with the most recent of their parties being the luncheon given yesterday afternoon at the Chevy Chase Club by Miss Angela Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Adams. Although Miss Adams herself is not a debutante, she is very much a part of their social whirl, and her fete yesterday was in honor of two buds of the season, Miss Peggy Townsend, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Effingham Townsend, and Miss Elise Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Bingham.

Debs who gathered about the long table, which was decorated with big white chrysanthemums and dainty yellow rosebuds, included practically the whole roster of those being presented this year, as well as other non-debs like Miss Adams. They included Miss Sylvia Alexander, Miss Barbara Bolling, Miss Betty Fischer, Miss Lalla Harrison, Miss Mary Jane Eustis, Miss Barbara Henning and Miss Eleanor Flood.

Miss Butterworth Among the Guests

Also in the festive group were Miss Nancy Hoskinson, Miss Jacqueline Meredith, Miss Agnes Magruder, Miss Betty Meyers, Miss Mae Ashby Proctor, and Miss Mary Parker.

Still others were Miss Mary Dora Thompson, Miss Anne Wilkinson, Mrs. Frank Hight, jr., Miss Maisie Howard and Miss Jean Butterworth, whose home is California, and who at present is the house guest of Miss Howard.

Mrs. Adams, who received with her daughter, also entertained at the affair, the mothers of the debutantes-of-honor, Mrs. Effingham Townsend and Mrs. Hiram Bingham.

Younger Set Well Represented

Many of the younger set at the luncheon had been classmates of Miss Adams at Holton Arms, where she was graduated two years ago. She also studied last season at the Finch School in New York, but now is going in seriously for interior decorating at the King-Smith School.

Miss Elise Hill who is "slipping out" this season rather than making an official bow at one grand event, will be given a series of dinner parties by former Senator and Mrs. Bingham. The first of this group will take place on December 10, with everybody going down later to Warrenton to attend Miss Doris Becker's debut ball.

Miss Peggy Townsend, the other honored at Miss Adams' luncheon, is scheduled to be entertained at a tea to be given by her mother late in December, and during Christmas week, her great-aunt, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend will give a small tea for her.

Cattauis Here On Way to Take Up Residence in N. Y.

In town for a short visit on their way to take up residence in New York are the former Secretary of the Egyptian Legation and Mme. Andre Cattaui. With them is their baby daughter. In New York M. Cattaui will head the Egyptian Tourist Bureau.

He and his wife have a host of friends in Washington, where Mme. Cattaui lived before her marriage, when she was Miss Catherine McCord.

Only few days ago a mural painted by M. Cattaui, who has artistic as well as diplomatic interests, was hung in the handsome foyer of the Legation on Massachusetts avenue. The picture, an immense one, measuring 10 feet in length and 7 feet in height, is a scene at the Tomb of Ouserhet in upper Egypt.

Party Canceled

Because of the death of her mother, Mrs. Laura Bradley, on Thanksgiving, Mrs. Basil Manly has recalled invitations to her tea, planned for Friday, December 2, in compliment to Mrs. Henry F. Grady.

Helen Howe, 1-Woman Theater, Here to Study Capital 'Types'

Harris & Ewing.
MISS HELEN HOWE

Widely Entertained To Address Press Club Sister of Mark Howe

In town to gather material for monologues of "social significance," Miss Helen Howe, a one-woman theater in the tradition of Ruth Draper and Cornelia Otis Skinner, is being widely feted. Having visited in Washington a number of times before, she has a host of friends here and several have entertained her since she arrived a short time ago.

At a luncheon of the Women's National Press Club today, Miss Howe will give three monologues that have been widely and well received. She has appeared before the Duke and Duchess of Kent in London and also here at the White House, as well as before large audiences from coast to coast.

A Bostonian by birth, Miss Howe is the daughter of M. A. De Wolfe Howe, a well-known writer, a Pulitzer prize-winner and now vice president of the Atlantic Monthly Publishing Co. Her brother, Mark Howe, is known in Washington, having served for some time as secretary to the late Chief Justice Holmes. Another brother, Quincy Howe, is head of the editorial department of Simon & Schuster, New York publishers, and is the author of a best sellers, "England Expects Every American to Do His Duty."

Miss Howe, who is staying at the Anchorage while in Washington, came here to gather material for a new series of characters and caricatures. She chose Washington rather than any other city because, as she expressed it, "All of America is here." In this connection she pointed out, however, that she was not going about, pencil and notebook in hand, by way of getting material. She hopes to meet and study as many different types as she can with the view of later portraying the more impressive ones in her repertoire. "But not as specific persons," she added, "only as types."

A course at the Theater Guild School in New York was the road she traveled toward creating her one-woman theater. It wasn't her idea at all; but after it was suggested, she decided to try. She did and has kept at it with marked success.

Miss Howe is a cousin of George Howe, Washington architect. Since coming to the Capital she has been entertained at a number of small luncheons, dinners and teas. Among her hostesses have been Mrs. Charles Warren, Mrs. Dean Acheson, Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, Mrs. John O. Herrick and Mrs. Ernest Gruening.

Mrs. Hitchcock Gives Dinner for French Envoy

The French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint Quentin, was ranking guest at a dinner given last evening by Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock at her home on Kalorama road. Covers were laid for 18.

On Friday evening, Mrs. Hitchcock will entertain at dinner again, having as guests of honor then Dr. Carl W. Ackerman, dean of the Columbia University School of Journalism, and Mrs. Ackerman, who will be her house guests over the week-end.

Alexander C. Liggetts Announce Son's Birth

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander C. Liggett are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son on Sunday at Columbia Hospital. The child is their first.

Mrs. Liggett before her marriage was Miss Priscilla W. Watson. She is the daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus Eugene Watson.

Congressmen Are Flocking Back To Hunt Houses for New Year

Senator-Elect Taft and Wife Due This Week
Ervins to Give Tea for Them Sunday
Senator Clark Here With Wife and 3 Daughters

By train, plane and automobile, Senators and Representatives are pouring into town from every district and State in the country. Some will stay through the Congressional session. Others are here briefly to find houses or apartments and will be back after Christmas.

Expected here by Sunday for a brief stay are Senator-elect and Mrs. Robert Taft, of Cincinnati, who will be feted at a tea Sunday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Morris Ervin at their home in Hillbrook Lane. Mr. Ervin is Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Times-Star.

According to present plans, Senator and Mrs. Taft will return to their home in Cincinnati after their visit here, coming back to the Capital again shortly before Congress opens. Both Senator Taft and his wife already have a host of friends here. He lived here when his father was in the White House and for a number of years afterward. Mrs. Taft, the former Martha Wheaton Bowers, also has been a Washington resident, having lived here when her father, Lloyd Bowers, was Solicitor General.

Senator-elect D. Worth Clark and Mrs. Clark arrived over the week-end and are now at the Shoreham while looking for a suitable home. With them are their three daughters, Nancy Lee, Helen Noel and Dorothy. Senator Clark comes back a notch higher than when he left. Since 1935 he has been a member of the House of Representatives, but the recent election shifted him into the "youngest Senators" class. He is 36, only three months older than Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, another in the youngest group. Mrs. Clark already is widely known as one of the most popular of the Congressional hostesses.

Senator and Mrs. Guy M. Gillette, also of Idaho, are here for a few days and are staying at the Hotel Raleigh, where Senator Theodore G. Bilbo also is registered.

Senator James E. Murray, of Montana, is occupying his apartment at the Shoreham. Senator George L. Radcliffe, who keeps his apartment at the same hotel throughout the year, is there now for a brief stay, having come over from Baltimore.

Self-Discipline Alternative to Nazi Law of Jungle, Mrs. Meyer Tells Montgomery Club Federation

New Values Needed New Deal Held Failing Problem Is Greater

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

"We must raise ourselves to the truth of the human law of self-discipline and social responsibility, where freedom can rest upon sound foundations, or we must accept the fact that the alternative is the Nazi law of the jungle."

This was the statement of Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the publisher of The Post, yesterday in an address before the semiannual meeting of the Montgomery County Federation of Women's Clubs. The session was held at the Chevy Chase Woman's Club with more than 200 attending.

Taking as her subject, "How Strong Is Conscience?" Mrs. Meyer asserted that "world wide revolution against our lack of standards is something much deeper than a demand for the redistribution of wealth. The bread and butter campaign of the New Deal, for example, is no longer accepted as the answer to our national difficulties, because the problem is really a greater one than that. The dissatisfaction with conditions is, in fact, by no means restricted to the depressed portions of our population. What is needed is not merely a program of juster economic and social reconstruction but one that will give new values to life itself.

Dictatorship Results In Severe Suffering

"The proof of this is that the German masses have not achieved a better standard of living under the fanatic that now rules them. On the contrary, they are suffering severely. But, through a clever use of mass psychology and propaganda the German people have been temporarily led to believe that they are sacrificing themselves for a great cause.

"What people yearn for here and everywhere is a world that can command every ounce of their moral and mental devotion, a world in which they profoundly believe and for which they are willing to die because they believe in it. The form of government that is going to win in the death struggle between dictatorship and democracy is the government that can command the greatest devotion from its people. Whether we like it or not, the challenge which the Nazis offer us is going to educate us. This education must inevitably begin with an understanding of ourselves, our restlessness and our dissatisfaction.

"The American dream of striving toward a slow and steady realization of an ever more democratic nation disappeared during the early part of this century because the upward surge of science and industry occupied our mind to the exclusion of everything else. We lost the moral standards of a more primitive society and we were so preoccupied with the accumulation of wealth that we had no time to establish a new ethical code to which we could all subscribe.

"What tortures us all is the fact that our mechanized lives force our bodies into closest proximity while our souls are separated from each other by vast deserts of egotism and futility. We talk about the brotherhood of man but do not know how to be brothers."

Environment Not All to Blame

Answering her own question, "How are we to achieve the restraint, common sense and moderation of which we are in such need?" Mrs. Meyer urged that we "above all things get over the modern delusion that the environment is wholly responsible for human character and that the individual will is helpless in the face of external handicaps. That philosophy robs mankind of every shred of nobility, responsibility and independence," she declared.

"Democratic government must continue to throw responsibility out upon local governments if we are to develop the fearless leaders and the strong, independent citizens which democracy needs. That is the only practical method of governing our vast Nation, as it is the only true basis for the education and the discipline of free people.

"A collective salvation from without, such as a dictatorship promises, can never succeed because it removes the primary factor in human growth, the transformation of the spirit through a personal, ethical relationship with our fellow beings. The law of love and self-discipline is actually a sterner law than the law of force. Only the strong in heart, in purpose and in self-control can realize the exsations of human brotherhood.

"Do we believe in the power of the human conscience or do we not? Can it evolve human values real enough, strong enough to stand up against the values that emerge from a philosophy of force? The answer depends wholly upon our individual ability to impose upon ourselves an ethical discipline and a sense of social responsibility that will lead humanity to new heights. Our reply to that question is of great historic importance, for it will decide the fate of mankind."

Mrs. Edward Smead, chairman of international relations of the federation, introduced Mrs. Meyer and also Mrs. Harry Lowe, who presented a soliloquy from Malvina Lindsay's "The Gentler Sex," preceding the address. Mrs. B. Peyton Whelan, president of the federation, presided at the business meeting in the morning, and the luncheon following. Guests of honor included Mrs. Harry Harcum, president of the Maryland State Federation; Mrs. Walter Kriel, first vice president; Mrs. Henry Naylor, president of the Prince Georges County Federation and Mrs. James Robertson, of Annapolis, president of the Fourth District.

THE BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL WOMEN'S CLUB last night, at its dinner meeting in the Lafayette Hotel, had talks on "Why I Am In My Present Job," by several of its prominent members. One of them was its president, Nina Kinsella, who has one of the most unusual jobs in its membership, that of assistant to the Director of the Bureau of Prisons in the Department of Justice.

MRS. BERTHA STRAUSS, who yesterday celebrated her eightieth birthday, was guest of honor at a luncheon given by members of the Jewish Women's Unit which work regularly at the District of Columbia branch of the American Red Cross. Mrs. Strauss was entertained at the Roosevelt Hotel, after which all of the members of the party went to the Chapter House and spent the afternoon working as usual.

They included, in addition to Mrs. Strauss, Mrs. H. M. Crandall, Mrs. Max Rich, Mrs. Gloria Herman, Mrs. Leon Strauss, Mrs. Harry Loeb, Mrs. Michael Hano, Mrs. Howard Sigmund, Mrs. Sidney Kaufman, Miss Florence Cohen, Mrs. Fred Levy, Mrs. Goldsmith Sigmund, Mrs. Joseph Salomon, Mrs. Jonas Michelis, Mrs. Frances Hagedorn, Miss Erma Moses, Mrs. Benjamin Golden, Miss Mary Steiner, Mrs. Harry Roller, Mrs. Hugo Frank, Mrs. Helen Brylawski, Mrs. Julia Oppenheimer, Mrs. William Jacobi, Mrs. I. M. Lowenthal, Mrs. Benjamin Spiegel, Mrs. Harden Cantwell.

MRS. PHILIP SIDNEY SMITH will give a general review of the latest books at the meeting of the Washington Club this morning at 11 o'clock. The meeting is in charge of Mrs. Gilbert S. Grosvenor, chairman of the program committee.

MRS. WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT heads the list of patronesses for the tea which will be given Thursday afternoon in connection with the two-day bazaar of All Souls Unitarian Church, Sixteenth and Harvard streets, and will attend the affair. It will be in the Gale Memorial Library, in charge of Miss Catherine Newton.

INVITATIONS have been issued by the Girl Scout Council of the District for a luncheon next Wednesday noon in Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A. which will be addressed by Miss Oleda Schrottky, director of dramatics on the Girl Scout National Staff.

The Chevy Chase (D. C.) Garden Club, at its next meeting, December 12, will have a Christmas program and members will bring plants for the Home for Incurables. Its yearbook is out, by the way, as is that of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs.

MRS. HARRY WALSKY is having a Hadassah membership committee luncheon meeting tomorrow at 12:30 at her home at Sedgwick Gardens, 3726 Connecticut avenue, to formulate plans for the great membership rally to be held December 20 to increase the Washington Chapter of Hadassah membership. Mrs. Walsky is chairman of the membership committee.

Bedtime Story

Thornton W. Burgess

The Prowlers

Your misfortune, sorrow, pain,
Some on else may count as gain.
—Old Mother West Wind.

That seems rather dreadful but it is true. You will find it is everywhere. It is true among mankind and it is equally true among the people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows. Sometimes it seems as if the greater the misfortune the more someone else profits by it.

On the pond of Paddy the Beaver was a lone young gander. Honker the Goose and his flock had left this young gander behind. They didn't do it because they wanted to but because they had to. The time had come when they had to resume their journey southward or run the risk of being frozen in. The young gander couldn't go with them because he had been wounded and couldn't fly. So he had been left behind.

He was lonely, very, very lonely. All his short life he had been a member of a flock. Never before had he known what it meant to be alone, to have no companions. And there was fear in his heart. It is dreadful to be alone and afraid.

What was he afraid of? He didn't know exactly. It was just a feeling of danger. What the danger might be he didn't know. Not knowing made it all the harder to bear. Yes, sir, it made it a lot harder to bear. If you know the danger you can watch out for it, but if you don't know what the danger is you don't know how to avoid it. That is how it was with the young gander who had been left behind. You see he was not old enough to have had experience, and experience makes all the difference in the world.

As he swam about uneasily in Paddy's pond he had a feeling that unseen eyes were watching him. He would stare into the woods around the pond looking for an unknown enemy but seeing no one. He had no appetite. Somehow he feared to go near the shore. Paddy the Beaver watched him and was sorry for him.

It is astonishing how fast word of another's misfortune travels. Before that first day of loneliness had ended all the Green Forest knew that the young gander had been left behind. To some it was a matter of no interest at all. To others it was a matter of a great deal of interest.

Said Reddy Fox to Mrs. Reddy, "My dear, there should be a dinner for us over at the pond of Paddy the Beaver. There could be only one reason for leaving that young gander behind; it was because he couldn't go with the others. It must be that he cannot fly, and if he cannot fly we should be able to catch him for he is young and has not the knowledge of experience."

So Reddy and Mrs. Reddy started at once for the pond of Paddy the Beaver. As they approached it they separated so that one would be on one side of the pond and one on the other. They took the greatest care to keep under cover. They did not want that young gander to know they were about. You see they hoped that if he had no suspicions he would sooner or later come ashore near enough for one of them to catch him. So they prowled around the pond or lay in wait watching what they fondly hoped was to be their dinner.

They had been there but a short time when they discovered that someone else was doing the very thing that they were doing. Someone else was prowling around that pond, keeping the pond in sight but himself out of sight. It was Old Man Coyote. He and Reddy saw each other at the same instant and each knew what the other was there for. There was a lifting of lips to show long teeth but there was no open quarrel. You see they did not want to give themselves away.

It was Mrs. Reddy who discovered another prowler and kept a respectful distance while she glared angrily and at the same time fearfully at Yowler the Bob Cat. She did not have to be told what had brought Yowler there in daylight when he much prefers to be abroad at night. She knew that somehow he too had learned of the young gander who had been left behind.

And the young gander swam in the pond of Paddy the Beaver and was afraid and knew not why.

D. C. Federation Of Clubs Hears Senator King

Indorses Sales Tax Ask Jefferson Library Instead of Memorial

An address on international affairs by Senator William H. King, and resolutions on District affairs, reaffirming indorsement of a sales tax; urging an emergency appropriation for heat, light and additional teachers in the schools and asking that the proposed new central library be designated as a memorial to Thomas Jefferson, marked the December meeting of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs. The session was held yesterday at the Roosevelt Hotel, with Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel presiding.

Mrs. Virginia White Speel, chairman of resolutions and former president of the federation, introduced the resolution on the library. It provided that the federation petition Congress as soon as it convenes, to reconsider and build as a fitting tribute to him the new library already planned. It pointed out that education was one of his chief interests, and proposed that Congress transfer funds already appropriated for the memorial to the library fund. No mention was made of the cherry trees.

Senator King, who spoke at the afternoon session, declared failure of the United States to join the League of Nations was responsible for present world conditions. He cited Woodrow Wilson's prediction that unless there were set up an institution to which nations could appeal for the rectification of injustices, their differences would be settled on bloody battlefields. He also quoted Theodore Roosevelt's suggestion of a concert of nations for settlement of controversies and an international police force so "if any nation runs amuck it can be brought into line."

"Our failure to join the League was like removing cement from blocks with which bulidings are erected," declared Senator King.

He blamed Great Britain for not having given support to the United States in its protest to Japan when she invaded Manchukuo, expressing the opinion, that united opposition then would have been a moral force sufficient to have turned the tide of events. He also declared a determination on the part of England and France to have protected the integrity of Czecho-Slovakia, and a willingness on their part to have accepted Russia as an ally would have halted Hitler.

Mrs. King was guest of honor at the luncheon of the federation, preceding Senator King's address. Music for the meeting was by Miss Grace Powell, violinist of the Washington College of Music, and Mrs. Lily Garnett, soprano, who was accompanied by Dorothy Emory at the piano. Mrs. Miles C. Trowbridge as chairman of music, presented the artists.

Mrs. Stewart Drafted To Aid P.-T. A. Library

Ready to Retire From Leadership in Movement Has Made Sanders Collection an Important One Now Serves 30 Groups and 1,000 Individuals

By Christine Sadler.

Just as Mrs. Andrew Stewart was ready to retire from active leadership in the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, to which she had given many years of service, she was "conscripted" to a committee to develop the Hannah Berliner Sanders Memorial Library.

That was in 1934, soon after the death of Mrs. Sanders, who was president of the congress. Today, the library contains more than 500 carefully selected volumes of special interest to parents and teachers. Forty-three new books and several magazines have just been added.

MRS. ANDREW STEWART

The books and magazines circulate from P.-T. A. headquarters in the National Education Association Building. Thirty P.-T. A. study groups and approximately 2,000 individuals use them annually. If any study group wishes a particular volume, it has but to report to the committee—which makes an effort to get it.

It was Mrs. Stewart who originated the idea by which the library is kept alive and growing. Large donations often come its way, especially from the husband of Mrs. Sanders, but most of the new volumes are purchased with donations given in memory or honor of some person. A sticker in the front of the book states the name of the donor and the person in whose honor the gift was made. Many of the members and P.-T. A. units are forming the habit of sending to bereaved families cards which state a memorial gift is being made to the library in honor of the person they are mourning.

There is little danger that Mrs. Stewart will be permitted to resign from chairmanship of the library committee, or from any of her other numerous activities. She does her jobs too well for that. Her P.-T. A. work began many years ago when she and Mrs. Sanders both were members at the old Powell-Johnson School. She worked at head of a committee of four women who served the first milk lunches in a Washington school, before the work had the sanction of the Board of Education.

When she became interested in the parent-teacher work, she thought immediately of extending its benefits to Central High School—of which she and her husband and her three children are graduates. She organized the Central P.-T. A. unit and was its president for four years.

During the District presidency of Mrs. Sanders, she served at different times as chairman of membership recreation and health.

Nor has that organization had a corner on her activities. For more than 20 years she has been a leader in work for the blind. She is a charter member of the National Woman's Party and is art chairman for both the Woman's City Club and the District Federation of Women's Clubs.

Those "few" offices do not begin to be all, but she urges that the complete list all at once would "show me up as a joiner." A native of Washington, Mrs. Stewart has lived here all her life. Her husband, Dr. Stewart, was for many years connected with the Bureau of Mines but is now retired.

Over the Coffee

When Banker Morton L. Schwartz allegedly heard Harry Hopkins exclaim "We will spend and spend, tax and tax, elect and elect!" he was so startled that he exclaimed in turn: "But then we will all be living in two rooms!"

Marine Aide . . . gilded

Thereupon Mr. Hopkins, who has gleefully harvested many a crop of goose pimples on Long Island terraces, drawled innocently: "Well, what would be wrong with that?"

And a greyish pall descended momentarily on the clubhouse porch at the Empire race track.

The nub and the crux of the Riddle of 1940 appears to be "Will Jim Farley go along with Franklin Roosevelt when the political poker game reaches a showdown?"

My own guess, and that of several who know Mr. Farley well, is that at the showdown he will slip his aces to President Roosevelt.

"—diagrammed like a new spinner"

When a foreign bigshot calls formally to pay his respects at the White House, each movement is mentally diagrammed and timed like a new play given to the first team by a football coach.

Or, from the viewpoint of foreigners unfamiliar with football, like the intricate steps of a ceremonial dance.

Occasionally one of the players makes a misstep, plunges offtackle when he should go around end. In such a crisis he is promptly straightened out by George Summerlin, the Chief of Protocol, who refrains from rolling a homemade brown-paper cigarette until after he has left the White House portals.

Continental trimmings are reduced to a democratic minimum, with the heavy gold braid of the White House aides serving as a sort of token payment of glitter; Capt. R. H. Williams, the Marine aide, heavily gilded, holds his own with any foreign princeling or chamberlain in crispness of bearing and turnout.

But FDR takes it all as informally as if it were an extra fancy barn dance.

"—he works as he poses"

Like all Cabinet members, Secretary Henry Morgenthau must have his official portrait painted for posterity and the austere walls of the Treasury.

But the hard-working, heavily burdened finance minister thinks it's a lot of nonsense and hates to waste his time. So he risks arousing a little artistic indignation by having budget reports, fiscal documents and official correspondence read aloud to him as he poses . . . The air is full of figures as the artist wields his brush.

Since the Munich pact the cynical young men around the State Department have been using an impolite synonym for treaties.

They think a treaty might have a chance to endure for longer than the average life of pacts (which is two years) if it were engraved in granite on a prominent mountain peak, or tattooed on the skin of a dictator, preferably on his forehead. Then it might last three years.

D. C. Heads Favor Local Civil Service

Proposal Indorsed Also 14 Other Items For Congress Action 15 Are Rejected

A proposed District civil service agency, under which bonda-fide residents of the District would get first call for District jobs, was indorsed by the Commissioners yesterday, along with 14 other legislative items lost last year when Congress sought a quick adjournment.

Another 15 items were either sent back to the corporation counsel's office for further study or permanently shelved.

Under the District civil service proposal, suggested last year by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, District residents would receive preference for all District jobs. Only where a position could not be filled by a local resident would the District call for a person certified by the United States Civil Service Commission.

The Commissioners said they had asked Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal to prepare a bill placing the office of chief clerk of the Police Department under the police superintendent. At present, it was explained, the clerk is not required to report to the police chief.

Professional child performers banned from the local stage would be exempt from the child-labor laws in a bill which Seal was instructed to prepare.

Other bills approved would:

Increase local appointments to West Point from 5 to 9 and to the United States Naval Academy from 8 to 15.

Give the Public Utilities Commission power to limit the number of taxicabs. Although a maximum number is not stipulated in the bill, the commission wants a "ceiling" of some 2,500 cabs.

Require the superintendent of insurance to set fire insurance rates for the District.

Reduce the license fee of real estate brokers from $50 to $25.

Amend the act with respect to regulation of plumbing to include installation and servicing of refrigeration and air-conditioning machinery and equipment.

Give the Commissioners the right to change the names of streets in the District. At present they have the power to name streets, but cannot change their designations.

Give the District authorities permission to condemn land to provide for widening of Wisconsin avenue between R and Thirty-seventh streets northwest.

Provide for establishment of an office of records of liens on automobiles in the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

Clarify present laws affecting school teachers' salaries; give power to Commissioners to regulate the hours for the lighting and extinguishing of street lights; authorize the Board of Education to accept voluntary services from citizens; authorize heating of the new municipal center buildings by the Federal central heating plant.

Gunman Identified By Sniper Victim Placed in Line-up

John Kanada, 23-year-old colored man, arrested Saturday after a gun battle with police, was placed in a line-up at police headquarters last night.

A newspaper picture of Kanada was identified as that of the "sniper," by Mrs. Edna L. Brown, in Georgetown Hospital with a bullet wound inflicted more than a week ago during an attack in which her companion, Peter Murray, was killed. Mrs. Brown, however, had earlier identified another suspect who established an alibi and was freed.

The gun Kanada fired at Officers H. A. Tutt and D. B. Plant when they arrested him, was proved by ballistics tests to be a different weapon from that used in the sniping attacks.

2 Arrested Here As Heads of Drug Smuggling Ring

A six months investigation by Treasury agents and narcotics squad detectives culminated in the arrest of two alleged leaders of a local dope ring last night.

Arthur L. Henley, 38, of 511 Seventh street northeast, was seized as he is said to have made a delivery of heroin near the Union Station, by Detective Sergts. R. J. McCarthy and Robert Bryant of the narcotics squad. His wife, Margaret, 35, was seized later at the Seventh street address.

A search of the Henleys' apartment revealed heroin valued at $200, a quantity of "sugar milk," used to cut the heroin, and a number of hypodermic needles, police said.

The couple were seized after one of the narcotics squad agents said he had purchased heroin from them on three occasions posing as an addict.

Citizens Urge U.S. to Increase Grants to D.C.

For Local Government People's Counsel Asked Post Is Vacant Now

A more liberal Federal grant to the District to pay expenses of local government was asked last night by two citizens' associations. Requests that the President fill the vacant post of District people's counsel also drew the support of two associations.

Georgetown Citizens

Contribution by Congress to the District budget of $11,300,000, instead of the present $5,000,000, was urged in a resolution adopted last night by the Georgetown Citizens Association.

Such an appropriation, members argued, would meet the present budgetary deficit and represent a "more equitable" distribution of costs of running the Capital. Among those supporting the resolution was John Ihlder, director of the Alley Dwelling Authority.

Present officers of the association were all chosen to serve another year. They are Ernest J. Lewis, president; B. H. Meyer, first vice president; Admiral Spencer S. Wood, second vice president; J. I. Cavanaugh, secretary, and Wallace Streater, treasurer.

North Capitol Citizens

The Board of Education was urged last night at a meeting of the North Capitol Citizens Association to erect a 12-foot fence around the McKinley High School Stadium to prevent unwanted kibitzers from getting a free view of what goes on inside.

Headed by E. B. Lawless, all but one of the association's officers were re-elected. They are: Mrs. Ada Mills Payne, first vice president; Guy Numbers, second vice president; James A. Crooks, secretary-treasurer, and Charles MacMurray, financial secretary. Delegates are Crooks and Baxter Smith, the only new name on the list.

Henry Gilligan, former member of the Board of Education and former president of the association, was named a life member.

Trinidad Citizens

Restoration of a more liberal Federal grant to meet District expenses was asked last night by the Trinidad Citizens Association, following a vote of indorsement for the District Commissioners for reducing budget estimates from $66,000,000 to about $50,000,000.

The group asked that President Roosevelt appoint some one to the long-vacant office of District Peoples' Counsel.

The association opposed any measure which would limit the number of cabs in the District, or reduce that number from the present level, and asked restoration of the old law prohibiting parking within 20 feet of the curb line to replace present regulations

Midcity Citizens

A proposal to build a new police station for the Second Precinct on the site of the old Abbott School at Fifth street and New York avenue northwest, was indorsed last night by the Midcity Citizens Association.

Leaders of the organization said this plan would permit a saving of about $127,000 when compared with plans for a new women's Bureau Building. The present women's Bureau, officials estimated, could be placed in good condition at a cost of about $15,000. The group asked that the President fill the vacant office of District people's counsel.

Among those who attended the meeting was Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

'Double Life' Of U.S. Charms Siamese Prince

The average American may not think of himself as a Jekyll-Hyde personality, but he leads two lives and does it rather well at that, his royal highness, Prince Chalermbol of Siam, insisted here yesterday.

The prince, second in line for the throne of Siam, is visiting J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of the Metropolitan Police Department, as part of a world tour to study law enforcement agencies.

Prince Chalermbol praised the Metropolitan Police and stated, in his opinion, the F. B. I. stands on a par with any agency he has surveyed.

He arrived in New York City about three weeks ago after studying England's famed Scotland Yard, the French Surete Generale and the German secret police agencies. He has been in Washington since November 19.

Describing his tour as an "eye opener" designed to result in improvements in organization of the Siamese federal police, Prince Chalermbol, who makes no show of his royal standing, admitted his eyes had been opened in more ways than one since he first arrived in America to face a barrage of ship news reporters and photographers in New York Harbor.

"Everything is speed in America," he said dazedly. "It is amazing to see how your people go home in the evening into another world and become almost different persons. There is so much business, but at night everyone is ready for entertainment."

He said he was especially surprised to find the District police display so little authority and said in Germany police were "all powerful," having more power than any body he studied.

While in Washington, the prince was the guest of John W. Maloney, of the American Red Cross, a friend of the Siamese royal family. He gave a lecture to executives of the Red Cross in the afternoon.

2 Policemen Promoted, 7 Retired

Murray and Polland Uniformed Sergeants Former Ace Detective

Promotion of Detective Sergt. Robert V. Murray, of the Tenth Precinct, and Private Thomas M. Polland, Ninth Precinct, both to the rank of uniformed sergeants, was approved by police officials, while seven officers were recommended for retirement.

Murray, first on the civil service list of those eligible for the post of uniformed sergeant, will take the place of Sergt. William F. McDuffie, veteran officer attached to the Ninth Precinct, whose retirement December 1 for disability was one of those submitted to the Commissioners.

Promoted to his present rank three months ago following capture of two dope-crazed bandits who held up 14 liquor stores, Murray has solved several major police cases, including a string of 150 housebreakings which he closed with the arrest of two men.

Polland, who was second on the civil service list, will fill the vacancy left by the death last week of Sergt. Robert A. Johnson, night inspector attached to the Second Precinct.

Others recommended for retirement were Privates Linwood German, Eleventh Precinct; Horace Watson, Eighth Precinct; W. W. Oliffe, Tenth Precinct; O. A. Hoarsley, Fourth Precinct; A. C. Paulsen, First Precinct, and Luke Rivercombe, Third Precinct. Physical disability was given as reason for retirement in each case.

'Detective' Held For Extortion On Girl's Story

A 33-year-old bus driver who allegedly represented himself as a vice squad agent to extort money from a young woman, was arrested by headquarters detectives last night.

The man was seized after police had laid a trap for him, informed by the woman of her "arrest" by the alleged extortionist on their first meeting last Saturday.

The woman told police the man picked her up on the street in the Northwest Section and accused her of soliciting. Telling her he was a policeman, he drove her to the Second Precinct and threatened to jail her unless she paid him $25.

Saying she had no money, the woman pleaded for time in which to raise the necessary funds, she told police. She agreed to meet the man when he notified her by telephone.

The alleged extortionist told her late yesterday to meet him in the rear of a house in the 1400 block of K street northwest and urged her to hurry as he had "only ten minutes to make roll call."

Notified of the rendezvous, Pick-up Squad Detectives John Baker and Robert Mayhan arrested the man as he arrived to collect.

Nolan's '35 Tax Bill Cut $11,000 by U.S.

The Government's 1935 tax bill against William J. Nolan, former automobile dealer here, yesterday was reduced from $13,287.68 to $2,177.35.

John P. Wenchell, chief counsel for the Bureau of Internal Revenue, asked the Board of Tax Appeals to approve the lower figure, and charges of fraud and willful intent to evade the tax were dropped.

Nolan, through his attorney, C. Leo DeOrsey, declared he filed a return in 1935, and that the Government had overassessed him.

War Economics Threat Cited By Dr. Nearing

Speaks at the Y.W.C.A. Fears 'World Suicide' Basis of Life Shifted

Shifting of the basis of prosperity to preparations for war is rapidly pushing the world toward "economic suicide," Dr. Scott Nearing, nationally known economist and sociologist, asserted last night in a lecture at the Y. W. C. A.

"Economic incentive is being choked by the fact that in the totalitarian states, the highest hope a young person can have is to die for his country," Dr. Nearing said. "No one is going to work just to become cannon fodder."

Dr. Nearing enumerated "forces pushing the world to disaster" as "economic nationalism, preservation of scarcity and unplanned regulation of surplus capital."

"The condition now exists so that if governments cease relief work and war preparations, they will be ruined economically," he declared.

He declared the world is in a state of "progressive bankruptcy." Increase in road building and in planned regulation of surplus capital may serve as a check, he added.

The meeting, open to the public, was attended by members of the American League for Peace and Democracy and other peace organizations. Dr. Nearing's speech was sponsored by a committee including the Rev. Richard W. Hogue, Daniel N. Shoemaker and Dr. John H. Gray, former president of the American Economic Association.

Dr. Dawber Links Church To Economics

Freedom Is Stressed At 'School in Living' Can't Ignore Money Security Is Heritage

The church must share in the promotion of the economic, social and intellectual freedom of humanity or be cast out, warned Dr. Mark A. Dawber last night at Calvary Baptist Church at the second day's sessions of the Washington School in Christian Living.

"Religious freedom must be bound up with economic freedom," insisted the speaker, who is executive secretary of the Home Missions Council, "and to speak and act as though religion were a thing apart and that it can survive without regard to the other processes of life is, to say the least, erroneous. It is more than that—it is perilous."

Declaring that "by far the largest part of the evil and deviltry that exists in the world is rooted in the economic processes by which men earn a living," Dr. Dawber said that "if the church is really concerned with the evil that destroys men's lives, then it must find a way to deal realistically with our economic life."

Constructive Course Urged

"It is because of economic and other conditions that the Church of the Living Lord must lift its voice," said he, "not merely in protest but rather in a positive, constructive way, to lead out into the realization of an economic way of life in which liberty, security and the pursuit of happiness may become the heritage of the people."

Dr. Dawber contended that unless a man can be made a Christian in his economic life, then he cannot be made a Christian, for "here it is that he spends most of his time, thought and energy, and if he cannot be a Christian here, then a very remote part of his life is Christian."

"After a man has accepted Christ as his Saviour," stated Dr. Dawber, "unless it is possible to conserve this commitment where he earns his daily bread, the future of his Christianity is very doubtful. The economic order in which people must spend most of their lives is destroying Christians faster than the church can make them."

Dr. Barnes Also Speaks

Dr. Rosswell P. Barnes, associate secretary of the department of international justice and goodwill, Federal Council of Churches; Dr. L. Foster Wood, secretary of the committee on home and marriage, Federal Council, and Dr. Hornell Hart, of Duke University, were among theout-of-town speakers who participated yesterday.

Local speakers and discussion leaders included Miss Bertie Backus, superintendent of the Alice Deal Junior High; James A. Nolan, director of the Criminal Justice Association; the Rev. John L. Mixon, social welfare chairman, Church Federation; Leonard de Gast, executive secretary, the Y. M. C. A.; Lennig Sweet, the Social Security Board; Wilbur J. La Roe, Parole Board chairman; Dr. E. H. Pruden, Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, Dr. Wesley M. Gewehr, of American University, and others.

Among the subjects being discussed at the "teaching mission," which is conducted jointly by the Church Federation, the D. C. Sunday School Association, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A., are the Christian Family, the City Church, Social Welfare and International Relations. Group chairmen are Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, the Rev. W. D. Bowman, Dr. Carl D. Wells, Dr. H. W. Burgan and Mrs. W. O. Tufts.

Law Backed by Popular Force Seen as Result of Munich

A new phase of the Munich agreement through which Czecho-Slovakia's borders were limited—development of due processes of law backed by popular force—is inevitable, Dr. Arthur Call, secretary of the American Peace Society, told the Society of Natives last night.

Speaking on "The Three Phases of the Munich Agreement," Dr. Call said that German youth has found in Hitler a source to tell them what to do—something the German people have been wanting since the Treaty of Versailles.

Dr. Call traced the culmination of the Czecho-Slovakian crisis through factual stages from the Versailles Treaty to the flights of England's Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain to meet the German dictator.

"The Sudeten Germans in Czecho-Slovakia considered Benes' treaty with Soviet Russia a stab in the back, and from that time on incidents occurred which focused Hitler's attention on the Czecho-Slovakian border minority," Dr. Call said.

Second stage of the pact was the "fearful" stage, which was characterized by President Roosevelt's messages to Hitler and other government leaders, he said, leading into the third, and more encouraging phase, indications that the world will settle disputes by law rather than force in the future.

Duke Will Play Southern California in Rose Bowl

The Washington Post Sports

16 WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Of comparatively recent origin but profound in its intensity is the Giant-Redskin football feud. Within the past three years the New York and Washington clubs have blossomed as the Hatfields and Mccoys of professional football. The league schedule makers have helped to fan to flame the bitterness of the Redskins-Giants. Each season since 1936 the last game of the regular season has pitted the two clubs against each other with the Eastern Division title at stake.

POVICH.

And now, with the Sunday battle at the Polo Grounds approaching, the Redskins and the Giants are tiffing openly. Coach Steve Owen of the Giants, ranking at the fact that the Redskins in 1936 and 1937 slapped down the Giants in the final game to win the Eastern championship, refused last week to permit the Redksins' photographer to film the Giants-Green Bay game for scouting purposes.

Mincing no words, he routed the Redskins' camera man off the premises. Owen does not want the enemy forewarned or forearmed on Sunday. These games with the Redskins are beginning to get personal with the Giants' coach. For a year he has been nursing a burning ambition to avenge that 49-14 pasting dealt his Giants last year with the Eastern title at stake.

That 49-14 score will, of course, provide Owen with an excellent talking point all week in his attempts to key his Giants to a satisfactory mental pitch. But he can go back farther, if he chooses, and he probably will. He can remind his Giants how, on the opening kick-off of the 1936 game, Tony Sarausky, the kicker, was carried from the field with a broken leg, so fiercely did the Redskins charge.

It should be no great task for Owen to make his team believe it can beat the Redskins, a very desirable state of mind. Owen merely has to point to the 10-7 score of the October game at Griffith Stadium to prove that it can be done.

Giants Are Favorites

The Giants doubtless will take the field as the favorites on Sunday, which will be a striking illustration of the vagaries of football. Because they will be favorites over a team that licked 'em by five touchdowns only a year before. With Cliff Battles in the Redskins' line-up again, the odds might have told a different story, but this year there is no Battles with the Redskins, and the Giants have been the more impressive of the two clubs thus far.

Ever since Mr. Owen recommended Ray Flaherty, [illegible]-headed end and assistant coach, to George Marshall as a fellow who would make a good coach for the Redskins, Flaherty has been his old boss' Nemesis. Until Flaherty took over the Redskins, the Giants reigned supreme in the East. But under Flaherty the Redskins began to knock off the Giants with great regularity.

Flaherty's ability to whip the Redskins into a competitive frenzy for each important battle has played no small part in the success of his team thus far, and it was a potent factor the other day against the Pirates. That was, in fact, the Redskins most important game of the season despite the fact that the opposition was not particularly tough.

Defeat of the Redskins at the hands of Pittsburgh would have meant the collapse of the entire campaign for the championship, and would have meant that the following week's game at the Polo Grounds would be a meaningless exhibition. Defeat by the Pirates also meant a terrific financial setback, the difference between a capacity crowd of 58,000 at next Sunday's game and a crowd that might not have reached 20,000 otherwise.

Victory Was Vital

So it was important that the Redskins beat the Pirates. And as a precaution, Flaherty introduced a new psychological wrinkle. For 15 minutes before the opening whistle, scarcely a word was spoken in the Redskins' dressing room. On command of Flaherty, Redskin players were stretched out on their backs in front of their lockers, their hands folded beneath their heads. In that position, they could aught but look at the ceiling and think. Naturally they would think only of the ball game that was about to start. Thus left to their thoughts, they were profoundly impressed with the necessity of winning. It was an eager, victory hungry crew that Flaherty finally turned loose on the field.

By Friday, or Saturday, Ray Flaherty could, if he would, tell you how the Redskins will fare against the Giants on Sunday. He will know by that time what the results of the mental alchemy will bring. He lays great store by mental attitudes and rarely has he been mistaken. In the dressing room before the horrible debacle against the Chicago Bears, Flaherty confided to a friend: "These guys couldn't lick a good high school team today. I know it. Just look at their faces. They haven't got it today." And he was eminently correct.

Notre Dame Rated Best In the Land

Irish Lead 3d Week
T. C. U., Duke Next
Pitt Dropped to 7th
Minn. Falls to 8th

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 28.—You can't beat the Irish. Notre Dame didn't play Saturday but for the third straight week Elmer Layden's greatest eleven tops the Associated Press football poll. Of the 90 writers participating in the final selection, 48 chose Notre Dame as the Nation's best team and the men from South Bend rolled up a total of 823 points.

This was enough to beat out Texas Christian and Duke, two elevens that performed admirably in Saturday's battles. The Horned Frogs, who downed Southern Methodist in their final and won the Southwest Conference title, wound up second with 23 first-place votes and 782 points. Duke ended its unbeaten, untied and unscored upon season by downing Pitt by a one-touchdown margin, the most signal victory of a not-too-strenuous schedule. The Blue Devils had 15 first-place votes and 733 points.

The remainder of the first ten held fairly true to form. Tennessee held fourth place, Oklahoma rose from sixth to fifth and Carnegie stepped from seventh to sixth this week. Pitt fell to seventh from fifth position, and Southern California and Holy Cross entered the first ten on significant wallopings of U. C. L. A. and Boston College. Minnesota dropped from eighth to tenth.

The first ten: (First place votes in brackets, points scored on 10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis).

Team	Points
Notre Dame (48)	823
Texas Christian (23)	782
Duke (15)	733
Tennessee (4)	607
Oklahoma	363
Carnegie Tech	345
Pittsburgh	251
Southern California	194
Holy Cross	189
Minnesota	177

Second ten: Cornell, 52; California, 51; Fordham, 41; Texas Tech, 39; Villanova, 38; Michigan, 37; Alabama, 23; Tulane, 17; Northwestern, 15; Dartmouth, 14.

Others mentioned: Nebraska and Mississippi, 6; Vanderbilt, 5; North Carolina, Georgetown, Clemson, and Army, 3; Stanford and Purdue, 2; Iowa State and Southern Methodist, 1.

Notre Dame has only one game—Southern California at Los Angeles Saturday—left on a schedule that has been uniformly tough. The Irish have been in the first ten in each of the year's seven polls, placing fifth, seventh, fourth and second before gaining first place and holding it for three straight weeks.

The list, which shows a swing away from Eastern supremacy as registered in last year's final poll, also reflects the changeable character of modern football. Only Notre Dame, tied for ninth; Pitt, the leader, and Minnesota, fifth, were in the first group a year ago.

California, second; Fordham, third, and Dartmouth, seventh, all made notable nosedives, the latter's biggest fall coming when it was beaten by Stanford, a late-season bloom, on the Coast, Saturday.

Chicago Cardinal Coach Resigns

Chicago, Nov. 28 (AP).—Milan Creighton resigned today as head coach of the Chicago Cardinal professional football team, a position he held since succeeding Paul Schissler in 1935.

Charles W. Bidwill, owner of the club which finished last in the National League's Western division this year, expressed regret at the severance of "a very pleasant association," and announced he had several outstanding men" under consideration as Creighton's successor.

Reports had Ernie Nevers, former Stanford and Cardinal player, and Dick Hanley, former Northwestern coach, as the leading candidates for the position. Nevers coached the Cardinals before the franchise was purchased by Bidwill. He was Irl Tubbs, assistant at Iowa the last two seasons.

Prune Bowl Team

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 28 (AP).—The West Tennessee Teachers College football team, undefeated and untied in its ten-game schedule, was advised today it was "the logical choice" to play the San Jose College eleven in the Prune Bowl December 26 if the game were played.

Eddie Anderson Named Head Coach at Iowa

By the Associated Press.

Iowa City, Iowa, Nov. 28.—The University of Iowa athletic board prepared tonight to meet Iowa's new football coach, Dr. Eddie Anderson, who is scheduled to arrive here at 3 p. m. tomorrow.

The board announced today that Dr. Anderson, who resigned as head football coach at Holy Cross yesterday, has signed a three-year contract to coach the Hawkeyes. Salary terms were not disclosed.

The contract of Irl Tubbs, who directed the Iowans' football destinies for two dismal seasons, was not renewed this year. Tubbs' team won only two games during his stay here.

Prof. E. G. (Dad) Schroeder, athletic director, who announced the board's decision today, said Dr. Anderson will have full authority over football matters at the university. He said Dr. Anderson will assist in drawing up the Iowa Conference schedule for 1942 at the Western Conference meeting in Chicago Thursday, where he will be formally introduced to the Big Ten.

He will also make the decision as to who will be the Hawkeyes' opponent in the opening 1939 game September 23.

Tubbs, Schroeder said, will be retained here until his contract expires, next July 1.

The board's announcement said Dr. Anderson will select his own coaching staff, and although no definite announcement has been made, it was indicated the former Holy Cross mentor will bring with him Joe Sheeketski, backfield coach, and Jim Harris, line coach, who have had a good part in his successful six years at the Worcester, Mass., school.

Anderson-coached teams there have won 47 games, lost 7, and tied 4.

40 Middies Report
4 Lettermen Play

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Nov. 28.—Approximately 40 candidates for the 1939 varsity basketball team answered Coach Johnny Wilson's call for first practice at the Naval Academy today.

Four lettermen, Fordwards R. C. (Gyp) Gillette and L. R. Geis, Center George Ghesquiere and Guard Bob Laney, captain, were out for the first hoop session. Ghesquiere did not work out, as he is a football end, and grid players seeking berths on the loop squad were given a five-day "vacation" between sports seasons.

Lucien (Pete) Powell, football captain and All-American end candidates may turn out for basketball, Wilson said. Powell played basketball in high school and is a "natural," Wilson said. He was one of the Eastern leaders in pass-receiving. He snared 27 forwards during the football season. Dave Wolfe, substitute guard, is another football man due to see service on the maple court.

J. E. Mansfield, F. C. Lynch, jr., A. R. McFarland and W. 5 T. (Navy Bill) Ingram 2d were lost to the team through graduation. Mansfield and McFarland were guards, Ingram a forward and Lynch a center.

"We lost four top men through graduation, and will need to develop a guard, a center and replacements all around," Wilson said.

Prominent candidates for a forward's berth include D. S. Bill, jr., R. C. Dexter, jr., W. G. Barton, H. T. Goransen, J. A. Holmes and Wolfe. Guard candidates include J. R. Dinsmore, C. W. Becker and F. H. Kolb. All won monograms denoting time in games last year but they did not play enough to win letters.

Other monogram winners who turned out were M. B. Royalty, J. M. Dunford, J. M. Hingson, W. M. Shaffer, M. J. Hanley, J. I. Hardy and N. I. Lee.

Navy won 11 of 14 games played last year, but lost the all-important Army game by a 38-44 score.

Gamecocks Defeat Catholic U., 7-0

Score on 1st Play After Kick-off
Joe Williams Over on 75-Yard Play
Catholic Touchdown Is Recalled

By Jack Munhall.

South Carolina uncorked a 75-yard touchdown pass on the first scrimmage play of the game yesterday to defeat Catholic University, 7-0, in the season's finale for both teams.

Twelve hundred fans had hardly settled into their seats at Brookland Stadium when the Gamecocks' Ed Clary faded from his own 25 and threw a perfect strike to his running mate, Joe Williams, who caught the ball on the 48 and scampered 52 yards for the score.

Ralph Dearth place-kicked the extra point and the game might just as well have been over, for during the remainder of the evenly fought game neither team seriously threatened to score as the mud and great punting combined to keep the ball around midfield.

Touchdowns Recalled

Each team had one touchdown recalled for infraction of the rules, and these instances were the only remaining thrills for the brave souls who huddled in the wind-swept wooden stands. Almost immediately following the kickoff after touchdown, South Carolina's Williams broke away from his own 22 to gallop into pay dirt which became mud in his eye when the officials detected a teammate holding and dished out a 15-yard penalty.

Cardinal rooters got a false thrill late in the fourth quarter when Burke Vidnovic's pass bounced out of Joe Carrig's hand into the arms if Vic Miller, another end, who sped some 65 yards to what he thought was a touchdown.

The officials, however, ruled the play an incomplete forward pass because of the rule that states a defensive player must touch the ball before a second offensive becomes eligible. Had Carrig held the ball long enough to claim temporary possession, Miller would have been eligible.

Threaten in Second Quarter

Catholic University's most menacing scoring gesture was cut short by the half-time gun. The Cardinals, sparked by the clever-running sophomore, Hank Brostek, marched from their own 38 to South Carolina's 29 in the closing minutes of the second quarter.

Again in the fourth quarter, the Cardinals were threatening the Gamecocks' goal line, but their attack grounded on the 33 when Vidnovic's third down pass fell incomplete. This scoring chance was set up by the lengthy punting of Pete Sachon, substitute Cardinal quarterback, who outkicked the touted Clary throughout the time he was in the game.

Punting Duel Began

The punting duel between Sachon and Clary began with the third quarter and was continued to the end. Both teams, having learned through experience their inability to stage a sustained offensive in the pea-soup mud, played cautiously, kicking usually on third down and hoping for breaks which never came.

Statistically, the Cardinals more than held their own with the strong Gamecocks who boast a victory over Duquense and a 6-6 tie with mighty Villanova. They outdowned the invaders, 7 to 6; outgained them from scrimmage on rushing plays and attained a slight edge in the kicking department.

7 Passes Completed

The Cards threw 18 passes and completed seven but most of them were for but short gains. South Carolina's secondary covered well

Trzeciak Named Best Blocker

Richmond, Va., Nov. 28 (AP).—Handy Andy Trzeciak, Virginia Military Institute football captain and backfield standout for three years, was selected today by the coaches of Old Dominion college teams as the season's best blocker.

Returns from a poll of the mentors by the Associated Press gave the New Kensington, Pa. cadet 18 of 20 votes cast. Lee McLaughlin, Virginia tackle, was the first blocking choice of three coaches and Forest Norvell, Richmond's rugged guard and A. T. Howard, Hampden-Sydney's 190-pound back from Culpeper, received one vote each.

Trzeciak, a senior who weighs 177 pounds, was shifted from quarterback to fullback last year, from which position he called signals. He was noted for his passing and running as a sophomore, placing a 101-yard dash from kick formation into the record books against South Carolina.

Riders Host To Eastern

Kick-off at 3:15 P. M.
Both Seek First Win

Officially concluding a public high gridiron series which ended as far as the winner was concerned more than a week ago, Eastern and Roosevelt clash today on the frozen sod of the Rider stadium with the hope that one or the other moves out of the winless class. Game time is 3:15. Barring another snowstorm, there will be no postponement.

Of the two, Eastern boasts the better record, having earned deadlocks in two of its five interhigh starts. And its latest loss, to Central, proved that the 1937 champions could put out more than a meager effort when faced with the sternest competition. Central won by a scant four points, the closest margin by which any team has upset the Easterners this year. The first quarter of the game saw Eastern take a lead and hold it until midway of the second period.

Although neither coach has staged workouts during Thanksgiving holidays, both sent their squads through light practice yesterday in the hope of overcoming some of the stiffness caused by no work. Coach Artie Boyd, of the East Capitol Streeters, met his club and reported that only one minor injury marred its condition after the gruelling Central game. Right Guard Goldstein still carries his sprained thumb in a bandage, but will be able to see action.

Coach "Woody" Woodward, of the Rough Riders, said that a couple of broken noses are his only outstanding injuries. These were suffered by Fullback George Zuras and Guard Bill Gundershimer. "Yankee" Laddbush, pony quarterback of the squad, has recovered from injuries received in an auto accident and will play. It was Laddbush who staged the longest touchdown dash of the season, against Western, when he intercepted a pass on his own 5-yard line and went 95 yards for the goal.

The outcome of today's game largely depends on the amount of fight Coach Woodward can instil in his Riders. It's the heaviest team in the series. The Riders might decide that five straight is enough to lose.

W.-M. Signs Coach Voyles

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Williamsburg, Va., Nov. 28.—Carl M. Voyles assistant athletic director and end coach of football at Duke University for seven years, tonight was named head football coach at William and Mary College.

Voyles, who received his athletic training under Bob Zuppke, of Illinois, and Wallace Wade, of Duke, succeeds Branch Bocock, whose contract expires this season.

The new Indian mentor comes here highly recommended by both Wade and Zuppke. Wade said "Voyles was of invaluable assistance in building up Duke teams, especially in end work and scouting."

Zuppke several years ago predicted that Voyles was destined to become one of the finest coaches in the country.

Just who Voyles will bring in as his assistants was not made known, but it is understood he will have a free hand in selecting his aides.

Voyles attended Oklahoma A. & M. College, later coached at Southwestern State Teachers College at Weatherford, Okla. In 1925 he went to Illinois as assistant frosh coach, was made head frosh coach and head varsity scout. Then to Duke in 1931.

Blue Devils Accept Invitation at Once For Game on Jan. 2

Will Be First Time in 'Classic'
Trojans Selected Late Yesterday
Texas Christian Shows Disappointment

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Nov. 28.—Unbeaten, untied Duke and twice-defeated but now high-riding Southern California will clash as the East-West rivals in Pasedena's annual Rose Bowl game next January 2.

The Trojans, selected unanimously this morning by the Pacific Coast Conference as its Bowl entry, immediately began negotiations for an opponent and by nightfall announced Duke's Blue Devils had been chosen and had accepted.

Head Coach Howard Jones, who tutored Duke's eleven in 1924, and Wallace Wade, the present Duke mentor, both have unbeaten records in past Rose Bowl games. Jones has guided the Trojans to three of their four victories at Pasadena and Wade, as coach of Alabama, scored two wins and one tie.

Wade brought Alabama out in 1926 and won over Washington, 20-19; and in 1927 he brought Alabama out again and tied Stanford. In 1931 he guided Alabama to a 24-to-0 victory over Washington State.

It will be Duke's first trip to the Rose Bowl.

Sentiment for Christian

Sentiment was high in Los Angeles for Texas Christian or Tennessee to get the bid, and the selection failed by a good deal to meet universal approval.

An informal canvass of downtown men brought unreserved sentiment for Texas Christian.

Tennessee, 904; Texas Christian, 855; Duke, 811; Oklahoma, 798, and Carnegie Tech, 367, to make the leaders.

Popularity of the North Carolina Duke sgained momentum over the week-end after they defeated Pittsburgh, 7 to 0, keeping intact an amazing record of never having been scored upon all season.

Southern California's record falls short of the Duke lads. Alabama pasted them, 19 to 7, in the opening game of the season, but the Trojans came back to win six straight games, including victories over Ohio State and California, and then Washington won a 7-6 decision over the Trojan warhorse.

With neither Duke nor U. S. C. geared for high scoring, the wild touchdown maneuvers of Texas Christian held the public's interest up to tonight's announcement.

Hunter Issues Statement

Director Hunter closed negotiations with Duke officials and later issued a statement. It read:

"The University of Southern California appreciates the honor conferred upon it by the Pacific Coast Conference in being selected for the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena January 2. We are proud of the record made by our teams there and I am sure Coach Howard Jones and the Trojan players will do their level best to see that the Far West makes a strong showing at Pasadena.

"The general athletic committee of the university is pleased to announce that Duke University, of Durham, N. C., has been selected to represent the East. It has always been the aim of the Pacific Coast Conference and Tournament of Roses officials to perpetuate the East-West idea, which was born with the origin of this annual classic.

"Duke's football record of being undefeated, untied and unscored on in nine games is unequaled by that of any other major team in the Nation.

"Coach Wallace Wade has brought teams to the Rose Bowl before and the University of Southern California considers it an honor to play one of his elevens.

"In making its selection of an Eastern opponent, the athletic committee took cognizance of the fact that a majority of players on the Southern California squad voiced a desire to meet the Duke team."

Durham Goes Wild Over Duke Selection

Durham, N. C., Nov. 28 (AP).—This tobacco-manufacturing city of 50,000 went wild tonight when word spread that Duke University's unbeaten, untied and unscored-upon football team had been selected to play Southern California in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Calif., January 2.

Duke students, led by the 60-piece Blue Devil Band, marched from the university campus through downtown streets amid whoops and yells.

Coach Wallace Wade announced only: "We will accept the bid."

It will be the fifth football trip to California for Wade, who made his first excursion to the West Coast Rose Bowl game as a guard on the Brown University team in 1916. Later, as a coach, he carried three Alabama teams to Pasadena, gaining two victories and a tie.

Officials said the bid was accepted after a telegraphic poll of Southern Conference members. The conference has a rule forbidding post-season games. Coach Wade said enough votes had been received to "justify acceptance of the bid."

The Duke squad broke training after its defeat of Pittsburgh in a snowstorm here last Saturday and it was indicated the players would not be recalled to practice for several days.

"The players are pretty well tired and will welcome a few days rest," a squad member said.

Gov. Clyde R. Hoey said at Raleigh he was "delighted" the invitation came to Duke. He said he probably would be unable to attend because the Legislature meets here January 4.

"I feel that the invitation has been richly won by Duke's unparalleled record," he said.

Villanova Gets Bid

Philadelphia, Nov. 28 (AP).—Clipper Smith, Villanova College football coach, disclosed today his team had been invited to play the Sun Bowl game at El Paso, Tex., but probably would decline. The college turned down a similar bid last year.

Gloves Card Tomorrow

Thompson Favored

District Golden Gloves boxing warfare enters the senior bracket at Joe Turner's Arena tomorrow night when from 12 to 14 bouts get under way promptly at 8:15 o'clock.

Tonight between 6:30 and 8 o'clock, at Knights of Columbus Hall, from 30 to 35 seniors are to weigh in under the supervision of the District Boxing Commission.

Bouts involving 135 pounders and 147 pounders are expected to feature tomorrow night's festivities, with outstanding boys being enrolled in both classes. Carroll Wright is set to defend his title in the 135-pound class.

The 147-pound championship is a wide-open affair following the graduation of Bob Mathias, last year's champion, into the professional field. Battling determinedly to supplant Mathias, however, is Steve Thompson, Southwest Washington's combination boxer and puncher, who returns to the Golden Gloves after a year's absence.

Texas Christian Is Disappointed

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 28 (AP).—Coach Leo (Dutch) Meyer, of Texas Christian University's undefeated, untied Horned Frogs, expressed deep regret tonight over his team not being invited to the Rose Bowl.

"I am deeply sorry we couldn't go to the Rose Bowl," he told the Associated Press. "My boys wanted it so badly.

The squad voted after the game with Southern Methodist Saturday, when the Frogs clinched the Southwest Conference title, to go to the Rose Bowl in preference to other bowl games if invited.

Eastern Analysis

New York, Nov. 28.—Of course, the football season, literally speaking, isn't ended yet. There still are some regularly scheduled college games to be played next Saturday, and the professional league is still in a state of uncertainty regarding the teams that will meet in the play-off, and of course there are several bowls to be filled with post-season performances.

VIDMER.

But the campaign is over for most of teams and it is possible to look back with some perspective. For some there were deep disappointments. For others there were moments of unexpected triumph. For most there was at least satisfaction. Let's see what some of the teams accomplished along the way.

Starting close to home it was, on the surface, a disastrous season for Columbia. The men of Morningside lost six games and won only three. But those cold statistics look a lot worse than it really was. Handicapped as usual by the lack of reserves, Columbia managed to get in two quick victories over Yale and Army before the regulars began to need any help. But when injuries, ailments and fatigue began to take their toll there was no help coming, and the Lions went down before six of their last seven opponents, beating only Virginia along the way.

Still, it wasn't such a disastrous campaign as the actual results seem to reveal. Columbia lost two of its games by the margin of a single point, Penn and Syracuse scoring the slender victories over the Light Blue. The Navy won by less than a touchdown and at least Columbia scored against every opponent except one—Colgate.

It was a stiff schedule that the squad was forced to face and yet it was in there battling to the last shrill whistle of the final game, Sid Luckman firing three touchdown passes against Brown in the last quarter of the campaign.

True to Form

Fordham didn't do as well as it did a year ago, when the Maroon went through undefeated, but it didn't figure to. Losing the main strength from its great line of 1937, Fordham still was strong enough to stave off defeat except in one game, finally losing to Pittsburgh after playing the Panthers to three scoreless ties in three years.

The team was tied by North Carolina and Purdue, but beat everybody else that came along. It wasn't a great season for the Rams, nor was it a disastrous one, and two sophomores, Kuzman and Eshmont, gave high promise of providing the team with power in the line and speed in the backfield for the next two years.

New York University went along about as expected. It was no match for Ohio State or Fordham, but beat a Rutgers team that was good enough to beat Princeton later in the season, and played close contests, winning or losing, against its other foes.

As was expected Cornell and Dartmouth proved the strongest squads in the Ivy League. Cornell ran into one surprise along the way when Syracuse scored three times in the last 9 minutes and squeezed out a 19-17 victory over the big Red Team from Ithaca, and Pennsylvania held Cornell to a scoreless tie, which came as another shock to football followers.

Sectional Test

Dartmouth went through undefeated until its next to last game when Cornell conquered the Indians and then went all the way to the Coast and lost to Stanford, which had suffered five straight defeats. This might indicate that football is stronger on the Pacific Coast than it is on the Eastern Front, but not necessarily. True, Dartmouth was one of the best that the Ivy League had to offer and Stanford didn't belong with the leaders on the Pacific. But there were other Eastern teams, not included in the Ivy group, which would have been more representative of the best on the Atlantic side of these United States.

Pittsburgh was heralded at the start of the season as the class of this section and maintained that rating as it went through its first six games without any real trouble. Even when it was upset by Carnegie Tech it was marked down generally as an accident that never would happen again, and Sutherland's squad was a top-heavy favorite to beat unbeaten Duke in its final game.

But Duke remained unbeaten all the way and finished its season without even being scored on. The Southerners didn't have a very tough schedule, victories over Colgate, Georgia Tech, North Carolina, North Carolina State and Pitt being the major accomplishments. But the final success against the Panthers, backed up by the season's record, should earn the team the trip to the Rose Bowl.

Carnegie Tech, losing only to Notre Dame, was the surprise of this section, while Georgetown, manned mostly by sophomores, concluded its campaign without a tie or defeat to move back into prominence. Of the two, however, Carnegie played the more representative schedule with a 7-6 victory over Holy Cross standing alongside the upset of Pitt. Georgetown scored exactly two touchdowns in each of its last five games and two were enough to beat Manhattan, Temple, Bucknell, West Virginia and Maryland in a row.

Holy Cross, losing only to Carnegie, also belongs up with the best in this part of the country with Manhattan, Georgia, Colgate, Temple, Brown and Boston College among its victims.

Moving back to the Ivy League for the moment, Yale had the

15,000 D. C. Fans Will See Redskins Play Giants

'Skins Leave Wednesday For Scene

Go to Garden City To Practice Secretly Ace Passers to Vie Interest Widespread

By Shirley Povich.

An unprecedented mass exodus of Washington fans whose number is expected to reach 15,000 will make the journey to New York on Sunday for the Redskins' crucial game with the Giants, it was indicated yesterday.

Redskin headquarters were besieged throughout the day by Washingtonians clamoring for tickets to the Polo Grounds game, which will decide the Eastern Division championship of the National Football League.

The entire upper deck of the south stands at the Polo Grounds, containing 16,000 seats, has been reserved for the Washington contingent. Redskin officials who originally requested 8,000 reservations, doubled their request following the team's victory over the Pirates on Sunday.

Three thousand tickets were sold at the Redskins' office yesterday, bringing to 6,000 the total already in the hands of Washington fans. On hand at the end of the day's business were 2,000 choice reserved seats with another allotment from the Giants' office due to be received today.

Officials of the Giants reported in New York yesterday that a sell-out crowd of 58,000 was expected for the game.

Ticket Requests Heavy

Requests for tickets by Washingtonians have doubled the number received at a similar period last year, when 8,000 Capital fans made the trip to the Polo Grounds and watched Cliff Battles & Co. lay waste to the Giants by a 49-14 score.

Railroads are reporting an unprecedented number of reservations for special trains by Washington clubs, civic groups and other organizations. The Junior Board of Commerce's "Redskin Special" will carry 400 fans to the scene.

Because of the railway companies' rule against chartering special trains by other than groups or clubs, hundreds of Washington fans have banded in special parties and arranged for special trains. One group has named its train the "Sammy Baugh Special," another is sponsoring the "Pinckert Special." Riley Smith and Wayne Millner "specials" have also been chartered.

A special train has also been reserved for a group of 70 Frederick, Md., followers of the Redskins, and Richmond, Portsmouth, Norfolk, Newport News and Fredericksburg, Va., contingents will swell the totals.

Head Coach Ray Flaherty of the Redskins announced last night that he would take his team to New York on Wednesday and that the athletes will go directly to Garden City, Long Island, where they will be quartered in seclusion until Sunday morning. The team will practice at nearby St. Paul's School gridiron.

All Redskins I

All of the Redskins will be physically fit for the game with the Giants, according to Flaherty, who minimized the minor injuries suffered against the Pirates. He gave the squad a day off from practice yesterday, but this morning they will face a long workout at Griffith Stadium.

In New York, the Giants staged a practice on the snow-covered Polo Ground field, their first workout since their Thanksgiving Day tie with the Brooklyn Dodgers. After three successive defeats by the Redskins, the Giants defeated the Washington team at Griffith Stadium in October by a 10-7 score.

Assistant Coach Bo Molenda, of the Giants, scouted the Redskins against the Pirates, in company with Tuffy Leemans, Washington youth who will be the Giants' chief scoring threat when the opening whistle blows on Sunday.

The battle on Sunday will bring together the two ace passers of the National Football League in the Giants' Ed Danowski and Washington's Slingin' Sammy Baugh. Danowski currently is setting the pace in passing efficiency, having completed .54 per cent of his heaves, while Baugh shows an average of .51 per cent.

Seven Catholic University seniors concluded their college careers. They were Vidnovic, Wayne Ambrose, Frank Cairo, Johnny Carvelas, Joe Bunsa, Capt. John Kasunich and Frank Krawczel. All but the last-named played yesterday.

Second Guessers Lead Powell Touch League

That the "second guessers" have a decided advantage over ordinary run of the mine football players is proved by the Powell Community Center Boys Club Touch Football League.

Leading the race is none other than the "Second Guessers," with four victories and no defeats. Argyle Blues and Fanning Favorites are tied for second with two wins, one loss and a tie. Touchdowners and Monday Morning Quarterbacks, neither of which has won a game, fight it out tonight at 8:30 o'clock for undisputed possession of the cellar championship.

Monty Stratton's Leg Is Amputated at Knee

Mrs. Monty Stratton holds year-old Monty, jr., while waiting for news of her husband's condition outside his hospital room in Dallas. The brilliant young Chicago White Sox star suffered an amputation of his right leg, as the result of an accident while hunting

Chisox Pitcher Shot While Hunting Condition Is Called Satisfactory Pistol Was Accidentally Discharged

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 28.—Monty Stratton, 25-year-old ace of the Chicago White Sox pitching staff, today underwent an operation for amputation of his right leg.

The leg was severed at the knee after a hasty decision when it was noted during the day that the athlete had regained strength with the aid of two blood transfusions last night and today. He had been in a weakened condition from loss of blood caused by an accidental pistol shot wound while hunting rabbits Sunday afternoon.

Blood for the transfusions was given by two of his seven brothers, Hardin and Roland.

After the operation, Dr. A. R. Thomasson said Stratton's condition appeared satisfactory under the circumstances, although it still was critical and it would require 24 hours to determine how well his system would respond to the operation.

Barring complications, the surgeon said, Stratton should "pull through."

The accident occurred when a pistol he was carrying in a scabbard went off accidentally and sent a bullet into his thigh and downward, severing the large artery behind the knee.

Each of the last two seasons, Stratton, a right-hander, has been the leading pitcher on the White Sox staff with 15 wins and 5 losses in 1937 and 15 wins and 9 defeats last season.

Lou Ambers Downs Cross

10,000 See Bout Cross Impressive

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, Nov. 28.—Former Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers won a ten-round decision from Tommy Cross, of Philadelphia, tonight in his comeback toward a return bout with Champion Henry Armstrong.

Ambers weighed 138, Cross 136.

The Herkimer, N. Y., Italian provided a boxing exhibition for the crowd of 10,000 that jammed the arena, but the slim Philadelphia Negro was willing to mix it and carried the fight to Ambers throughout.

The former champion started slowly with Cross' sharp left jab holding him at a distance. Ambers appeared willing to receive Cross' jabs, and several times later in the bout, after he had hammered Cross from ring post to ring post, dropped his guard and smiled when Cross pummeled him with lefts and rights about the face.

In almost every round after the third Ambers appeared to have the Negro ready for the kill. Cross refused to cling to Ambers and constantly kept him at a distance with his left. Lou punished Cross at infighting and wrestled despite warnings from Referee Spud Murphy.

The last four rounds saw Ambers hammering Cross about the ring, but the Negro stayed upright and only twice appeared to be sinking. Each time, however, Ambers relaxed and permitted Cross to recover.

Whizzer Took $15,000 And Still Has It!

Byron (Whizzer) White, professional football's highest paid player, has disproved the old saw that you "can't have your cake and eat it, too."

Paid $15,000 for a year with the Pittsburgh Pirates, the 21-year-old Coloradan said here yesterday that he had not spent a cent of his salary check.

Indorsement of various items of merchandise, and appearances in exhibition games since the season started have paid his expenses, he told the Associated Press.

Conn Whips Sol Krieger

Wins Nontitle Bout Victor Is Dazed

Pittsburgh, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Black-haired Billy Conn, of Pittsburgh, 165¼, tonight jabbed his way to a 12-round nontitle decision over Solly Krieger, 163, Brooklyn, recognized by the National Boxing Association as the world's middleweight champion.

Six thousand fans in Duquesne Garden roared their approval when the announcer called the decision unanimously in favor of Conn. The unofficial scorecard gave Conn nine rounds and Krieger three—the fourth, tenth and eleventh.

In those three Krieger, who recently blasted the NBA title from Al Hostak at Seattle, Wash., proved that Conn could not slug with him, and gave him a terrific beating about the body and face.

Conn did not go down. But in the tenth and eleventh rounds Krieger's sharp right uppercuts jerked the Pittsburgher from his feet and dazed him slightly.

Dean Will Arrive Tomorrow for Bout

"Man Mountain" Dean, the thin, emaciated athlete who tangles with the recently crowned heavyweight champion, Jimmy Londos, Thursday night at the Arena, will arrive in town one full day ahead of time for two important reasons.

(A) He wants to check up on Washington coppers' traffic-directing tactics.

(B) He wants to make a tour of the Bureau of Investigation, and to shake hands again with his old friend, Director J. Edgar Hoover.

Another supporting bout was added to the card last night with the signing of Jules Strongbow, Cherokee Indian, and Herbie Freeman, veteran Pacific Coast performer.

Bill Boyd, Everett to Battle Here

Box Monday at Arena Buck Is Dangerous May Score Upset Ahearn Is Talkative

By Lewis F. Atchison.

With a pardonable touch of pride in his voice, Herr Goldie Ahearn, the robust gent who stirs up quarrels between pugilists for the benefit of the public, last night admitted he had plucked one of the prize blooms from the matchmaking hothouse in booking Bill Boyd and Buck Everett for Monday night's featured fuss at the Arena.

"Ya know what's liable to happen," he inquired, fearlessly stabbing himself under the vest with a pair of fat thumbs, "Ya know what's liable to happen? Why, Everett's liable to knock out Jeck Dempskey's Boyd—at least beat him, and if he does, ya know what then? Well, Dempskey's liable to be sore on me. He's liable to be boiling under the collar, that's what.

"But me, I can't help it. Let 'im be sore on me. Let 'im take a sock at me—I still can't help it. I gotta give the public some hection, ain't I? Sure I have. I gotta give them a good fight ain't I? Sure I have. They said Billy Nichy took a dive, didn't they? Sure they did. Well, when Everett polishes off Boyd this time, what are they going to say? Are they going to say Boyd took a dive with Dempskey in his corner—Dempskey the former woild champeen? Are they? They better not. If Jack ever heard anything like that he punch 'em all on the chin, personally."

Jack Dempsey, we hope you've gathered, will be in the corner of the aforementioned Boyd, of whom he is part proprietor. Boyd's initial appearance here several months ago resulted in his knocking out Billy Nichy, of Pittsburgh, during a heated exchange of leather in the second round. There were some cries of "Fake" and "Dive" at Nichy's demise, but it must be pointed out that only one man, "Hard Luck" Hardin, has gone the distance with Boyd since that engagement, staying ten rounds and losing the decision last Saturday night.

Ahearn explained that he has had an Everett-Boyd bout in the back of his head for some time but couldn't book it before because Everett was not ready. He didn't want to put him in against the hard and sharp punching Boyd until he was at his best and patiently bided his time until this week before making the match.

Harry Raskin, who severed negotiations with Joe Gould recently, is due in town today. Bob Tow, whom the veteran trainer had under his wing, lost to Eddie Blunt in ten rounds and was knocked out in six immediately after leaving Roskin.

Petey Sarron and Yucatan Kid have been rematched on a Christmas Fund card at Miami, December 16. Joey Archibaldi and Miguel Flores originally were cast in the feature bout, but the latter lost to Petey Powell and automatically killed the bout.

Tommy Hoover has carved a nice name for himself in Miami, winning his last five bouts and elevating himself to a cofeature status.

Tony Canzoneri and Howard Scott, who staged a bristling battle at the Coliseum in New York last week, may be rematched in New Orleans early in December. Their New York bout was well received, what with Scott dragging himself off the carpet twice to force the fighting. Howard, incidentally, is planning the purchase of a cab and may set himself up in the hacking business in the near future.

Carlins Park, Baltimore, is planning a reopening the second week in December, and it may feature a Scott-Lou Ambers bout.

Irish Joey Perry, the likely looking lightweight, recently recovered from an attack of influenza just in time to slip on the ice and sprain his shoulder. Perry had accumulated a string of five straight victories until floored by illness.

Henry Armstrong Offered $35,000 For Paris Bout

New York, Nov. 28 (A.P.).—Eddie Mead, manager of World Lightweight and Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong, said today he had received an offer of $35,000 to have Armstrong defend his 145-pound crown against Pedro Montanez, the Puerto Rican, in Paris.

The offer, Mead said, came from Jeff Dickson, who promotes fights in the French capital. The fight would be held February 19. Mead said he would consider the offer. It has been known for some time that Armstrong was toying with the idea of making a tour across the Atlantic and British promoters have been after him.

Berger Beats Brink

A.P. Picks All-Stars 3 From Each School Trio Demoted Coaches Select Squads

By Barton Pattie.

Associated Press Correspondent.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 28.—The University of Virginia's "Big Six" champions and Virginia Military Institute, also undefeated in the State, divided honors on the 1938 Associated Press All-Virginia football team by placing three men each on the mythical squad.

Two Richmond Spiders won All-State recognition while Washington and Lee, Roanoke and Virginia Tech each landed one man on the team. The squad is based on the selections of 22 head coaches and their assistants and scouts at Old Dominion colleges.

The voting produced a big surprise in dropping three 1937 All-Staters down to the second team. The major upset came when the coaches decided that if they had all of the State's fine crop of tackles available for action, Sophomore ee McLaughlin, of Virginia, and rugged Joe Ochsie, Washington and Lee, would get the call over Dick Strickler, big V. M. I. senior, who had been a member of the honor group for the past two years. Dick Boisseau, W. and L.; Andy Fronczek, Richmond sophomore, and Sam Walker, William and Mary, received most of the remaining votes.

Spider Star Nosed Out

Capt. Frank Pierce, Virginia Tech, and Capt. Ken Moore, Roanoke, nosed out Ray Taylor, V. M. I., and A. B. Marchant, Richmond, incumbents, for the flank positions.

Paul Shu, V. M. I., brilliant triple threat and a repeater on the team, and Jim Gillette, Virginia junior, the season's most improved player, won the unanimous support of the coaches for backfield berths and serve as cocaptains. Their running mates are Handy Andy Trzeciak, V. M. I., honored for the third straight year, and Arthur Jones, Richmond's spectacular sophomore ball carrier. Bud Kovar, left-handed passer and expert blocker at V. M. I., ran fifth on the ballot.

Voting on the guard candidates was close also, with Bill (Red) Echols, V. M. I., and Capt. John Acree, Virginia, getting the call over such fine candidates as Brown, W. & L.; Gray, V. M. I.; Norvell, Richmond, and Devlin, Virginia Tech.

Richmond's great junior center, Ed Merrick, won the pivot job by a wide margin with Dick Irby, V. M. I., and Capt. Herb Krueger, William and Mary, running next in that order.

Five of the All-Staters will be back next season. All but Ochsie, Merrick and Trzeciak are natives of the Old Dominion.

Associated Press All-State team for 1938:

Frank Pierce, of Suffolk (V. P. I.), end, senior, 5 feet 11 inches, 173 pounds.

Ken Moore, of Vinton (Roanoke), end, senior, 6 feet, 172 pounds.

Joe Ochsie, of Paterson, N. J. (W. & L.), tackle, senior, 6 feet, 190 pounds.

Bill (Red) Echols, of Portsmouth (V. M. I.), guard, senior, 6 feet, 193 pounds.

Paul Shu, of Alexandria (V. M. I.), back, junior, 5 feet 11 inches, 184 pounds.

Andy Trzeciak, of New Kensington, Pa. (V. M. I.), back, senior, 6 feet, 175 pounds.

Arthur Jones, of Suffolk (Richmond), back, sophomore, 6 feet 2 inches, 181 pounds.

Second team: End—Marchant (Richmond), Taylor (V. M. I.). Tackle—Strickler (V. M. I.), Boisseau (W. & L.). Guard—Brown (W. & L.), Gray (V. M. I.). Center—Irby (V. M. I.). Back—Kovar (V. M. I.), H. Hogan (W. & L.), Demuro (V. P. I.), Bishop (W. & L.).

Third team: End—Brittingham (V. M. I.), W. George (Virginia). Tackle—Walker (W. & M.), Fronczek (Richmond). Guard—Norvell (Richmond), Devlin (V. P. I.). Center—Krueger (W. & M.). Back—Justice (W. & L.), Shelby (V. M. I.), McLaugherty (Virginia), Hoskins (Richmond).

Davey O'Brien Named Nation's Top Player

Wins Heisman Memorial Trophy Award Gains Nearly 90% of Ballots Also Selected by Maxwell Club

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 28.—Wee Davey O'Brien, Texas Christian's sensational quarterback, wins the Heisman Memorial Trophy for 1938 as the outstanding college football player of the United States, according to announcement made by the Downtown Athletic Club of New York tonight.

The trophy committee of the club announced that with practically 90 per cent of the ballots in, O'Brien is making a runaway race of it. Marshall Goldberg, Pitt's great halfback, is second choice; Sidney Luckman, Columbia back, third; Vic Bottari, California halfback, fourth, and Bob MacLeod, of Dartmouth, another back, fifth.

O'Brien leads the voting in the East, South, Midwest and Southwest and is runner-up on the Pacific Coast 1 point behind Bottari. Luckman is second in the East and Goldberg third, while the Pitt player ranks second in the South, with George Cafego, of Tennessee, third.

The trophy, a bronze figure of a football player mounted on an ebony base, perpetuates the memory of the late John W. Heisman, who was a top rank football coach for 36 years. At the time of his death he was director of athletics at the Downtown Athletic Club.

The trophy will be formally presented to O'Brien at a dinner at the club next Tuesday evening. He will fly here with a contingent of Texans led by Amon Carter, of Fort Worth.

O'Brien Is Selected For Maxwell Award

Philadelphia, Nov. 28 (A.P.).—Davey O'Brien, star passer of Texas Christian University, was selected today by the Maxwell Club to receive its annual award as the outstanding football player in the United States.

The board of governors of the club, an organization of football coaches, officials and sports writers in the Philadelphia area, announced that O'Brien would come to Philadelphia January 10 for presentation of the Robert W. Maxwell Memorial Trophy.

Hunting

By Bill Ackerman

Until the cold snap, that effectively put an end to the "bluebird" weather fishermen have been enjoying for several weeks, the flights of wild fowl were both large and numerous. There hasn't been a report from any section but what this has been true. The fly in the ointment, however, being the preference the birds showed for the open water, and their refusal to come in to the decoys.

ACKERMAN.

We know of no instance where any wildfiower had been able to take his bag limit. In fact the best one so far was a total of 15 ducks for three days shooting. But with the perfect weather, and the 7 o'clock time limit, hardly anything else could be expected.

Starting with Thursday morning, all that was changed, the cold bringing the birds in where the hunters could get a chance to shoot. Crawford Savage says Sinepuxent and Chincoteague Bay blinds are producing fine sport, and continued cold weather will only make it better. From the lower Potomac, reports have been few and far between, with Occoquan Bay having the best of the shooting, although even there we haven't heard of any bag limit as yet, but expect to soon.

A few miles farther up and just across the Mount Vernon, Kilbourne Castell has a blind that even with the excellent ducking weather of Thanksgiving Day was productive of but one canvasback. They were flying—and high. That, however, will be corrected in another few days, if it isn't better already.

Conservation commissions of many States are eyeing with increasing interest the results obtained by the Virginia Polytechnic Institute in raising really wild turkeys in captivity. Countless experiments were tried by this co-operative research unit of the American Wildlife Institute before it was finally discovered that homegrown wild turkeys could be brought up wild only by confining them to small cages until they were ready for release. It seems that in large cages the turkeys could just back away from an approaching man without injury and soon realized he would do them no harm.

In small cages the turkeys pile up in a corner and are alarmed by the approach of man from whom they are unable to retreat. Thus they learn to fear him, and become as wild as one could wish.

The turkeys are hatched under chicken hens, and even these are taken away as soon as the little poults are able to shift for themselves so the candidates for the wilderness will not be softened by maternal influence.

The method has proved so successful that hundreds have been released in Virginia since the plan was put in operation by the State. Conservation officials hope to have the State completely stocked in time.

This is just one of the many problems of the co-operative wildlife research, demonstration and management program of the American Wildlife Institute, Bureau of Biological Survey, land grant colleges and State conservation commissions. A total of approximately 6,018,560 acres in every section of the United States are in research and demonstration areas.

There are also millions of acres in farm-game management areas which are definitely tied up with this program. For instance, the extension program based on findings at the research unit in the State of Texas alone has put 9,000,000 acres into farm-game management areas. This is more land than there is in the entire State of Maryland, an area almost twice as large as the State of New Jersey and more than the combined areas of New Hampshire and Connecticut.

In conjunction with this is something for Marylanders to note. New Jersey, in the past year, increased her farm-game areas to a total of 145,267 acres, or approximately 226 square miles, consisting of farm lands, waste lands, streams, ponds and lakes that were formerly posted against hunting and fishing.

In Pennsylvania, because the game commission has for years regarded game as a valuable natural resource, there is actually more game in the State now than there was when it was a land grant to William Penn. But it was only brought to the present standard through farmer-sportsman co-operation and scientific administration.

Sportsmen have almost developed a language of their own in designating groups of particular animals and birds. It would be high treason to refer to a bunch of quail. One should say a bevey when referring to this best-known of our upland birds.

There is a nide of pheasants, a wisp of snipe, a flight of doves, a muster of peacocks, a seign of herons, a brood of grouse, and a plump of wildfowl. It is always a stand of plovers, a gaggle of geese, a covey of partridge, a cast of hawks, a skulk of foxes, a pack of wolves, a sleuth of bears and a gang of elk in the well-informed sportsman's dictionary.

Navy Games Set Attendance Record

Annapolis, Nov. 28 (AP).—Attendance at 1938 Navy football games set a new record and ranked Navy with the top drawing teams of the Nation, attendance figures released today by the Navy Athletic Association indicated.

Unofficial figures showed Navy gridders played before 415,437 spectators this year, compared to 371,757 customers last year. The 102,900 admissions to the Army game topped the list. Sellouts were listed in the Notre Dame, Penn, Columbia, Virginia Military Institute and Virginia games.

Icy Track Prevents Racing

Big Stakes Canceled Miss Last 4 Days Charles Town Set Horses Work Out

By Walter Haight.

Bowie has called the whole thing off.

Following a conference of General Manager Joseph Boyle, Racing Secretary J. B. Campbell and other officials yesterday it was announced that Bowie would abandon its final four days of the meeting and close its gates until April 1, 1939. An inspection of the track at noon yesterday revealed that there was no improvement in racing conditions. The Maryland State Roads Commission sent scrapers and trucks yesterday afternoon and a large crew attempted to scrape the track. When this failed officials said that racing for 1938 at that point was at an end.

Meanwhile, General Manager Albert Boyle of Charles Town announced that his track would open as scheduled on Thursday. He said between 40 and 50 horses worked out yesterday morning over the course. He reported that the racing strip was free from snow and ice and, although muddy, it was in suitable condition for the sport. Two tractors drawing discs and harrows have been circling the track almost constantly since last Thursday's storm.

Two Stakes Abandoned

By canceling the last four days of the Bowie meeting, the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association has abandoned two of its big stakes, the $5,000 Endurance and the $10,000 Bryan-O'Hara Memorial Handicap. All nomination money put up by horse owners will be refunded.

Although there have been postponements of major racing programs in Maryland, this is the first time that a part of any meeting has been canceled.

At a conference held earlier yesterday, it had been decided to discard tomorrow's program and try to resume action on Thursday. However, it was brought out that almost without exception horses at Bowie had not been able to work out and that they must have some trial before going into racing. This was a factor in erasing the whole show.

Brilliant Fall Season

It is an unfortunate ending to a brilliant fall season in Maryland. With only occasional rain, Havre de Grace, Laurel and Pimlico enjoyed summerlike weather for the most part and, until the Thanksgiving Day program, Bowie's fans had basked in the sunshine. The Maryland season, topped by the never-to-be-forgotten clash of Seabiscuit and War Admiral, produced excellent racing if not large profits for the tracks.

As soon as the word spread that Bowie had closed for good, horsemen and trainers immediately began making plans for shipping their horses. Charles Town, New Orleans, California and Florida were the destinations of most of those which will race this winter. Others were scheduled to leave for home quarters to eat and rest until next spring.

James Caras Appearing In Billiard Exhibition

James Caras, world's champion pocket billiard player, will give an exhibition at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Arcadia, Fourteenth and Park road northwest. He will be opposed by Winton Stewart in a 125-point game.

After the game, Mr. Caras will give an exhibition of trick shots, and explain the intricacies of pocket billiards. Not since the heyday of Ralph Greenleaf has such a youthful player held the championship as does James Carcas.

ADD JAMAS CARAS—S.—MAIL..

Before the largest crowd ever to witness a pocket billiard exhibition match in Washington, James Caras, world's champion, defeated Winston Calfeld, prominent local player, 125 to 38, last night at the Lewis and Krauss billiard parlor.

Caras made two high runs, one of 57, the other of 58. After the match Caras gave an exhibition of difficult shots.

Unbeaten Oklahoma Meets Wash. State Next

Kansas City, Nov. 27 (AP).—Oklahoma, a football team so well-balanced it wasn't necessary to hitch its wagon to a star, today looked back on 13 straight victories, and ahead to another prospective victim and the possibility of a Bowl bid, although the Sooners aren't thinking, out loud anyway, of Bowl games as long as there is unfinished business. It's no Bowling during the regular season for Tom Stidham's boys.

The Sooners meet Washington State, at Norman, next Saturday to close the regular campaign.

TUFFY LEEMANS,

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Dear Al: No Selections.

Bowie got the cold shoulder and couldn't take it. And so we'll never know whether those good things we had going on get-away day were the real McCoy. However, it looks as if Bowie did the right thing. With the track frozen a good 6 inches, it would have been inhuman to have sent horses out there to race. Trainer Whitey Abel will tell you something about that. He decided to give Honey Cloud and Sir Mowlee a chance to feel out their racing legs in a workout last Saturday and both came back to the barn with their legs bleeding. In fact, I'm told, that the one gallop around the track has put Honey Cloud on the shelf for sometime. I hope this is not true because Abel, the former jockey, has his heart centered on seeing Honey Cloud in the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap.

There are many second-guess track superintendents around. Almost every horseman and race fan has some theory as to what Bowie should have done to keep the track from freezing or should do to thaw it out. The answer is simply that Bowie officials, and probably no others, anticipated weather of the type that set in Thursday night.

Bowie was virtually unprepared because it had never encountered a like situation. On the other hand, Charles Town, with its annual December meetings and its smaller track area has had had much experience with snow and ice. There is only one way to cope with it and that is to work it continuously. Charles Town has a crew driving tractors in shifts.

Al Boyle said yesterday that keeping the track from freezing was going to cost him $500 before Thursday's opening. However, it is money well spent.

By calling off its program Bowie will escape risking some $42,000 in purse money. Two stake races still to be run were worth $15,000 in added money while there would have been 26 additional purses of $1,000 or more. In some cases this comes as a blow to horsemen, especially those with horses virtually assured positions in the entries. Some, doubtlessly, needed possible winnings for shipping money. However, if they had allowed their horses to race over the ice-crusted track they probably wouldn't have had anything to ship.

So it's on to Charles Town.

Utes Get 5 Star Berths

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Nov. 28.—In Utah's undefeated drive to the Mountain Big Seven Conference football championship, five players paced the charge, game after game, and today all five were rewarded with places on the Associated Press All-Conference team.

Two players were chosen from Brigham Young and two from Denver. Colorado and last-place Colorado State landed one each.

Three of the all-star backs stood out this year like the snow-festooned peaks of the Continental Divide, but critics probably will argue all winter as to who is the best tailback in the mile-high conference.

Jack Broady, who played some football at the University of Illinois before thansferring to Colorado, won the place because of consistent performance.

Utah's Quarterback Bill Swan was a player's player from first to last. His job was to call the Utah plays and to block, and he did the one with a shrewd eye for any enemy weakness and the other with teeth-jolting effectiveness.

Paul Snow, of Utah, the other halfback, is one of the greatest kickers the Rocky Mountains ever saw.

Th All-Conference teams:

FIRST TEAM.	Pos.	SECOND TEAM.
Balken (Utah)	E.	Powers (Denver)
Christ'erson (D'ver)	T.	Pappas (Utah)
Lloyd (Brig. Young)	G.	Geary (Utah)
Baldwin (Utah)	C.	Maughan (UtahSt.)
Engleberg (Col.St.)	G.	Punches (Colorado)
McGarry (Utah)	T.	Brill (Colorado)
Waters (Brig. Y'ung)	E.	Sturman (Wyoming)
Swan (Utah)	Q.	Soffe (Brig. Young)
Broady (Colorado)	H.	Christensen (Br. Y'g)
Snow (Utah)	H.	Pace (Utah)

Loop Defers Moving Club

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., Nov. 28.—Harry S. Russell, president of the Eastern Shore Baseball League, announced today no action would be taken on assigning the Easton Club franchise until the league's winter meeting in January.

Russell said five of six club managers voted to defer action on the franchise, returned to the league last week by Kenesaw M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball.

The Easton Athletic Association, Inc., which erected the Easton ball park, has expressed a desire to take over the franchise. Russell said offers of $750 and $500 had been made for the franchise, but the source of the offers was not disclosed.

Landis last week barred George Jacobs, Easton manager, and the Brooklyn Dodgers from participation in the league for three years.

Russell said the action was based on Jacobs' "hidden sale" of the Easton franchise to Brooklyn and subsequent player transactions with the Brooklyn club, with which he had a working agreement for talent he developed.

American U. Plays Tigers

Hampden-Sydney, Va., Nov. 28 (AP) Hampden-Sydney will play a 19-game basketball schedule, centered on State opposition, coach Charles Berneier announced today.

The annual Northern tour has been discarded in favor of more old Dominion contests. Only three out-of-State opponents are listed. American University of Washington is on the card.

The Tigers open against Medical College of Virginia in Richmond on December 9. Included on the schedule are eight home games, beginning with Davidson on December 12.

Coach Bernier has a rangy outfit. One quint he may use averages 6 feet, 2 inches.

Lettermen are Capt. Craft and Taylor Reveley, forwards; Syd Weed, center; and Elmo Berry, Albert Buchinsky and Frank Sullivan, guards.

December 9, Medical College of Virginia at Richmond, Va.; 10, St. John's at Annapolis, Md.; 12, Davidson, here.

January 7, University of Virginia at Charlottesville, Va.; 10, University of Richmond at Richmond, Va.; 12, American University at Washington, D. C.; 12, Bridgewater at Bridgewater, Va.; 16, Roanoke at Salem, Va.; 18, William and Mary at Williamsburg, Va.; 21, University of Richmond, here.

February 3, Medical College of Virginia, here; 4, Bridgewater, here; 7, Lynchburg College at Lynchburg, Va.; 10, Randolph-Macon at Ashland, Va.; 16, Roanoke, here; 18, American University, here; 22, W. P. I. at Blacksburg, Va.; 23, Lynchburg, here; 25, Randolph-Macon, here.

Irish Head For Coast And Trojans

Look to Hard Game Squad in Shape • 36 Men Make Trip Workout En Route

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Notre Dame's football forces, generally on the march on the gridiron, were on the go again tonight.

Thirty-six strong, they entrained today for Los Angeles, where next Saturday they will play Southern California in the finial game of Notre Dame's hard campaign. The "Fighting Irish," winners of eight consecutive games this season, figure they will encounter one of their toughest foes in battling the Trojans, named as the Pacific Coast representative for the Rose Bowl game.

Elmer Layden, head coach, said, however, that every member of the squad was in excellent condition, and, if defeated, would have no excuses to offer.

Respect Trojans

"Southern California matches us in size, speed, replacements, kicking and passing," Layden said. "They are strong where we are strong. It looks like a tough game for us, but we should be ready."

The Irish will work out four times en route. They will drill twice at Tucson, Ariz., Wednesday, and twice Thursday, using the University of Arizona field. They will engage in a brief loosening up at Yuma, Ariz., Friday and then proceed directly to Los Angeles that afternoon.

The Irish, striving for national championship recognition, have conquered Kansas, Georgia Tech, Illinois, Carnegie Tech, Army, Navy, Minnesota and Northwestern to establish their best record since their undefeated year in 1930 under Knute Rockne. Northwestern, although beaten, 9 to 7, gave Layden's warriors their toughest battle, but they have had ten days of rest since that struggle.

36 Players on Trip

Included in the party making the trip are 75 persons. The 36 players are: Ends, Brown, J. Kelly, Rassas, Kerr, Brennan and O'Brien; tackles, Beinor, Gallagher, Hollendoner, Kell, Harvey, Bechtold; guards, McGoldrick, Bossu, De Franco, P. Kelly, R. Sullivan, Gubanich and Albert; centers, Longhi, McIntyre and Mooney; quarterbacks, Sitko, Hofer, Crowe and O'Meara; left halfbacks, Saggau, Stevenson, Sheridan and McGannon; right halfbacks, Zontini, Morrison and Corgan; fullbacks, Thesing, Tonelli and Piepul.

Layden regretted he was obliged to leave some of the players at home, but university rules provide that only 36 may be taken on trips.

All-Stars Face Procurement Nine In Indoor Game

Four teams will see action tonight in the Community Center Indoor Softball League at Tech High gym.

Community Center All-Stars and Procurement meet at 7 o'clock, while Benzing's Unknowns and Treasury clash at 8:30 o'clock.

Curry is expected to hurl for Procurement, which plays its first game of the season, replacing Marine Barracks which had to stop at the end of the first half because some of its players had to accompany President Roosevelt to Warm Springs, Ga.

Either "Big Bill" Edwards or "Bump" Simonds will take the mound for the Community Center All-Stars, who finished third in the first half.

The second game, involving Benzing's Unknowns and Treasury should prove to be a real battle, since the Unknowns have shown themselves to be a real team. Treasury hopes to repeat its record of last year, when, after a miserable start, it came back to win the second-half crown.

Dead Calm Wins At New Orleans, Pays $9.20 Ticket

Fair Grounds, New Orleans, Nov. 28 (AP).—Dead Calm, Mrs. C. Gregory's 4-year-old gelded son of Grandace, captured the sixth and feature race of the card here today.

The bay colt, shipped from New England, made his first endeavor at this oval a winning one in defeating eight other claimers at a mile in the dull time of 1:40 3-5.

Dead Calm, ridden by W. Duffy, was restrained for 5 furlongs. He began to move up to the leaders turning into the stretch, and was sharply roused to outfinish Cash O'Boy by half a length. The latter, a factor from the beginning, finished well to hold the place safe two lengths in front of Ozark.

Chicago Cardinals Hold Two Pro Passing Records

The Chicago Cardinals established two new National Football League team records in forward passing in their last game of the season Sunday, but both records may be surpassed again this week in the Washington-New York game for the Eastern division title. The Cardinals have completed 114 passes, 6 more than the record 108 set by Green Bay in 1936. Their efficiency in 240 tosses is 47.5 per cent, which betters the mark of 46.7 per cent made by Brooklyn in 1933.

The New York Giants continue to lead the league in passing efficiency, having completed 87 out of 176 for 49 per cent. Washington is the third leading passing team with 99 out of 214 tosses for 46 per cent. If the Giants continue their present efficiency and Washington completes 16 passes in their important clash Sunday, the new Cardinals' marks in efficiency and completions would be surpassed once more.

Washington continues to lead in ground gaining with a 276-yard average in ten games. Green Bay is second with a 276 average and the Chicago Bears are third with a 270-yard average. New York is the best defensive team, allowing opponents only 79 points and 1,322 yards. In addition, only 22 per cent of opponents' passes have been completed against the Giants.

Green Bay established a new scoring record of 223 points a week ago. The Bears are second with 194 points and the Giants are third with 158 points, 10 more than Washington.

Women's Par Lengthened By New U.S.G.A. Ruling

The United States Golf Association, upon a recommendation of the Women's Committee, has increased the yardage figures for computing women's par, to be effective January 1, 1939, according to an announcement from the parent links body in New York.

The present figures are up to 200 yards, par 3, 201 to 375 yards, par 4; 376 to 550 yards, par 5, and 551 and over, par 6.

The new figures add 10 yards to the par 3 holes, up to 210, inclusive, place an additional 15 yards on the par 4 holes, 211 to 400, incluive, and increase the yardage on the par 5s from 401 to 575. Any hole measuring 576 yards or over will have a par 6. Under the previous rules, any hole over 550 was a par 6.

The fiures are not arbitrary, as allowance should be made for the configuration of the ground, and the number of water hazards, traps, etc. Thus, if a hole should be measured near the borderline of any of the par changes, and be well trapped, over hill and dale and with a ditch, it may be a stroke harder than a hole, measuring a like distance, that is fairway from tee to green with little trouble.

Women's par on a majority of the local courses will probably be changed from one to three strokes each, with par being lowered in each case. The only tournament on the card of the District Women's Golf Association that will be affected by the change will be The Washington Post Match Play Championship, that is figured on a handicap basis. This event may be changed to a medal tournament next year.

The annual meeting of the United States Golf Association will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York City, Saturday, January 7, 1939, starting at 11 a. m.

Bowl Teams Drill in Gym

Stars Join N.W. A. C. Police Eleven Ready

The final week of practice for the District's first Charity Bowl football game, to be staged this coming Sunday at Griffith Stadium, was Boys Club and the Northwest All-Boys' Club and the Northwest All-Stars in their respective gymnasiums in deference to the soggy footing outdoors. Coaches of the teams said, however, that the boys would be taken outdoors despite the weather in the next few days.

The uncertain practice sessions were not expected to mar the chances of No. 4 as much as the All-Stars. Each of the Stars has been well conditioned by the coach of the school he came from, but the business of learning signals and team co-ordination will necessarily take more time for the Stars than No. 4's undefeated gridmen.

Police Club has hung up a fine record this year, especially for a sandlot aggregation. It has won each of its nine starts to date, amassing a total of 160 points against the opposition's 6. Lieut. Francis Hart of the Metropolitan Police coaches the team, ably assisted by Dick Hall, former Gonzaga Prep and Georgetown quarterback.

The All-Stars, coached by Larry Conant and Tom Clayton, are still uncertain about their starting lineup, new players turning out each day for a chance to play against No. 4 and help the charity for which the game is to be played. Most of the Stars, however, will be chosen from the grid teams of St. Albans, Devitt, Friends, Landon, Cleveland Park A. C. and Devitt A. C. The Cleveland Park team boasted a record as brilliant as that of No. 4, winning ten straight during the 1938 season.

Al proceeds of the tilt will go to officials of the Community Chest for distribution. Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, has donated the free use of his stadium, scoreboard, etc. Each of the sandlot players who gets into the game will receive a letter, signifying his participation in a contest which the sponsors hope will become an annual feature of the sandlot schedule.

Turf's Big 6 Is Nominated For Widener

Race at Hialeah Seabiscuit Tops Admiral Listed $50,000 Added

By the United Press

Miami, Fla., Nov. 28.—Imagine Seabiscuit, War Admiral, Lawrin, Stagehand, Dauber and Pasteurized hooking up in a race. Sounds like a pipe dream, doesn't it? But it isn't!

Charles J. McLennan, racing secretary at Hialeah Park, announced tonight that the turf's "big six" of 1938 had been nominated for the fourth running of the $50,000 added Widener Challenge Cup here March 4 and that such a meeting is a distinct possibility.

Any or all may withdraw before then, but no race in American turf history has been packed with such heart-stopping possibilities as the next Widener now appears to have. Never has one race had such an all-star cast.

Seeks Money Record

Seabiscuit, the handicap champion and conqueror of mighty War Admiral in a match race, is shooting for the all-time money-winning mark of $376,744 made by Sun Beau. With earnings to date of $340,480, Seabiscuit would rocket to the top with a victory in the Widener.

War Admiral is scheduled to retire to stud after the Widener. A victory would be a fitting curtain to a brilliant career and would remove the biggest blot on his rec—the defeat handed him by Seabiscuit.

Lawrin, Dauber and Pasteurized won chief 3-year-old honors for 1938. Lawrin, winner of the Kentucky Derby, was the first "winter" horse to turn the trick. Dauber's biggest achievement was winning the Pimlico Preakness. Pasteurized ran off with Belmont Stakes.

Stagehand, also a 3-year-old, won Santa Anita's Handicap and Derby, the Empire City Handicap, the Narragansett Special and the Governor's Handicap at Narragansett to become the biggest money winner of the year with earnings of $189,710.

There will be other nominations for the mile and a quarter test, a complete list of which will be announced later, but they will receive scant consideration against this select group.

McLennan said imposts of all Widener candidates would be announced January 4.

Dapper Dans Five Loses

Bows to Chambers Farkas Is Cheered

Andy Farkas, football favorite of the Washington Redskins, last night was accorded a fine hand by 250 enthusiastic fans as he threw out the ball that opened Heurich Amateur Basketball League play in the Heurich gymnasium.

Favorites ran true to form in the opening night's triple-header in which the nightcap proved outstanding when W. W. Chambers defeated Dapper Dan in a well played game, 33 to 24.

Federal Bureau of Investigation paced by Jimmy Thompson, crushed Little Tavern, 53 to 23. Thompson made good with five field goals.

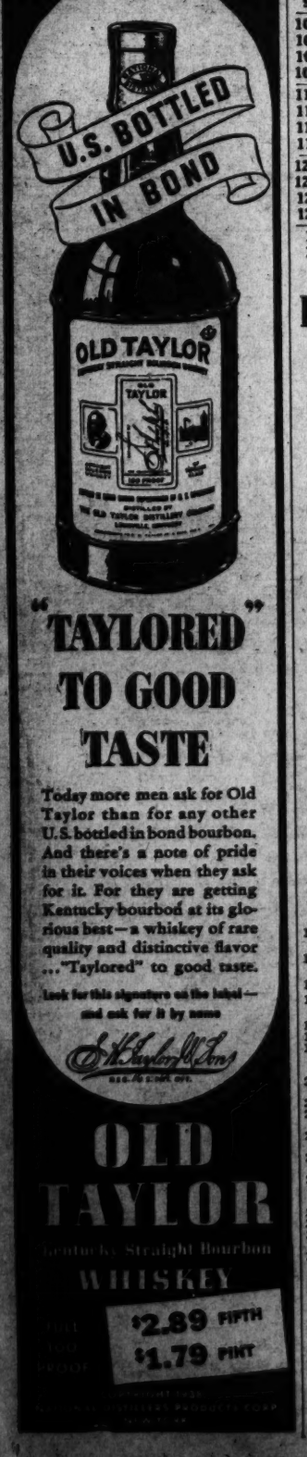
Phil Rabin Plays Here

A spectacular duel of individual scorers looms when Jersey's defending champion Reds invade Heurich gymnasium, Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest, to assist in the unveiling of Washington's American Basketball League season against Heurich Brewers Thursday night at 9 o'clock.

Outstanding American League scorer the last two years and again leading the pack this season, Phil Rabin, Jersey's sharpshooting ace, will match Mickey Schonfeld, Heurich's, when play is launched.

Rabin made good with one of the outstanding performances of his career in Union City, N. J., this past Sunday when he connected for seven field goals and four foul tosses as Jersey Reds surprised Philadelphia's league-leading Sphas, 39 to 36.

Thursday night's will be the second in as many nights for Heurich Brewers, who are to invade Kingston, N. Y., for an American League game with Kingston Colonials tomorrow night.



Landon Prep Gets Letters

Flaherty Awards Redskins Present Annual Banquet

Football letters were presented to the varsity and intermediate gridders in the annual banquet last night at Landon School, with Ray Flaherty, Sammy Baugh and Jim Karcher, of the Redskins, and the Rev. James Henderson, St. Albans, among the honored guests.

Flaherty, Redskin coach, presented the letters while Baugh and Karcher gave short talks. Paul Banfield, headmaster at Landon, presided, while Head Coach Bob McCarty, Assistant Coach Dick Carpenter and Harrison Brindle were also in attendance.

The Landon varsity eleven won 2, lost 2 and tied 2 during the season.

Varsity Letter Winners

worst season of all, losing six games, including its contests against Harvard, Princeton and Dartmouth. But it salvaged at least some self-respect from the debris by playing Harvard to a standstill most of the way in the final fray.

Harvard started slowly and came fast to win its last four games after losing its first four. Pennsylvania was unreliable all the way through, never doing what was expected. After beating Yale it lost to Princeton, then beat Columbia and was tied by Navy. It put up a great battle against Michigan, being beaten, 19 to 13, and was tied by Penn State the next week. And finally it rose up to its greatest height and battled Cornell to a scoreless draw.

Brown had its best team in many years, beating Harvard and Columbia, and the Army had one of its best seasons. The Cadets lost only two games, one to Columbia by 2 points and the other to Notre Dame by about 15 minutes. The Navy's only major victory was scored over Columbia yet it was a strong enough squad to hold Princeton and Penn to even terms.

The best records in the East belong to Georgetown, Carnegie Tech, Holy Cross and Amherst, unbeaten and tied only by Springfield. But the strongest teams probably were Pitt, Holy Cross and Fordham.

Georgetown Practices

Georgetown 135-pound football team in the Capital City League will practice Wednesday and Friday at the Salvation Army, Jefferson avenue and M street, at 6:30. All players report at Georgetown Playground first. The team is seeking a game for Sunday. Call Billy Cross at Dupont 1061 after 5:30 p. m. They challenge Police Boys Club teams.

Home Building Here Is 88% Over Year Ago

Figures for October $5,325,000 This Year $2,833,000 Last Year

By Thomas M. Cahill.

The end of 1938 is nearing with an encouraging residential building situation in the Washington metropolitan area. October contracts included a gain of 88 per cent over the awards in October, 1937, according to Henry A. Johns, local manager of the Dodge reports division of F. W. Dodge Corporation. The local gain was ahead of the average of 72 per cent recorded for the 37 States east of the Rocky Mountains.

With the close of October this year's residential building in Washington neared the year-end figure for 1937. Last month, residential contract awards totaled $5,325,000. In 1937, the contracts of the corresponding month amounted to $2,833,000. January-through-October contracts, this year reached $35,709,000, as compared with the corresponding $47,257,000 of 1937.

Life Insurance Sales

Sales of ordinary life insurance in October, in the District of Columbia, were but 2 per cent under those of the month last year, the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau of Hartford, Conn., reports. Last month's sales in Washington aggregated $4,509,000.

Sales in the United States, in October, were 13 per cent lower than those of the month a year ago, and with the exception of the January's, October's was the best monthly comparison this year. In the first ten months of 1938, the national average was 20 per cent lower.

In this same period, sales in the National Capital revealed a recession of 23 per cent although $47,327,000 worth of business was written. In the South Atlantic States as a group, sales were off 10 per cent in October and 18 per cent in the ten months. Life insurance sales in the entire Nation for the ten months of the current year, now total, $4,889,472,000.

Christmas Clubs

Announcement is made in New York by Herbert F. Rawll, president of Christmas Club Corporation, that approximately $330,000,000 in Christmas savings is being distributed to about 7,000,000 members throughout the country this week. This sum will be 3 per cent above 1937, and will reach 6 per cent more members, the average check being $47, Mr. Rawll states.

New York is the leading State in disbursements, with its distributions expected to amount to $95,000,000. Pennsylvania is second, and Massachusetts, third. New York City's metropolitan district total is estimated at $57,000,000. The Bank of America in California will pay out $12,000,000, and the Bank of Manhattan in New York will distribute $3,900,000, while a number of other banks will pay more than $1,000,000.

The report quotes that Maryland banks will return $7,200,000 to club members; the banks in the District of Columbia will disburse around $6,500,000, and that the amount set for Virginia club payments is $9,100,000, with West Virginia depositors receiving $4,900,000. According to the estimates announced, the States from Florida to Delaware, which comprise the South Atlantic group, will have a distribution of $34,300,000.

Members of the advertising committee of the District of Columbia Bankers' Association are working toward completion of final plans for the opening of next year's Christmas Savings Clubs this week. The committee includes: Willard F. Barker, president, Morris Plan Bank; chairman, Robert L. Flather, American Security & Trust Co., vice chairman; Eliot H. Thomson, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; George O. Vass, Riggs National Bank, and E. Percival Wilson, National Savings & Trust Co. It has been predicted that due to the steadily improving business conditions in the Capital, next year's clubs will exceed this year's both in amounts subscribed and number of members enrolled.

Housing Insurance

Since the amended national housing act went into effect last February, the Federal Housing Administration has issued commitments to insure 163 large scale multi-family housing projects, involving mortgages totaling $60,313,950, which will provide living accommodations at reasonable rentals for 14,843 families, Administrator Stewart McDonald announces.

This volume of rental housing activity, financed with private capital under terms of the Housing Administration's insured mortgage system, has been developed in nine months and follows the passage by Congress of amendments which ex-

Wheat Rallies After Drop

Chicago, Nov. 28 (AP).—Wheat moved upward ⅝ a cent a bushel in Chicago today, and then met with profit-taking sales that wiped out part of the gain. Helping the market to mount were estimates that export takings from Canada totaled more than 500,000 bushels. It was asserted, too, that the end was in sight for cheap wheat afloat unsold, and that three cargoes of United States hard winter wheat had been bought for shipment to the Far East.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ¼ cent higher compared with Saturday's finish; December, 61½; May, 65@64⅞. Corn, unchanged to ⅝ down; December, 47½@47⅝; May, 51⅛@51¼. Oats, unchanged to ¼ up. Rye, unchanged to ¾ off, and provisions showing 15 to 20 cents drop.

Steel Operations Estimated Lower

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will decline 1.2 points to 60.7 per cent of capacity, compared with 61.9 per cent last week, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations were at the rate of 56.8 per cent of capacity, while a year ago they were 29.6 per cent.

The drop in operations this week was the most severe since the week beginning October 17 and carried operations back to approximately where they were November 7.

Securities, Commodities, Dollar Lower Traders See Leveling Off After Rise Majority Opinion Remains Bullish

New York, Nov. 28.—Stocks, bonds, most of the commodities and the dollar worked lower today under the influence of a number of factors, the most important of which was the conviction of close observers of business statistics that we are due for a leveling off after the rise which has just succeeded in carrying the general level of 1938's business above corresponding 1937 figures.

The battle has been won but instead of advancing from this level the general opinion appears to be that the immediate future will be marked by a consolidation movement. Majority opinion in Wall street remains bullish over the long term but even the most rabid members of this school of thought admit the pace has been a bit rapid and a temporary setback should not be surprising.

The decline in the stock market today, which clipped 0.89 point from the composite average, brought losses of 1 to 3 points in the active leaders. It also brought the composite average of the list to a point where 46 per cent of the previous rise had been eliminated. This rise had extended from the war-scare low of September 26 and the top of the rise came on the day following the election, November 10.

Secondary Reaction

According to the Dow theorists, the present market is characteristic of a secondary reaction, which normally erases from a third to two-thirds of a previous rise. An extreme correction of two-thirds would bring the above composite down to an index figure of 102.43, a loss of 7.19 points from the November 10 top. At today's low the loss was only 4.94 points, or 45.8 per cent of the previous rise of 10.78 points.

The fact that the loss today carried the list between the one-third and two-thirds points does not necessarily mean that the current decline will be constant and without rallies, according to these theorists. The action today, for instance, was marked by gaps in the averages and in many individual stocks. A technical rally usually follows such phenomena.

All groups contributed to the day's decline and among the vulnerable were the aviation issues, which had staged a private bull market all their own. Fractional declines were made by Aviation Corporation, North American Aviation and United Aircraft while Boeing sold off a point. Among the less active members of this division, Douglas was down nearly a point and Wright Aero, 1½.

Steels were prominent on the tape with United States Steel in the lead, off 1¾, and Republic next most active, off 1. Bethlehem also gave up 1¾. Lower steel operations for this week contributed to the selling in this division, the rate being placed at 60.7 per cent of capacity, a loss of 1.2 points from a week ago. The signs of levelling off in this industry are becoming pronounced and the belief is growing that the 1938 peak has been passed.

Foreign Copper Dips

Further softening in the price of copper abroad contributed to some of the selling in the metal shares. Scrap copper was cut in the domestic market. Transamerica steadied after the drubbing it took last week on announcement that the SEC is inquiring into the affairs of the company and closed fractionally higher. Dunhill, which is understood to be receiving the attention of the exchange and the SEC, continued upward, adding about a point.

Wheat averaged a trifle higher influenced by unfavorable harvesting conditions in Argentina and prospects that deliveries on December contracts will be smalled than recently. The close was unchanged to ¼ cent higher. Cotton dropped 4 to 6 points with December liquidation the feature.

Bond Market Lower

Listed bonds in the speculative classifications fell sharply today, while high-grade investment securities were neglected. The downward drift of equities is beginning to affect the more volatile bonds. Losses of 1 to 3 points were numerous in a dull market today. Railroads and local tractions were the weaker obligations, but other speculative groups likewise receded. Foreign dollar bonds drifted lower with the rest. Turnover in all bonds was only $6,040,000.

Medium- priced interest-paying rails were marked lower in the quiet session. There was little support for issues of systems like Southern Railway, Illinois Central and Southern Pacific. Bonds of the borderline rails likewise fell steadily, while many of the default rails were near the lows of the year. In the local traction group Interborough issues receded, but B. M. T. 4½s moved up a point on official indications that unification negotiations are far advanced with that company. Holding company issues, communications bonds and community obligations were weak sisters.

In the foreign division, German bonds were dull and mostly lower, despite the announcement that the next payment on 5½s will be made on the usual reduced basis. Other European default bonds were neglected. Among Latin-American default bonds, Panama 5s fell 7½ points, and others were dull. The Japanese and Italian groups remained soft. Best grade foreigns were well maintained.

Long term United States Treasury bonds showed only small fractional gains and losses, with the more indicative movements lower. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations also were dull. Best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds were marked fractionally down, but the changes were too small to be of any moment.

Chesapeake Corp. Votes To Dissolve

Young Makes Protest Opposition a Surprise Hits Guaranty Trust

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 28.—Stockholders of Chesapeake Corporation, middle holding company of the once-vast Van Sweringen rail systems voted to dissolve the corporation today, in face of unexpected and vigorous opposition from Robert R. Young, New York stock broker who has battled more than a year for control of the Van Sweringen interests.

Young, chairman of Alleghany Corporation, top holding company of the system which controls the valuable Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, sprang a surprise protest when he renewed his attack on Guaranty Trust of New York, largest stockholder in Alleghany and Chesapeake corporations.

Previously, Young had agreed to dissolution of Chesapeake Corporation as a step in simplifying the corporate structure of the rail system, and to give Alleghany Corporation direct control of the C. & O.

Wires Stockholders

He telegraphed directors at today's meeting that he had "just learned to my surprise" that Guaranty, as trustee of Alleghany's bonds "may refuse to treat Chesapeake's future income" as available for interest payments on Alleghany bonds.

This position was attacked immediately by Guaranty representatives at the stockholders' meeting. Frederick A. O. Schwartz, of the banking firm, declared "Mr. Young . . . is making a vicious and unwarranted statement."

Asserting Young's points "are not now," Schwartz said that Guaranty's attorneys had considered them and still felt the dissolution plan "is fair and in the interests of the (Chesapeake) stockholders and the Alleghany bonds that Guaranty represents."

Stockholders and proxy-holders representing 73 per cent of the Chesapeake outstanding stock voted unanimously to dissolve the corporation and reduce issued capital stock from $74,242,040 to $179,974.50.

Com. Edison Plans To Spend 75 Million

Chicago, Nov. 28 (AP).—Commonwealth Edison Co., big utility organization serving Chicago and northern Illinois, may spend $75,000,000 for new equipment, plant improvements and additions in the next two years, James Simpson, chairman, said today. Simpson also disclosed the company possibly may issue another $25,000,000 of debentures early next year.

Commonwealth Edison is in the midst of a comprehensive program of readjustment of the capital structure of operating organizations making up the system.

Commercial Loans Drop $25,000,000

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board said today that commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks in 101 leading cities declined $25,000,000 to a total of $3,869,000,000 in the week ended November 23.

The decrease was due primarily to a $12,000,000 decline in New York City and $3,000,000 in the Cleveland Federal Reserve district.

WHEN MONEY IS BORROWED

If you buy goods from a merchant, does the merchant do you a favor? Not necessarily. The transaction is of mutual benefit—you, the buyer, get what you want; he, the seller, makes a sale.

Apply the same reasoning to banking. The customer who borrows money really buys a bank's merchandise—the use of credit. A bank's principal income should be from lending money, under conditions in keeping with sound banking practice.

American Security and Trust Company seeks to enlarge its credit facilities for firms, corporations and individuals. To that end, this bank not only invites accounts, which create credit, but also desires to make sound, new loans.

Job Total Makes Gain In October

334,000 Are Filled
111,000 in Building
9,026,000 Jobless

New York, Nov. 28.—Building construction, a leader in the general business improvement, provided jobs for 111,000 additional workers in October, according to the statistical division of the National Industrial Conference Board today. Total employment rose slightly, 0.6 per cent over the September figure.

The gain of 5.1 per cent in construction employment in October as compared with the preceding month not only reflects the increased activity in public and private building, but also brings the total number of workers in the industry to 2,267,000, or 201,000 more than in October, 1937. In all other occupations employment now is less than a year ago.

All branches of industry showed gains in employment, as 334,000 industrial employes were hired in October. In addition to the construction industry, notable increases were reported in manufacturing, with 174,000 workers hired; extraction of minerals, 26,000; transportation, 24,000, and public utilities, 2,000.

The service industries, in which employment had declined during the summer, added 117,000 workers, a gain of 1.3 per cent over September. In trade, distribution and finance 55,000 employes joined the pay rolls, while the miscellaneous industries and services hired 14,000 additional workers.

Only in agriculture and in forestry and fishing did employment decline, as 279,000 agricultural workers were laid off, and 2,000 fewer workers were reported in forestry and fishing.

Unemployment dropped 2.3 per cent in October, as 213,000 fewer persons were unemployed than in September. The preliminary estimate of those unemployed in October is 9,026,000, including 3,655,000 workers in the Government emergency labor force, as represented by the WPA, the CCC and the Federal Projects Works Program.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

WE CALL your attention again to the award The Post will make to "Miss Civil Service," the woman who seems to be the ideal employe in the Federal service. The field of nominees for the honor is growing larger every day—and that is exactly what is most desired, for the larger the field of nominees the more difficult will be the task of the judges and more searching the investigations that will lead to the selection.

DOROTHY

The award, mind you, will not be based on beauty. It will be on merit of service largely, a plain case of pretty is as pretty does. And the award, a beautiful silver loving cup, will be presented the winner at one of the meetings to be held in connection with National Civil Service Week, January 15-21.

The mechanics are simple: all you have to do is call by The Post and submit the name of your nominee. If more convenient, telephone your nomination. In any event, get your favorite into the running. Today we have pleasure in presenting the photograph of one of the many nominees, Dorothy Cooper.

Uncle Sam, champion mover about, has shifted once again the employes in the Agriculture Department Press Services. Considering the mazes of corridors, it's difficult to describe where they've gone, but if you will go to the corridor in the administration where they last were and turn sharp to the left off the elevator, you will probably find them around there some place. It was done in connection with the department's streamlining, wherein the AAA press workers and the department's press workers were brought into a more cohesive unit. And it has given the department's press service a greater importance than it previously had.

Varnum Poore, mural artist, who is doing a 40x9-foot panel in the Interior Building, would probably like to kick anyone who makes public notation of his effort at this time; it attracts too many onlookers who bother artists in their work. But the truth is, Poore is performing an extraordinary piece of work; his mural is being done in the true fresco technique, which is always an exciting process to art lovers and to those who like to watch artists work.

And also interesting, the panel will include a great painting of Thoreau, at Walden Pond. As you know, the philosopher stood by Walden Pond and meditated on how all men ought to abandon the hurly-burly of life and retreat into the wilds for communion and self-study. Somehow, with all the storms of past and present that have centered and still center around high Interior officials, the motif of Thoreau and his back-to-nature mood in a 40x9 illustration on the wall might, in moments, be soothing.

AN ENTIRELY personal nomination of two of the Government's most obliging men: Acting Chief Clark, of the Weather Bureau, and Acting Chief Rowan, of the Painting and Sculpture Section, Procurement Division . . . The Civil Service Commission is planning on doing away with photos and using fingerprints to reduce racial discrimination, it's heard . . . And the ultraconservative mag, Personnel Administration, organ of the Society for Personnel Administration, raises a blister, as follows: "Why some attorneys should single themselves out for favored treatment it is difficult to see, when employes in other positions which are of equal or greater difficulty and responsibility, and which require as much consideration of personal characteristics, are successfully appointed under civil service procedures . . ."

It is interesting to reflect on how little interest the average Federal employe is taking or has taken in any reorganization that may be offered. The thoughtful ones have considered all along that reorganization won't affect them individually very much, and so they forget it. They think that the worst it might offer would be some little shifting about. And some Federal officials let us know that it isn't being talked too much in the top flights of officialdom. "The newspapers are keeping it alive," they say.

ROBERT FECHNER, CCC director, has eaten his Thanksgiving dinner at a CCC camp every year since the organization's beginning. Last Thursday he dined at the camp in the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park, having with him Mrs. Clara B. Holbrook, his secretary; Miss Jo Coffin, assistant to the Public Printer; Miss Columbia Dickey, of Mr. Fechner's office, and Col. E. Lang, U. S. A., retired.

The position of chief, section of forest measurements, Forest Service, vacant for some time since F. X. Schumacher resigned to take a professorship in the Duke University Forestry School, has been filled by James G. Osborne. A former student at George Washington University and the University of California, Osborne brings a wide experience to his new job. They consider him to be an outstanding research specialist in the field of silviculture and an authority on forest measuration. He is a native of Oklahoma.

HERE'S A nice job: Airways facility specialist, Civil Aeronautics Authority, $3,800 a year. Applicants must have had 1,000 hours of solo flying and experience in the operations division of an air carrier. A valid pilot's certificate of competency is required, and the top age is 50. The closing date is December 19.

David Coker, Son-in-Law of Roper, Dies

Was Plant Breeder Developed Cotton Aided Hoover in War

David R. Coker, son-in-law of Secretary of Commerce Roper and a noted plant breeder, died yesterday at his home in Hartsville, S. C., after a long illness.

Mr. Coker was born in Hartsville in 1870, the son of Maj. James L. Coker, of the Confederate Army, and Susan S. Coker. He was educated at the University of South Carolina, taking his A. B. degree in 1891. He later was given honorary degrees from Duke, and North Carolina Universities, and Clemson and Charleston Colleges.

Mr. Coker was an agricultural experimentalist, establishing laboratories where he originated several varieties of cotton now widely planted throughout the country. He also developed new types of grain and vegetables, of greater yield and better yield and better adaptation to soil in Southern States.

During the World War, Mr. Coker was a member of the National Food Administration and, in 1918, accompanied Herbert Hoover to Europe as a member of the Agricultural Commission. He later served on the National Agricultural Commission and the Business Advisory Commission of the Department of Commerce.

Mr. Coker leaves his wife, Mrs. Margaret Roper Coker; three daughters, Martha, Mary, and Carolyn Coker, and five children by a former marriage, to Jessie Ruth Richardson (Coker) of Timmonsville, S. C., who died 25 years ago.

Masons to Bury B. C. Shacklett

Masonic funeral rites for Benjamin C. Shacklett, for 18 years a Congressional Library guard, who died Sunday at his home, 672 Maryland avenue northeast, will be held at the grave in Bethel Cemetery tomorrow after services at 2 p. m. at the W. W. Chambers Funeral Home, 1400 Chapin street northwest.

A native of Delaplane, Va., Mr. Shacklett came to Washington 23 years ago. He was a member of the George Washington Lodge of Masons.

Moses Sherby Dies Here at 83; Retired Merchant

MOSES SHERBY

Born in the Ukraine, Russia, Mr. Sherby spent most of his life farming in New Jersey and later engaged in the implement and seed business in Bridgeton, N. J. In 1925 he retired from business and came to this city to be near his children.

Mr. Sherby leaves his wife, Ediss, and 10 children, Harry Sherby, Mrs. Max Harris, Mrs. Benjamin April, Mrs. Morris Wittlin, Mrs. Joseph H. Maser, Mrs. Jacob Waldman, Mrs. Jack Ray, Mrs. Thomas Conner, Mrs. Aaron Frank, all of this city, and Mrs. Leonard Silvers, of Philadelphia. He also leaves 20 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be from Adas Israel Synagogue, Sixth and I streets northwest, tomorrow. Burial will be in Adas Israel Cemetery.

Funeral Set Today For W. H. Ward

Funeral services for William Henry Ward, 80, retired navy yard employe, will be held this afternoon at 2 p. m. from the residence of Mrs. Belle Thompson, 57 U street northwest. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Ward, who lived with his son, Arthur Ward, in Garrett Park, Md., died Saturday at the Laurel Sanitarium after a long illness. He had been a resident of Washington and vicinity for almost half a century, moving to Alexandria, Va., from his birthplace at Auburn, N. Y., when a young man.

He was employed as machinist in the navy yard for 32 years, retiring in 1923. Follow his retirement he bought a farm near Fairfax, Va., which he operated until he became ill, when he moved to Garrett Park with his son. He was a member of Lebanan Lodge, F. A. A. M.

Besides his son, Arthur, he is survived by another son, William Henry Ward, jr., of Panama, and a daughter, Mrs. Emily A. Fenton, of Arlington, Va.

LOVE'S TOKEN! BLA-A-AH!
A NIGHT AWAY FROM HOME, AND NOT A PIRATE, DETECTIVE OR ADVENTURE BOOK ON THE PREMISES — NOTHING BUT REVOLTING LOVE STORIES

Bob Burns Says—

There are so many writers who know so much more about international affairs than I do that I'm kinda ashamed to even touch on the subject, but I've jest got to put in a word in favor of this new alliance with Canada they're talkin' about now. In case of an invasion I think we'd work mighty well together. Durin' the early part of the last war, some of our boys went over with the Canadians and you couldn't hardly tell 'em apart.

One old French storekeeper said the only way he could tell an American soldier from a Canadian was to see 'em comin' into his store. He said, "The Canadian boys walked into the store as if they owned it, but the American walked in as though he didn't give a darn who owned it!"

U.S. May Seek 1½ Billion in Loans by July

Morgenthau Airs Plan
Arms May Lift Figure
Dec. 15 Action Possible

Tentative Treasury plans to borrow between $1,300,000,000 and $1,500,000,000 in new cash between now and next July 1 were revealed yesterday by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

This amount, and possibly more—depending on previously uncalculated arms expenditures and a possible step-up in relief outlays—will be necesary, it is estimated, to finance the deficit for this fiscal year, expected to total at least $4,000,000,000.

Asked about financing plans for the December 15 income tax installment date, Morgenthau indicated an announcement may be made after Treasury officials meet tomorrow morning with the executive committee of the Federal Reserve Open Market Committee.

The Treasury may refund on December 15 the $941,613,750 of 1½ per cent notes maturing March 15 in addition to the new borrowing.

Morgenthau said the remaining new cash borrowing to finance the deficit for the current fiscal year probably would be spread over the fiscal year "in three bites." This would mean cash borrowing on December 15, March 15 and June 15.

He said the Treasury could get along until March 15 without additional borrowing, but that a more reasonable way to handle the matter would be to do a certain amount of the necessary cash borrowing December 15.

The Treasury on September 15 borrowed about $800,000,000, or more than one-third the amount estimated to be necessary to make up the deficit for the fiscal year.

Treasury borrowing during the remainder of the fiscal year, through open market financing and "baby bond" sales, it is estimated, will force the public debt well beyond the $40,000,000,000 mark.

U. S. Attorney, G-Man Flayed At Spy Trial

Defense Counsel Critical
Turrou Assailed
Testimony Questioned

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 28.—The Government's conduct of its espionage trial and the actions of Leon G. Turrou, former G-man, in particular, were attacked in Federal Court today in summations by counsel for the two men and a woman accused of spying here for Nazi Germany.

George C. Dix, attorney for Defendant Johanna Hofmann, former hairdresser on a German liner, called Turrou a "crooked agent who embarrassed his Government."

Charles W. Philipbar, jr., attorney for Otto Herman Voss, former airplane mechanic, criticized United States Attorney Lamar Hardy for refusal to produce Turrou near the end of the trial for further cross-examination.

The lawyer also challenged the testimony given by two other agents describing the occasion when, they said, Voss gave them a statement admitting he supplied the plans of American Army planes to German agents. Voss repudiated the statement in court.

Benjamin A. Matthews, counsel for Defendant Erich Glaser, told Federal Judge John C. Knox and the jury that Guenther Gustav Rumrich, United States Army deserter, who plead guilty to espionage charges and was a Government witness, "is incapable of telling the truth."

Matthews was still summing up when court adjourned until tomorrow.

Autogiros to Use Postoffice Roof At Philadelphia

The Postoffice Department is about to embark on the world's first regular autogiro roof-top mail service.

Postmaster General Farley announced yesterday that bids were being requested for operation of an experimental air mail route with rotary-wing aircraft between the roof-top of the postoffice building at Philadelphia and the Camden, N. J. airport serving that city. Provision for this autogiro service was carried in an act of Congress passed last April.

The Philadelphia Postoffice Building was selected for the purpose because its roof was constructed for autogiro service.

Mexican Envoy to U.S. May Seek Presidency

By the Associated Press.

The possibility that Ambassador Francisco Castillo Najera may be induced to become a candidate for the Presidency in Mexico's next elections has been receiving serious consideration from political leaders there, it was reported here last night in reliable circles.

Others who have been mentioned as candidates, it was reported here, were Manuel Avila Camacho, secretary of national defense; Francisco J. Mujica, secretary of communications; Gildardo Magana, governor of Michoacan, and Rafael Sanchez Tapia, former secretary of national economy.

Chinese Drop Effort To Obtain U. S. Loan

Official Chinese negotiations to obtain extensive credit in this country were believed near an end tonight when it was learned that K. P. Chen, leader of a special Chinese financial mission, has left the United States, presumably for China.

It was reported generally that the mission had failed to obtain its chief objective—loans with which to purchase war materials and stabilize Chinese currency—but that it had received assurances the United States will continue to purchase Chinese silver.

Mother and Son Face Jury In Bassett Mystery Death

Accused of Slaying Former Annapolis Man
Woman's Confession Involved Kin
State Contends Robbery Was Motive

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 28.—Tall, gaunt Decasto Earl Mayer, habitual criminal, and his mother, Mary Eleanor Smith, 73, appeared calm today as they stepped into Superior Court to fight for their lives against a 10-year-old first degree murder charge.

They are accused of butchering James Eugene Bassett, 35, of Baltimore, Md., in 1928. Bassett disappeared while negotiating the sale of his automobile, while en route to Manila to take civilian employment with the Navy. His body never was found. Fifty veniremen were summoned for the case.

Prosecutor B. Gray Warner, in examining prospective jurymen, stressed that the death penalty would be asked for both mother and son.

Confessed by Mother

A few words murmered behind prison walls returned the 10-year-old mystery to the national spotlight last May 4.

Warden J. M. McCauley announced that Mrs. Smith, an aged prisoner in the Washington State Penitentiary, had confessed that she and her son had killed Bassett ten years ago.

At the time of Bassett's disappearance police of two States worked eagerly to gain a confession from Mrs. Smith and Mayer after Bassett's automobile was found in their possession.

The pair remained mute, and at that time the best the State could do was to convict them for the theft of the Maryland man's auto. There was no proof of Bassett having been slain, but the State managed to send Mayer to the penitentiary for life on the auto theft charge. His mother was given an indeterminate sentence.

At the time of his disappearance Bassett was dealing with Mayer for the purchase of his automobile.

Battered Over the Head

Warden McCauley said that on the eve of her release, Mrs. Smith, broken and in tears, told how she had stood by while Mayer hit Bassett over the head.

The warden said she told him the motive was robbery.

McCauley said Mrs. Smith weakened after she was caught sending a note to her son in another part of the prison, admonishing him to "admit nothing."

Mrs. Smith, the warden said, admitted that they buried Bassett's body near Bothel, a few miles north of Seattle. She told the warden the slaying was committed in Mayer's house there.

Mrs. Smith told the warden that Bassett came to the house she and her son occupied after they had answered an advertisement the Maryland man had placed in a Seattle paper relative to the sale of his automobile. Continuing, Mrs. Smith told the warden that as she went into another room for her checkbook, Mayer struck Bassett over the head with a hammer.

She told the warden they then carried Bassett's body to the bathroom and dissected it in the tub.

Frank Bassett, father of the former officer, died in 1932 after five years of fruitless search for his son. He was at one time secretary of the Annapolis, Md., Chamber of Commerce.

Rabbi Calls 'Isms' Hatred's Offspring

Speaking on the devotion hour yesterday over WRC, Rabbi Zemach Green, of the Ohev Sholom Congregation, said that both communism and fascism are offsprings of a disillusioned, desperate world cut adrift from the moorings of spiritual values.

"Europe is being engulfed by the two mighty streams of modern history," said Rabbi Green. "On the one hand is the merciless and brutal fascism-naziism and the other is the violent and savage communism. Between the two extremes the world is trembling and tottering. Democracy is on the decline. Perhaps never before in human history has the spreading of hatred as a matter of doctrine, as a matter of principle been so shameless, so brazen and so rampant as it is today. The dignity of individual life is reduced to naught."

"The world is in dire need of a religious renaissance. It is heartening to see that predominant in the foreground of the battle for human rights are the representatives of all religions. In those countries where the tongue of man is gagged, it is the voice of the clergy that is heard in protest against the pagan philosophy of naziism, fascism and communism.

D. C. Slayer Loses Second Appeal And Faces Chair

Will Kinard, 36, colored, today appeared doomed to the electric chair following yesterday's refusal by the United States Court of Appeals to reverse for the second time his conviction of the murder of his wife.

The appeals court overruled Kinard's first conviction on the grounds that the trial judge failed to give proper instructions to the jury. The defendant was retried and reconvicted. He appealed again only to have Associate Justice Justin Miller rule yesterday that he had a fair and impartial trial the second time.

Kinard was convicted of slaying his wife, Laura, in November, 1936, in front of their two children, at 217 Third street southwest. The children testified for the Government. Kinard is scheduled to be executed December 16.

Huge British Seaplane Crashes in Iraq; 1 Dead

London, Nov. 28 (AP).—Imperial Airways today announced the $200,000 flying boat Calpurnia had been found wrecked on Lake Ramadi, Iraq, with one of the crew dead, three missing and two injured.

The Calpurnia left Southampton November 25 with mail and cargo for India. After hopping from Tiberius, on the Sea of Galilee, yesterday, the plane was last reported at 6:32 p. m. Sunday nearing Lake Habbaniyah.

Storekeeper Beaten; 5 Colored Boys Sought

After he recovered, the man, Angelo Trois, 67, 3220 Georgia avenue northwest, told police the youths, each carrying a shoe shining box, entered his store and attempted to steal several articles. When he objected they beat him and fled.

Man Escapes Injury In 65-Foot Fall into Lake

Oakland, Md., Nov. 28 (AP).—Walter Bell, 27, engaged with other painters in work on the Deep creek bridge, 10 miles north of Oakland, fell 65 feet into the lake but escaped injury. He struck the water feet first and fellow workmen dropped block and tackle lines to him, hauling him to safety.

Mexico Expropriates U. S. Citizen's Land

Mexico City, Nov. 28 (AP).—The government today announced expropriation of 220 acres belonging to Juan Rule, United States citizen long resident in Mexico. The land was part of Rule's ranch at Santiago Tezontlale, in the State of Hidalgo.

Rumania Hails Carol at Tour's End

Bucharest, Nov. 28 (AP).—King Carol was acclaimed today as a successful promoter of international friendship as he and Crown Prince Mihai returned from a 15-day visit to England, France, Belgium and Germany. Bucharest declared a holiday to welcome the King and prince.

The King arranged a conference with the premier, Patriarch Miron Cristea, to discuss results of his travel. These were expected to include stimulated trade with France and England and first-hand impressions of what may be in store for Rumania in face of expanding German influence in southeast Europe.

Highway Safety Sessions to Open

The fast-growing mass of scientific data on highway safety and engineering will be reviewed today by committees of the Highway Research Board of the National Research Council in preparation for presentation of formal reports at public sessions beginning tomorrow.

The board's annual meeting began yesterday with consideration of soil mechanics and stabilization, the problem of preparing safe foundations for modern highways.

Plane Leaves Berlin On 9,300-Mile, 3-Stop Trip to Japan

Berlin, Nov. 28 (AP).—A fast four-motored Focke-Wulf Condor plane took off today for Tokyo with a crew of five and one passenger, to show the Orient, especially Japan, Germany's latest achievements in airplane building.

With only three stops scheduled en route—at Baska, Iraq; Karachi, India, and Hanoi, French Indo-China—it was expected the entire distance of 9,300 miles would be covered in from 50 to 55 hours.

Lufthansan officials, however, declared that no record would be sought. They said the flight was intended to return the visit of Japan's "Divine Wind," which flew here in April, 1937.

Boy, 10, Badly Hurt By Fall Under Auto

William Myers, 10, Hyattsville, Md., was seriously injured when he fell under the wheels of a car driven by Wilbur Pesire, 1600 block of E street northeast, as the latter was backing into a driveway.

The boy was taken to Sibley Hospital where he was believed to have suffered internal injuries. The driver was not held.
